A

DICTIONARY

OF

KASHMIRI PROVERBS & SAYINGS

Explained and Illustrated from the rich and interesting Folklore of the Valley.

BY THE

REV. J. HINTON KNOWLES, F.R.G.S., M.R.A.S., &C., (C. M. S.)
MISSIONARY TO THE KASHMIRIS.

A wise man will endeavour "to understand a proverb and the interpretation."—Prov. 1. 26. 5.

BOMBAY:
Education Society’s Press.
CALCUTTA:—Thacker, Spink & Co.
LONDON:—Trübner & Co.

1885.
[All rights reserved.]
Chhánah kíj.
The carpenter’s wooden nail.

A carpenter was once in very straitened circumstances and obliged to sell his little house. After he had disposed of it, and although the buyer was living in it, the carpenter went every evening when his work was over, and hanged his wrap upon a wooden peg which was fixed over the front door. He did this for ten days, when the owner of the house complained, saying that the house was his.

The carpenter replied: “Yes, the house is yours, but not this wooden nail.” Accordingly the owner had to settle the matter by giving a few more rupias to the man.

Carpenters are constantly omitting a nail here or some other work there, in order that they may be recalled, and be able to make a two or three days more job of it. When the master detects some fault in the work and sends again for the carpenter, he invariably says to the man, “Look here; what is this? ‘Chhánah kíj,’ you rascal.”

Chhánah thuk chhuk nah bastih rozán.
The sound of the carpenter does not remain secret.

Truth will out.

Chhánah thukas chhái ras taipér.
Soup is ready at the sound of the carpenter.

Honoured men get well treated wherever they go.

A good carpenter is much flattered and pampered by the people in whose employ he is working—of course with a special reason.

Chhánas tah bázigaras tah shahsawónas chhái andaí amr.
A carpenter, tumbler, and horse-breaker (these three) only live out half their days.

Chhánás yëlík pímin pínas pëikh yëkílík karih lëgán wostah-këldáh naí.
When the carpenter has to do anything for himself, he uses a cabbage-stalk instead of a large beam (i.e., he does work at the smallest expense possible).

Chhér yit butah tah dëv yit katham.
When it boils dinner is ready, and when opportunity offers speak and act.

A word or work in season.

Chhëli chhëli zan zëlan.
He washes the wood before he burns it (because it may be unclean).

A particularly scrupulous conscience.
Chhōni mu! chhōh wazōn.
Empty vessels sound.
Hindustāni—Adhjat gurāt chhalkal jāc.

Chhētin paśin mārōn gatai Gwāsh Shodah patnī lārōn chhūn.
Gwāsh Shodah runs after the man who walks (in a pompous fashion) throwing his clothes from side to side.

It is related that a certain man borrowed five rupees from Gwāsh and went and bought clothes with the money. No sooner were the clothes made, and the man was walking with great display in the bāzār, then Gwash came running after him asking him to pay his debts.

Shodah is a lazy, smoking drunken fellow.

Chōn muṇgah trek son sun ak.
Your twelve pounds of muṅg is only one of my meals. (My expenses—my family, are so great).

Your gift was but as a drop in the ocean.

Muṅg is a vetch or kind of kidney bean.

Chānkaras chānkar tah pāntsōkinē vankar.
Servant to a man of humble situation and servant to a small-eyed man.

Amongst other cases quoted, when one servant passes on to another and lower servant the master's order to him. The lower servants in an establishment are "feather out of their lives" sometimes.
Dab chhuó bab?
Is falling-down a father?
Why should I trouble about that fellow?

Dab lng tak rabih péth, dil lng tak halih péth!
Tumbled into the mud, the heart set upon water-weeds!
A man "smitten" by an ugly, ill-shaped woman.

Dachh ai khézih tak āpaimén, kachh ai khézih lab zuyr.
If a man will eat grapes, then let him eat āpaimán kind, and if he will eat grass then let him eat zuyr.

Āpaimán.—There are at least six varieties of grape growing in Kashmir, among which āpaimán is said to be the best.
Zuyr is a kind of caraway-seed.

Dachh bámaun khéyi zik puradér, wéh hú dyp panañérr.
Who ate your grapes? Strangers. O! I thought your relations (would have had some of them).
He that neglects his own is worse than an infidel.

Dachhun athah chhh chhalón khwaris, tak khwarur athah chhh chhalón dachhiniis.
The right hand washes the left, and the left hand washes the right.
"If the plowman did not plow, The poet could not write"

Dab báts kahi zéts.
Ten wives but eleven dispositions.
"As many tastes as heads, and as different."—"Oráculo Mánada" Balthazar Gracian.

Dab chhánas: dah wondas; dah sháadas.
Ten in the pocket; ten in the heart; ten in the pillow.
No finding out what the man's opinions really are.

Dab gáz hyur kyah tak dah gáz hon kyah?
What is the difference whether it is ten yards up or ten yards down?
A regular ninny-noddy.
Once upon a time a man fell into a well. As luck would have it there was another man passing by that very moment with some ropes in his hand. Of course he threw one end of the rope to the man, who had fallen into the well, and told him to fasten it round his loins, which the man did; and so was pulled up and saved.

On another occasion this man, who had saved the other from drowning, was passing by a high tree, when somebody shouted to him from the topmost branches, that he was fixed up there and could not possibly descend; whereupon, having the same coil of rope hanging upon his arm, he said, "Don't fear, wait a moment. Here—catch hold of the rope," and he threw one end of the rope up to the man. The man caught it, and no sooner had he done so, than he was jerked most violently from the branch and pulled to the ground, dozens of yards below. Of course he died instantaneously; and when the passers-by gathered round the corpse and enquired whether the man, who had done this deed, was mad or a murderer, he replied: "I have pulled a man up out of a well and now I have pulled a man down from a tree. What is the difference whether it is ten yards up or ten yards down as long as you save the man."

Dah thwróngi dit tah pthkumui.

Ten dancings-round and yet behind.

Vain struggling against misfortune.

There is a children's game in Kashmir called Tsluml. One boy holds a piece of rope in his hand, and the other end of the rope is fastened by a stake into the ground. The other boys go around him and beat him, when they can, with sticks. Should this boy touch one of the other boys without letting go the rope, that other boy has to catch hold of the rope and take his chance. And so the play continues.

Dahan duk munũi guššun nah tah kunis munũi posšíh nah.

Ten manuts are not required for ten men, but one manũ is not sufficient for a single man.

One or two more in a big family does not make any difference in the expenses.

Manũ is a weight equal to three pounds.

Dahan thawũn sai tah akis nah ñgmũn wai.

He gives promise to ten, but does not give food to one.

Dahi wakari Dashahãr.

Dashahãr after ten years.

Long enough about it.

Dashahãr or Dasahãr or Dasbãri, is the tenth of Jaith shukl pakeh, which is the anniversary of Gangã's birthday. On this day, also, Rãma marched against Rãvana, for which reason it is, also, called Vijñã Dasami.

II. The Maharãjãh of Kashmir, like other Hindãús rãjahs, celebrates this day with great pomp and rejoicing. Three immense cardboard figures stuffed with gunpowder are made to represent Rāvana, Kumbhakarna and Mīguṇād, and these are placed at the proper time in the centre of a large open space without the city. To represent Rāma, Sītā and Lakṣmaṇa, three little boys are splendidly dressed and carried in a beautiful palanquin to the same place. Crowds of people gather there, and His Highness sends all the troops with the guns, &c. It is a most exciting occasion. Excitement is at the fullest pitch, when at a given signal one of the little boys, who is supposed to be Rāma, steps forth from the palanquin, attended by the two other little boys, and fires a small arrow at the big figure representing Rāvana, while the other boys discharge their arrows against the other two figures. Of course at this moment the three monsters, Rāvana, Kumbhakarna, and Mīguṇād explode with a tremendous noise; and then the guns rattle and the cannon roar, and the people shout until they are hoarse, and eventually retire. Cf. the Rāmāyana for an account of Rāma and his adventures.

Dai ai diiyih tah barah nyísai; Dai vai diiyih tah krúhah sásah lýáticas kyah?

If God intends to give, He will give at the door; but if God will not give, then what is the good of going a thousand kos (i.e., about 2,000 English miles) for it.

Four men, ambitious to become rich, determined to leave Kashmir for some other country, where they could obtain greater wealth than it was possible for them to amass in "the Happy Valley." They arranged a certain day and started altogether, taking with them four thousand rupees for the purpose of trading. Each of the little company had an equal share in this sum of money, and they set forth full of hope that they would prosper and become exceedingly rich.

On the way it came to pass that God, according to His mighty power and wisdom, caused a full-grown golden tree to spring up suddenly, and to bring forth at once rich clusters of gold. Seeing this magnificent tree, the four travellers were so surprised that they hardly knew what to say or to do. However, they soon changed their minds about travelling into a foreign country, and resolved to return back to their homes, carrying with them the tree of gold. They were reminded of their own Kashmiri proverb, "Dai ai diiyih tah barah nyísai; Dai vai diiyih tah krúhah sásah lýáticas kyah?" which being interpreted is, "If God intends to give, He will give at the door; but if God will not give, then what is the good of going two thousand miles for it?" and therefore they said to one another "we have happed upon this golden tree and must take it home with us and be glad for ever."

In this proposition they all agreed; but how could they so arrange it? The tree was high and large; it must be felled and cut up into bundles, which they could carry. Accordingly it was determined that two of the party should go to the nearest village and procure axes and saws, while the other two would remain to guard the precious treasure.

Presently the two selected started for the tools. The other two, who were left to watch the tree, then began to take counsel together as to how they might kill their partners. “We will mix poison with their bread,” said one, “and then when they eat thereof they will die, and we each shall have a double share of the treasure.” And they did so.

However, the other two, who were going for the tools, had also plotted together by the way as to how they might get rid of the two partners left behind by the tree. “We will slay them with one stroke of the axe,” said one, “and thus shall we each have a double share in the treasure.”

In the course of a few hours they returned from the village with the saws and axes; and immediately, on arriving at the tree, they slew both of their partners; each slew one with a single blow from the axe. They then commenced to hew down the tree, and this done they soon cut up the branches and fastened them into bundles for carrying away; and then thoroughly wearied with excitement and their great exertions they laid down to eat and to sleep. Alas! they ate of the poisoned bread, and slept a sleep, the fatal sleep, from which they never woke again.

A short time afterwards some other travellers passing by that way found the four corpses, lying stretched out stiff and cold beneath the golden tree. Cf. “The Orientalist,” Vol. I., Pts. II. and VII., pp. 47, 165, where incidents in the Arabic account of the Virgin Mary and Jesus, and in the Vedabba Jātaka of the Buddhist Tripitakas, are described, which bear a striking resemblance to this story.

Daman bastih dito dil, damanas yitah damn khûr.
Shistaras sun gatsi hûsil; wûni chhai sul tak tsûndun yûr.
Sudaras no labi sâhil, nah lai sun tah nañ tat lûr.
Par kar paidah parwëz tul; wûni chhai sul tak tsûndun yûr.
Gâšlo hêk tak kadam tul hushyûr roq trûv pîyûlil.
Trûwak nai tak chhuk jêhil; wûni chhai sul tak tsûndun yûr.

Give the heart to the bellows, like as the blacksmith gives breath to the bellows,
And your iron will become gold. Now it is early morning, seek out your friend (i.e., God).

The sea has not a shore, neither is there a bridge over it, nor any other means of crossing.
Make to yourself wings and fly. Now it is early morning, seek out your friend.
O negligent man, put on power, be on the alert, take care, and leave off wickedness.
If you will not then you are a fool. Now while it is early morning seek out your friend.

A few lines from Lal Dēd constantly quoted by the Kashmīri.

Dām bīh— the work of a chaprāsī, a bad lot, as he generally makes his money by oppression, lying, and cheating.

Damas swūt chhuī namaskār.

“Good day” to the rich or honourable man.

Dambīh ai zēn kore taẖ dāurīh ai bowan hachai.

If from the womb a daughter should be born, and if from the fields but an indifferent harvest should be gathered (still he is happy). For a little is better than nothing.

Dami dīthum nad pakawunī, dami dīthum sum nah taẖ tār.

Dami dīthum thar phollawunī, dami dyūthum gul nah taẖ khār.

Dami dīthum pūnīshan Pāṇḍavān hanz māī dami dīthum krajū mūs.

One moment I saw a little stream flowing, another moment I saw neither a bridge, nor any other means of crossing.

At one time I saw a bush blooming, at another time I saw neither a flower nor a thorn.

At one moment I saw the mother of the five Pāṇḍavas, at another moment I saw a potter’s wife’s aunt.

“Nothing in this world can last.”

Quotations from Lal Dēd’s sayings, the whole of which will probably soon be in print.

The history of the Pāṇḍavas, and how their mother was reduced by misfortune to profess herself a potter’s wife’s aunt, are fully explained in the Mahābhārata.

Dāin diwān tah prut harūn.

The generous person gives and the miser is sorrowful.

Dānā dushman chhui niḍān metharaḥ sandih khutah jān.

A wise enemy is better than an unwise friend.

Persian.—Dushman i dīmā ki pay e jān haurā bhiṭtar az ān dost ki niḍān haurā.

The story is, that there was a prince, who had two ministers, one a friend and the other an enemy. The friend happened to be most weak and stupid, while the enemy was a very cute and wise fellow. One day his friend thought within himself “I will kill the prince and become a great king.” Accordingly he ordered some men to dig a ditch and to cover over the top of it with grass. They did so. Then the stupid minister one day asked the king to go for a walk with him; and passing by the way of the ditch he pushed him into it, and ordered the attendants to cover him over with earth. But the other minister was at hand, and the king saw him, and cried unto him, “O minister, let me not die. The country will be ruined.” The wise minister knowing that such would be the case, revoked the order of the other minister, and had the king pulled out. On the following day the stupid friend was executed, and the wise enemy was promoted to very great honour. (This story is evidently taken from the Makhtzan i Asrār, a Persian work).

Dānah-mirān kari jānah-mir barbād.
The big fire-place destroyed the great man.

There was a Pandit of the name of Nand Rām, and belonging to the Tikū sect. He was indebted to the Pathân, Ázād Khân’s government to the extent of five lakhs of rupees. The government wanted this money, but Nand Rām could not pay it, and 80 soldiers were stationed around his house, and the order was given for his eyes to be taken out. When the man arrived to execute this cruel order, Nand Rām begged that he would wait, and said, “There is money under the big fire-place. Now Nand Rām’s custom had been to feed two hundred people every day—the poor, the sick and the distressed, who thronged his house.

The soldiers according to directions well searched beneath the fire-place, but found nothing. They told the matter to Ázād Khân, who sent for Nand Rām and enquired what he meant. He answered “My big fire-place has ruined me. In it has been absorbed all my wealth.” Ázād Khân then repeated the order for his eyes to be taken out. (Ázād Khân, 1783, A.D., is the tyrant of whom it was said that he killed men as though they were birds.)

Danah sumbrun chhuh kani der sīrun; danah sumbrun chhuh rīzah sund mīl;
Danah dū darmas 7i chhuh lūrun Sāhib gūrun din kiho rīt.

Gathering money is like gathering a heap of stones, gathering money is as the king’s property; (i.e., is appropriated by the state after death).

Giving money in alms, you keep it. Remember God day and night.

“There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty.”—Prov. xi. 24.

Dandah khokhur hammām gaje; dand trōvit lubar paje.
O toothless man (your mouth is like) a hammām’s fire-place;
go and put your teeth at the bottom of a cow-dung basket.

Hindū adults sometimes, but nearly always the children, when a tooth has been extracted, place it at the bottom of a basket of cow-dung, or else throw it into a rat-hole, saying, "Gagari bu gagaro chon dand nēk tah myon dand tsēk, which means:—

"Rat, O brother Rat, you take my tooth and give me yours."

Muhammadans keep their teeth in a little box, which is buried with them when they die.

"Dāndā phukān kiho, zih chhuk zih madhū chhum."
"Chhor kiho zih chhui, zih darhū chhum."
"O bull, why are you bellowing?" "I am proud."
"O bull, why have you diarrhoea?" "I am afraid."

A coward.

Dāndus chhui hēng gōbaŋ?
Are the horns too heavy for the bullock? (No).
No matter how large the family the father would not willingly part with one of his children.

Dāndus bō tah watshis gūl.
A good handful of grass for the bullock, but six handfuls for the calf.

Injustice.

Dāndan khējih patuj, panuni khēyən mandoj.
The ox who ate the matting ate his rump (i.e., he got whacked for it).

Consequence of evil deeds.

Dāndun mugej tah dāpul "Asōn cchuh."
A man with projecting incisors was about to die, and the people said "He is laughing."

Dāndih sust wāyān dohalih.
Dāndih rust wāyān rētalih.
The owner of an ox ploughs in the day.
The man who hasn’t an ox ploughs at night (i.e., he plans things in his bed, but forgets them with the morning light).

Dangî sūk.
A tiger in the stable.
A tyrant in his house.

Dapahas ai ūbas gaṭshun gaṭshih khuskhus.
Dapahas ai khuskhus gaṭshun gaṭshih ūbas.
If I tell him to go to the water he will go to the land.
If I tell him to go to the land he will go to the water.
A good-natured fellow, but who invariably misunderstands anything and executes it accordingly.
Dopayai húr, kih nhah pari ráhat-i-jún chhahamai kângri.
O kângri, what shall I call thee, a celestial virgin or a fairy!
You are the balm of my life.
Persian.—Aî kângri, ai kângri, qurbánt tu húr o pari, harchand wasaf mhihaam huz wasaf azun bálú tarí. Tu az pari núzuk tarí o, az bary i gul ra'ná tarí. Haqqá ajú èb dil bért.

Dár yélik dudarek yár gatshih pánas, mitsiwis búnas mitsih tál jál.

When the body (lit. wood) becomes old (lit. dry and rotten) the spirit (lit. friend) goes his own way. The place of this earthen pot is under the earth.

Daram Dásini kotré.
Daram Dás’s chamber.

A small room.
Daram Dás was a very celebrated character among Kashmiri Jogís. He lived in Srinagar near to the entrance of the Lake, and died in 1877 A.D. He built several small houses, the biggest of which was sufficient for only two persons.

Darbár garih ai til melikh tak halam gatshih délun.
If from the master’s house some oil be given, then one must hold up the skirt, wherein to take it.

Although the present may be a mean present, and of as much benefit to the recipient as oil in a cloth, which all runs out and is spoilt, yet it is the duty of the servant to take it humbly and readily. Kashmiri beggars receive alms in this way.

Darlı chhêh gãrd.
Love is as dust (i.e., must show itself).

Darñawîk malkh ganzraní.
To count the waves of the river.

An impossible task.
Persian.—Manj i daryá shumardan.
'Alî Mardán Khán (cir. 1650 A.D.) was a governor under the Emperor of Kashmir Sháh Jhán. He had two especial servants, one a Muhammedan and the other a Hindú. The Muhammedan worked all the day, but the Pandit, who worked only for one hour, received more salary than the Muhammedan. The latter petitioned the king, that he would at least give him an equal salary. The king promised that he would do so if the Muhammedan would go and count the waves of the river and tell him how many they were. The Muhammedan went away at once, but soon found that he could not oblige the king. On his return, when the king asked him how many waves there were, he replied, "I have forgotten." Then the king ordered the Pandit to go and count the waves. The Pandit consent on the condition that the king would allow him two thousand rupees and one hundred soldiers for this purpose. The king gave him what he asked for, and away went the Pandit to his task. At every turn or passage of the river he placed four soldiers and a toll house, and ordered them to take four rupees from each boat which went up or down. The excuse to the boatmen, when they demurred, was that they had hindered the Pandit in counting the waves of the river, and therefore they were thus fined. In this way he obtained a lakh of rupees, and then went to the king. In reply to the king’s question how many waves there were, the Pandit threw down the bags of rupees at the ruler’s feet, saying “One lakh, your Majesty.”

This Pandit was promoted to a very high post, whilst the Muhammadan was debased.

The natives say that ’Ali Mardan Khán introduced custom-houses into Kashmir at this Pandit’s advice.

Dashtam, dashtam chhuh nah bakur; daram, daram chhuh bakur.
What I had, what I had, is not wanted; but what I have, what I have, is necessary.
Quoted to the man who is constantly speaking of his great relations, or previous wealthier state.

Dastur chhih gundan izzatah khutirah wushnerah khutirah nah.
Men bind on their turbans for honour’s sake, not for warmth.

Dastarah badalah chhas kulas pehk raz.
In place of a turban rope is on his head.
A disreputable person.

Dastaran chhuh nah mul, darbaran chhuh.
No worth is attached to turbans, but to professions.
Not what a man seems, but what he is.

Dastoras dafi tak mulas tirat chhuh mulis tah mojih pehk maranikh wizih jin.
To dash one’s turban upon the ground, and to tear one’s cloak into two pieces at the time of a father’s or mother’s death is good.
This is principally a Hindú custom. They remain thus with uncovered head and torn cloak for ten days after their parent’s death; and if they are rich they then give the turban and cloak away, but if they are poor they keep them.
Daulat jama karwii chhai zallat. Hûr hûn sîr nah hánsih hanz.

Amassing riches is destruction. A piebald dog is not faithful to any one.

The Kashmiri calls many things hûr hûn, but especially these three, viz., the world, health, and money.

A certain wealthy merchant, famed for his goodness and almsgiving, died, and his immense wealth was distributed among all his sons, except the eldest, who did not get a cowrie of it. There was great lamentation in the city, and especially among the poor and sick people when they heard of this good man’s death. What were they to do? To whom should they go now? “Perhaps,” said some, “the sons will continue their deceased father’s liberality, that their name may live and be great in the land.” So crowds of the poor and distressed wended their way to the sons’ houses. The sons, however, who had come into their father’s property were not good men, but selfish and hard-hearted; and so when they saw the crowds of beggars entering their compound, they at once gave orders that they should be turned out and told not to come again, but to go to the eldest son’s quarters, as he was more interested in their cases than they were. Therefore they went to the house of the eldest son, who, following the example of his father, did what he could for the relief of their necessities.

Now it happened that one day some holy men visited this eldest son and asked for alms. They came at a bad time, when he had only two leaves within the vessel. However, he told them to wait, while he took these two leaves and sold them in the bazaar. The few paisáis, which he received for them, he gave to the holy men. When he gave the money to them, they knowing that it was the price of the two leaves, enquired why he, the son of such a wealthy and good man, was in such reduced circumstances. He told them that his brothers had appropriated all the money, and that he did not care sufficiently for it to go to law concerning his portion. The holy men were very pleased, and much desired to compensate this unearthly-minded son. Accordingly they told him to prepare one of the rooms in his house and sleep in it; and it would come to pass that one night a woman, Daulat by name, would enter his house; and when he heard the sound of her footsteps ascending the stairs he was to open the door of his room, let her come in, and then chain the door; and on her asking to be let out again, he was to say to her: “Daulat jama karwii chhai zallat. Hûr hûn sîr nah hánsih hanz,” which means, “I have not got any money. I think it a sin to amass wealth; and so you will not be faithful to me.” “But,” continued the holy men, “she will promise never to go away; and then you can open the door.” Saying this, they blessed him and left.

According to the instructions of his saintly visitors, the eldest son thoroughly cleaned one of his rooms and arranged it as if for a wedding-chamber, and at night laid down in it to rest. He had not been asleep for more than two hours, when he was awakened by a creaking on the stairs. It was the woman coming up. So he opened the door to let her enter. No sooner had he opened the door then a little flame came floating along in the air until it settled upon his forehead, but he did not feel the heat of the flame, nor did it leave any mark behind. In a minute or two he returned to the room, but not seeing the woman who talked with him (for she had been turned into the little flame) he lay down again upon his bed and slept.

On rising in the morning he heard that the king had ordered his troops to march to a distant country against another king who had unlawfully seized some certain lands and villages; and the king paid the soldiers their wages beforehand in gold mohurs. The soldiers, however, did not like this arrangement, they were afraid that they would lose them either through thievery, or in some other manner; and so they returned them to the king with the request that he would send them to the late rich merchant's sons and get them exchanged for paper money, which they might cash at the merchants in the country whither they were going. The king complied with their request and sent the gold mohurs to the late merchant's sons, but they replied that they were not able to fulfill the king's wishes, as they had no transactions with the merchants of that country; and, moreover, they were not known by them, and so their letters would not be respected.

In the midst of this difficulty the eldest son of the late merchant came to the king, and said that he would arrange for the payment of the troops if His Majesty would trust him. The king said, "Yes, you are a good man; I will send you the money."

When the eldest son got the money he put it into a big earthen vessel, and in the midst of the gold he put a letter for one of the merchants of that country whither the soldiers were going, asking him please to distribute the money amongst them according to the orders of the king. He then closed up the mouth of the vessel with a piece of ordinary oil skin, and gave it to one of the soldiers, stating to give it to a certain merchant on arrival at the journey's end; "I should be so thankful," he said, "if you would please take this jar of pickles. My friend will be so glad to get them." The soldier readily promised to take the greatest care of the jar, indeed many offered to take it, so grateful were they one and all for this man's convenient arrangement concerning the money. On arriving in that country the pot was handed over to the merchant named, who at once opened it and read the letter. The next day the gold mohurs were paid to the troops, who were astonished at the shrewdness of the late merchant's eldest son. Readily they each one set apart some of the money as a present for their benefactor, while the king made him his private secretary and banker. Eventually he became as wealthy and as great as his late father; and in the time of his greatness he did not forget the sick and the poor.
Dayih sund pāwur, yēmi yēthīk āwur.
Wheresoever, whosoever has taken possession, that is the place of the Deity.
A man’s house and lands are sacred; no person can take them from him.
Da, the Deity, destiny (Sanskrit).

Dawādāras borah zāyih; muddawādāras bāgānī ìyih.
An only daughter was born to the plaintiff; she came in marriage to the defendant.
Quoted when an unlikely event happens.

Dazah-wwunih nūrah gajih ai dizēn dōrit tatih tih yijih nah put phīrit.
If he is cast into the burning fire-place, he will not return thence (before fulfilling his work).
A good, sharp servant.

Dazanas dōd.
There is pain from a burn.
To lose anything is not pleasant.

Dazihmatshīh wālinjih zulabhuk.
Clawing the burnt liver.
Unguis in uceere.

Dēdī kawah ditshhas nēdīnās?
Tawah khitab dizīham wēzah-gōnas.
Anīham dagah dagah khēmahah pēnas;
Dulagāni dimaah manz maitūnās.
O mother, why did you marry me to a foolish man?
Better that you had given me to a prostitute’s cook.
He would have brought me scraps of dinner in his wrap and I would have eaten them;
And I would have lollled the whole day upon the grass.

Dēdī talai charas dazōn.
At the king’s porch charas burns.
Cheeky without shame, and before his master!
Charas is the exudation of the flowers of hemp collected with the dew and prepared for use as an intoxicating drug.

Deg chhēh teg.
The pot is a sword (i.e., makes ravage with one’s income).
Döhl ká bándhí múnó chakhnú pot bhlót.
The Delhi swell has got a jolly face, but his stomach is empty.
A Delhi Pandit determined to pay Kashmir a visit. When he reached Verhág he engaged a man as cook, with whom he had the following conversation:—
Pandit.—"Cook."
Cook.—"Yes."
Pandit.—"Bring about three-quarters of a pound of flour from the market, and make thirty-three leaves. Ten guests will be present at dinner this evening. So that there will then be two leaves for each guest, and something for each to take home with him, if he should wish to do so."
Cook.—"I do not understand you."
Pandit.—"Never mind. Do as I tell you. The first day, when we entertain strangers, we do so."
The cook brought a vessel full of a water and placed it in front of the Pandit.
Pandit.—"Where is the food?"
Cook.—"It is the custom in this country not to give any food to the stranger on the first day—only a vessel full of water."
Pandit.—"No! I am sure you must be mistaken.
Cook.—"I also think that it cannot be the custom in your country to feed ten men with three-quarters of a pound of flour."
(The Pandit in a rage. Exit. Cook.)

Dœminen kóyng.
Saffron with sheep's paunch.
Not worth the candle.
Saffron is used as a condiment, and is eaten only with the best meat.

Dëwás tah dráháyàkas dizíh tìl tah tahór, ádmí sàuíh tâl-nazarìk nh kënh.
Oil and rice can be given to (appease the anger of) the ghosts and demons, but nothing can save us from the evil-eye of man.

Dyëamih diwai Ñàdíyàmik pëñìh lëwai.
The great melá is at Digám, but the washing of the mound is at Nadigám.
Digám is a village near to Shupiyon. There is a great melá there in the month of July; and people, whose little children have died during the year, go to the place and offer clothes and food in the names of their deceased children.
On the same day there are festivals also at Maigám and Trigám, which are a great distance from one another, and both of them very far from Digám. It is written that "He who visits each of these places in one day, shall ascend to eternal bliss." One man did so, riding upon a swift horse, and afterwards man, horse, and everything went up into the clouds out of sight. Another man by the name of Krishma Saraf also succeeded in visiting these three villages in one day; but for some reason or other he was not taken up.

Diyik púuktshu tak dungik húr.
A small peac for a peck and a cowrie for a blow.
The over-liberal person.

Dik thap tak nik dastár.
Seize him and take his pagrí.
A respectable vagrant, who lives by "sponging" on others.

Dik vá tah manati dabl khet?
You will not give? (of course you will); but it will be after much wrangling and quarrelling.
Threatening "distress for rent."
Manati dabl, lit., a strike of a stone, but here it means going to law, or giving a man a good thrashing.

Dik vá tah puizár khet?
You will give I know, but you will eat your shoes (first).
"Putting on the screw" to get a debt.
"Eating shoes" is an expression for being beaten with a shoe.

Dil ba dil goo áinah; yut wuchham, tyut wuchhai.
Your heart and mine are like a looking-glass; as you see me, so I shall appear to you.
Be friendly and I will be friendly, and vice versa.

Dilah nah tah kilah di dí.
Not willingly but with a little shoving and pushing.

Dilas phulai gatshih ásumi, gulich phulai kyah yigik bakúr?
There must be blossoming of the heart, and then the flower-blossom will not be needed. Cf. "Ásas gatsi," &c.

Dilikis bógas dár kár gósil.
Adal dëwah phuli yëmbhurKal bóg
Marit manganai murih hanz hósil.
Maut chhui patah palah tahtil-dár.
Keep away dirt from the garden of your heart.
Then perhaps the Narcissus garden will blossom.
After death you will be asked for the results of your life
Death is after you like a tahsildar.
A saying of Lal Déd's.

Diluk khur-khurah mēh, Mūlīh, hūstam, manake kotar mare,
Narih losam lukah houzai larih lūdān.
Yēlih pānah mīyūn ḫadīt ninanai ḫane gare.
Patah patah nērī lukah sāsā narih ḫālāwān.
Trīvīt yinai manz maidānīs sōvit dachhane lare.
Make far from me proudness of heart, O Father,—from the pigeon-hole of my heart.
My arm is wearied from making people's houses (i.e., from helping others, giving alms, &c).
When, O my body, you are turned out from your house.
Afterwards, afterwards, a thousand people will come waving their hands.
They will come and set you in a field, laying you to sleep on your right side.
A verse of Lal Déd's constantly quoted in part, or in toto, in time of trouble.
Hindus burn the bodies laying them upon the right side, with their head towards the south, because the gods and good spirits live in that direction, and Yama, the angel of death, also resides there.

Dinawīlāi dijih; dinał kyah dijih?
The generous person will give (whether he can spare or not);
the prostitute (although "flush with coin") will not give.

Dīsh dīnas tāh Shādī Ganai nah.
All the people except Shādī Ganai (her husband) will live with her.
A faithless wife, or a fruit tree, of which others pluck the fruit, while the real owner gets nothing.
Shādī Ganai was a butcher's wife, and a very wicked woman.

Dītūnū, zīh zangah phurtī?
Has it not been given to me? Yes, but after breaking my legs.
Once upon a time there was a man who was carried away by the thought that God was "The Giver," and that somehow or other He would give food to those who sat all day in the house meditating upon Him. This man sat in his house for three days without food.
He became so thin that he could scarcely walk. He then went up to the roof of his house and sat there, thinking that, probably, God meant him to live upon air. In a short time he became faint and senseless, and rolled off the roof on to the ground, and broke his legs.

The people heard of this and brought him sherbet and cooked meat. The man soon revived, and said the above words, which have passed into a proverb.

Cited when a man has obtained his living or any position with great difficulty.

_Dizih berih yētih pHERIH._
_Dizá yōrih yētih gatshikh tōrih?_
One should plant the tree at the edge of the field, where it will spring up.

Shall it be planted in the place where the fir-tree grows, where it would be checked and die?

To lend money without interest.

_Dobi sund garaH naNH iZ doH._
The washerman’s house will be known on the great feast-day.

The washerman’s family wear the clothes which are sent to them to be washed; but on the day of the feast everybody takes all their clothes, and so the poor washerman and his family are left almost naked. (This is not true of every washerman).

_Persian._—Khāna i gāzur ba roz i ‘id ma’lum shawad.

_Dobi sund HūN, nāH garaH taH nāH gāthuk._
The washerman’s dog is not of the house or of the ghāt.

Expectations unfulfilled.

The washerman’s dog fares very badly as a rule. He is always following his master to and fro from the house to the ghāt in hope of getting some scraps, but it is very seldom that anything is thrown to the poor animal.

_Hindustani._—Dhobī kī kullā na ghar kā na ghāt kī.

_Dodi giTul._
A philosopher and a half.

A wiscacre.

_Dodi nāH taH dog nāH kawah yīyam ushye?_
I have neither pain nor smart, why should I cry?

Let every man bear his own burden.

_Dog diT tih būrav; dog hat tih būrav._
Strike a man and he complains (before the magistrate), and strike him a hundred times and he complains (and no greater punishment ensues to the striker).

A variant of this both in words and meaning is:—
Dog dit tih bárav; dog hēt tih bárav.
Whether he strikes another, or whether he himself is struck,
it's all the same—he grumbles.

Doh chhuh diwán tshoh; doh chhuh khyáwán goh.
(One) day gives rest, (another) day causes to eat manure.
   It is not always sunshine.

Doholih khotsün tah rātalih mandachhān.
Fearing by day and being ashamed at night.
   An altogether wretched and bad character.

Don bítsan hunz har gayih wahrāts hund rūd.
Strife between husband and wife is like the monsoon rains.
   Although Kashmir is out of the tropics it is visited by periodical rains, which finish about the last week in July.

Don kulai batah vôwah.
The wife of two persons, because of food.
   "The fitter cry." Anything for bread.

Don salih tran wáhweldā.
Agreement with two people, lamentation with three.
   Two are company, three are not.
   A Pir once sent his horse to a certain village, that it might graze upon the beautiful grass there. He particularly told the servant to lead the animal and not to ride it. When the servant had gone some distance the Pir sent another servant to look after the first servant, and, especially, to see that he was not riding it. He went and found the man leading the horse, but being both of them tired, and the horse also tired, they rested awhile, and then set forth again, both of them riding the horse.

   The Pir was still suspicious about the horse, thinking that the two servants would perhaps agree together, and both of them mount him at the same time. So he sent a third servant to look after them. The third servant came and found them both astride the horse. "I will tell the Pir," he said, "I will explain the whole matter to him." "Don't, don't," they replied, "but you come also and ride, and we shall have a jolly time." The man consented. They all rode the horse at one time, and arrived at their destination.
   But the next morning the animal died, and great was the distress of the three servants!!

Don ungajan chhuh nerón tús.
One snaps with two fingers (not with one).
   It takes two to make a quarrel.
Doni kulis kājih-waṭ.
A pestle to the walnut-tree.
A sharp fellow in their midst, of whom they are afraid.

Dostī khutah chhēh rīstī jēn.
Truth is better than friendship.

Dostas sīzmani tah dushmanas wukarmani.
A straight open countenance to your friend; a downcast look to your enemy.
Most frequently cited by the mother, when her son wishes her "good-bye" before going to his day's work.

Doyih athah chēh tsar wuzēn.
Clapping is with both hands.
It takes two to make a quarrel.
Hindustānī.—Ek hath se bāti nahiin baṭtā.

Drāg tsiāh tah dēg tsiāh nah.
The famine will disappear, but the stains will not disappear.
- During one of the terrible famines that have now and again visited Kashmir, a brother was nearly dead from want of food, when he suddenly remembered a long-forgotten sister, and determined to go to her and see whether she could help him. On his arrival his sister happened to be making bread; but she was too sharp for him. She had seen his coming, and guessing the reason of his long-deferred visit, took up the burning hot bread and hid it under her arm. Her bosom was very much scorched by this, and she retained the marks of the burn up to the time of her death.

Kashmir has suffered very much in morals from famines. Driven to extremities the people seem to have lost all sense of self-respect. A little knowledge of the people and their language quickly convinces one too forcibly of the truth of the above words.

Drāgas zī chhai goyā kik Mūgās nārāh phāh.
Employment in time of famine is like the warmth of a fire in the month of January.

Drālāh kunar chhai byākhūi.
An agent's profession is another matter.
There's nothing that he is not up to.

Merchants keep such men by them. At the time of bargaining they come in as if unawares and try to make a bargain for the sāhib, or intending buyer, out of pure good-heartedness. The Drāl gets a commission on the sale. He is a good-for-nothing, unprincipled fellow. There are two or three kind of Drāl lūk. Those who lend out money at interest, those who hire out their daughters for evil, and the merchants' agents.
Dráti nítah.
Like a sickle to cut meat with.
A stupid workman.

Dú-zaug khasôn tsú-zangis.
A two-legged mounting a four-legged.
A man of inferior rank promoted, and “lording it” over others.

Didas kandi tsórani.
Picking thorns or bones out of the milk.
An overscrupulous Bráhman.

Ḍul chhui dazún.
The end of (your) garment is burning (with envy).
Extreme envy and jealousy.

Ḍum-dumah tāh Jumah Baṭ.
Jumah Baṭ and his drum.
A very poor man.
Jumah Baṭ was a town-crier for some time. He was a man of good family, and had seen better days.—Vide “Gołyāh druś,” Ṣfr.

Ḍumatas ruṅz.
(Like) a marble against a ḍumāṭ.
Advice to a fool.
These ḍumatas are very big conical stones (lingáms), and according to the Pándits as old as the Pándavas. They are supposed to be the petrified bodies of wicked men, whom some good people in olden times cursed, because they were troubled by them, and so they became stones.
Gulistán of Sa’dí.—Tarbiyat ná ahl rá chuin girdyón bar gumbad ast.

Dumb tāh tsap kńskiḥ mah dap.
“Stomach and bowels. Don’t tell anyone.”
When a father forbears to beat his child, and another person blames him for his leniency, he thus replies.

“DÚmbá, Jajír” “Taiyár, Sábo.”
“O dúb, Hułkka.” “Ready, Sáhib”
A sharp, willing servant.

Dúmbah shurinai khukarbáti háwán.
Showing a thing (mask, &c.,) to frighten the Dúmb’s children.
“Don’t suppose that you’re frightening me.”
The Dúmbas are a plucky lot of fellows. They carry the letters at night through the jungle and over desolate hill and plain.
Dunyá chhuh nah akí danjih rozán, páúts̠h doh sokh tuh páúts̠h doh dokh.
The world does not continue in the same state; but there are five days of happiness and five days of sorrow.

Dunyá tah dyúr.
The world and wealth (go together).

Duragí hanz Duragi lúr; yits míj tits kúr.
Durag's stick (according to her height); and as mother, so daughter.

Dúrih, dúrih chhuh manats meñhán; nakah, nakah chhuh kand tethan.
From a distance black pepper is sweet; near at hand sugar is bitter.
Distance lends enchantment to the view. Familiarity breeds contempt.

Dushmanah sandih lagih nah kanih tsanjih; dostah sandih lagih r.poshih tsanjih.
The slap of the hand from an enemy will not hurt, but the angry touch, even with a flower, from a friend, will wound.

A king sentenced a man to death by stoning. The order was that every man in the city should throw a stone at the prisoner. A friend of the man heard of the stern order, and said within himself, "What shall I do? How can I throw a stone upon my friend? I must not, and can not, hurt my dear and kind friend." Accordingly he plucked a flower, and determined to throw that when the time came, and to throw it so skilfully that the people would think that he had thrown a stone. He went to the place of execution and flung the flower at his friend, who then spoke the above proverb.

Dyarahvool chhuh nah bod; batahvool chhuh bod
Not the rich man, but the man who gives dinners, is great.

Dyutmut khairút hyutnam phirit, shukrani míjih tsul tup nirit!
What was given to me was taken away again, Shukr's mother lost a hair or two (that is all)!
G

Gabar chhi'ā hubar zih gai guris nishik tah ani?
Are children like manure, which people go and buy from the milkman?
Children are not so easily obtained, that they can be so easily spared.

Gabih butih rāmah-hūn.
A sheep in appearance, but a wolf at heart.
A wolf in sheep's clothing.

Gabih tih wutsh laṭ.
A sheep also can lift his tail.
The smallest worm will turn being trodden upon.

Gūd chhēk daryūvas andar treshih būpat marūn.
The fish dies from thirst in the river.
Every opportunity, yet he did not succeed.

Gūd yēlih chhēk khēwūn handrer, tah adah chhēk lagān buṭh.
When the fish feels the icy-cold it leaps upon the bank.
Affliction is a hard, but a good, teacher.

Gādah tasbih tah thukah tahārat.
(To carry) rosary (in one's hand) for loaves (and fishes) is as if to (perform) tahārat (with one's) spittle.
Tahārat is the Muhammadan's ablutions before prayers.

Gādah tolīt pūrsang.
Seeing whether the scales were correct, after the fish had been weighed.
Without premeditation.

Gūdav hēchhih wutih tah hūnzuv hēchhih zīl.
The fishes learnt to jump and the boatmen learnt to use the net.
An asylum for the maniac—a prison for the blackguard—a net for the fish.

Gagar-mirani gang.
The hole of Sir Rat.
"He has well feathered his nest for some time."
The rat is always laying up stores. A Pandit dug out the hole of a rat the other day and found pieces of cloth, iron, little piles of rice, apples, &c., enough for several months' provisions.
Gagarih hanz khētsarih lēj.
The mouse’s khētsarih lēj.
Khētsarih lēj is a saucepan in which spiced rice is cooked. The mouse is very fond of this rice, and as it does not remain very long when the mice are by, so money does not continue long in the hands of a man in debt.

Gagur chhuh karʿin brūris mut.
The rat nonplusses the cat.
Cited when anyone or anything small has escaped the oppression of a greater, and also caused him a little trouble.

Gagur tsāv hakarih banih. Hēl kyah tsāv zih khēt drāw?
A rat entered a stock of wood. What did he take with him going in, and what did he eat coming out? Nothing.
In statu quo.

Gagur vētsih nah pananih wįj, patah kēt møj!
The rat himself cannot get into his nest properly, and yet he takes his mother after him!
Hardly enough for one, and yet two or three people are to share in it!

Gajih sūr kudum, pajih sūr lodum tah trowum gayim treh kumih.
Lūlah wuzanowum, dudahan cho wum tah sowum, gayim sheh kumih.
I took out the ashes from the fire-place, I put them into a basket, and then threw them away. I have done three works.
I woke up the baby and gave him a little milk, and then I put him to sleep again. I have done six works.
As busy as a hen with one chicken.

Güm chhuh khām; shahr chhuh mōnindi bahar.
The village is kachcha (i.e., not the place to get anything); the city is like a river (there everything goes on swimmingly).

Gūnas garah karyū wįd?
Shall one house give answer to the whole village?
“What can I say? You are all against me.”

Gūmuk suh tah shahrul hūn chhuh barłabar.
A village tiger and a city dog are equal.
A stupid man from the city is equal to the great man of the village.
Gáni budán tah yindar katin.
When the prostitute becomes old she spins the wheel.

Gáníth kawah záníh páz sund shikál?
How can the kite know the prey of the hawk?

Gáníth kyah záníh bachah dod tah hánt áh kyah záníh putrah dod?
Does the kite know anything of the pain of his prey? Does the barren woman consider the child’s pain?

Cited by the beggar as he turns away unhelped from the rich man’s door.

Gáñth nah kunih tah gáñtah and?
No kite anywhere, but the kite’s nest ready.

Building a stable before the horse is purchased.

Gaíz tsul gúmáh tah gánz phakah nishih mukalé.
The tanner has run away from the village and the people are relieved of the tanner’s smell.

Kid of the offending party.

Gar gunóah.
The fat man of the house.

A lazy master of a house.

Gar manz Gangál.
Ganges in the house.

Hindustání.—Ahl i kismat apne ghar bairhe hi daunat yónge.
Yár ghar ú jiega to dhandhú kyun yónge.
Garú Nának to Angad.

Gar na báshad béeih andar nirah phúh, ján i shirín miráríyad khwáh ma khwáh.
If there is not the warmth of fire in one’s bosom, the precious life will certainly come out.

“Warmth of fire in one’s bosom” refers to the kángar.

Gar púth zámuthur bar púth hún.
A son-in-law who lives always in his father-in-law’s house, is like a dog at the door.

Hindús are so very fond of their children, male or female, that they cannot bear the idea of a separation, and so the sons-in-law are invited to come and dwell under the same roof. Nearly every wealthy family has its quantum of sons-in-law, who generally spend their time in eating, drinking, smoking and sleeping at the expense of their fathers-in-law. In this way they contract the most demoralizing habits, and are a scorn and reproach to all right-minded people. Such are called Gar Zámuthur. In Bengal they are called Ghar Jamā'ī.—Vide “Hindus as they are,” p. 73, f. n.

Garah gav ṭsakah-náv, dukah dukah pakanáv.
The house is like a manure-boat, (only) by constant shoving and pushing (does) it makes progress.
Ṭsakah-náv is a large barge generally stuffed full of vegetable manure gathered from the Dal lake. These boats are so loaded that only an inch or so appears above water; consequently a little stoppage might cause it to sink. They are towed and pushed along to their destination, and are at once unloaded on their arrival.

Garah kuru a nihil tah kínih, garah rov mnómínih.
A blind woman and a one-eyed woman tried to keep house together, but they disagreed and brought the place to ruin. Disagreement means ruination.

Garah wandui garah sísá garah nerahah nah zah.
O home, I offer you a thousand houses, and I will never go out from you.
No place like home.

Garazmund bhuk dewínah.
A selfish man is mad (so grasping is he, and so incessant in his solicitations).

Gári nun til.
Salt and oil in the house.
Cited against a man, who makes money on purchases for his father, but does not take up any special work for himself.

Gári gojih.
(Like) the kernel of a water-chestnut (singhárah).
A Kashmiri curse, meaning “May your eyes start out of your head through trouble and sorrow.” Also when a person is not sharp at finding any thing, another person will sometimes say, “You, gári gojih, can’t you see it?”

Gári warih dagán.
Pounding spices in the house.
A coward.
“Pounding spices in the house” here means living indoors and afraid to stir out.

Garíbas ūya ṭsūr tah mandinēn tām kurhas jashinah.
A thief entered the house of a poor man, and they feasted themselves until mid-day.
It is of no use for a poor man to complain. The police only vex him more, until he is obliged to bribe them to keep quiet.

Again these words are often quoted when more than the invited people are present at the wedding-feast. Hearing the sound of music passers-by go in, are lost in the company, and eat, drink, and steal to their hearts' content till mid-day.

Garih chhukah, kih nah yazmanah hindih?
Are you in your own house, or in your disciple's house?

Brāhmans and other holy men do not eat much in their own houses, but save the money. When they visit their disciples' houses, they eat their fill.

Cited to a child who is going beyond bounds at the dinner.

Garih diyin tah zāmin mah atsin.
Better to give something from the house than to become surety for anyone.

"He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it."—Prov. xi. 15.

Garih gțah tah mashidih tsoŋ.
Darkness in the home, but a light in the mosque.

Miserable and miserly at home, but pleasant enough and liberal abroad. A frequent answer to the Mullahs, when they become importunate in their demands for contributions towards the support of the mosques.

Garih manz chhuh garyūl; jam ganimat ast.
The bell-striker at the hour; breath is as spoil.

A man, Āzūn Khán by name, became mad from much reading, and went about the city shouting these words. He was of very good family, but turned a fakir. All his money, excepting a small portion which was given to his wife and children, was distributed amongst the poor. The wife married again, and the children were taught a trade, and are now earning a respectable livelihood.

Garih nah bazin tah naubat wazin!
No oil in the house and the band plays!

A man who is obliged to stint his stomach in order to cover his back or feed his horse, or pay his extra servants. A hard struggle to keep up appearances.

Garih tīh hūk parih tīh hūk wē-hakkah zūah garē drūk.
Vegetables in my own house and vegetables in another's house. O life, you should not have come forth from your house.

Vegetables here means trouble. Cited when one has trouble in the house and goes to another person's house and there gets more trouble.
Garih yêlih tsalih, tai Shâh sapanih râzi ; adah há mîlih chhui Tâzi Bat hân.

When a man escapes from the house, and the king is happy, then, O Father, is Tazi Bat’s arrow.

After adversity comes prosperity.

A man overtaken by misfortune ran away from his house. To support himself he hunted with his bow and arrow. The king of the country had promised that the man who could shoot an arrow through his ring at a given distance should receive a robe of honour and other rewards. The ring was hanged up in a certain place and a man always stationed by it to see fair play and report to the king. The poor man was shooting birds one day near to the place where this ring was suspended, when by the will of God the arrow was whirled by the wind straight through the ring. The man in charge immediately sent word to the Court, and the poor hunter was rewarded, and able henceforth to lay down his bow and arrow and live in ease.

Gâîah hân tah shâîr hân tah puji hân, yim trêh kûni chhîh kihîh.

The landing-place dog, the river-bed dog, and the butcher’s dog, these three dogs are alike (a wretched lot).

Gâîsh Prânîs tahîh chhui zâlâh.

Go to Pûnch and there get ague.

Pûnch is about five marches from Srinagar in a north-west direction. It is a compact town and has a good bâzâr. Râjâ Motî Singh resides there, and holds a considerable tract of country in fief under his cousin, the present Mahârájâh of Kashmir and Jammûh.

Gâv diyiîh nakh tah wutsh chêyîh nakh.

The cow will not give (milk) and the calf will not drink it.

Step-mother and step-children, who generally hate one another.

Also cited concerning an old servant and his master. Both have got to dislike one another, but each does not like to give the other “notice to leave.”

Gâwîh chhûh wonamut hatîh kûni ditum tah laîtîh kûni dimai.

The cow said, “Give to me by the throat (i.e., feed me) and I will give to you by the tail” (i.e., I will supply you with milk, ghî, and butter).

Feed a servant or an animal well and they will serve you well.

Gêr chhui ûmût.

You have got very earnest (about this work).
There was a lazy woman, who never cared to spin or to do any work. Her husband spoke to her about her laziness. She replied, "Ah! let me alone now. The time is coming, when I shall be so fond of work, that I shall get through any quantity in no time."

One day they were going to Tulamula, and as they were starting, the wife said to her husband, "I should like to do some work. Get me a spinning wheel." The husband said the above words, but he could not at that time obtain a wheel.

Gěwakah tah gyav khyom brůřih.
I would sing but the cat has eaten my ghī.
Circumstances are so that a person is afraid to speak or to act for himself.
Hindustáňi.—Kahun, má mar jāe;
Na kahun, báp báll khāe.

Gil tik chhěch dúnye kāñk̡hān.
Gil also wants some rice.
Envy.
Gil is a Muhammedan woman’s name.

Gov mór bozan sáři tah dándah mór nah bozōn kāñk̡h.
Strike a cow and everyone will exclaim, ("what a shame to strike the cow which supplies you with milk!"); but strike an ox and nobody will say a word.
The cow here represents the great man and the ox the poor man.

Gov zāv wutsh suí mēch gütsh.
The cow bore a calf, which I should have (and will have).
Where there’s a will there’s a way.

Gríst sund hakhur hyuň.
Like a farmer’s young untrained ox.
A useless fellow.

Grustu agar anliyû bāshad lāik-i-būriyû nest.
If the ploughman becomes a "lord," yet he is not then even fit to sit upon the matting.
A Persian proverb with only the first word altered. Persians say Dīkān agar, etc.

Grustú zih hustú.
The husbandman is like an elephant (i.e., a strong, big clumsy fellow).
Gudah drāv Jum Bat dum dumah hēt ; patah drāyas Roshan bēnīh poshih mālah hēt.
First came out Jum Bat, bringing a drum; afterwards came out Roshan, his sister, bearing a garland of flowers.

From horses to asses.

Jum Bat was formerly a well-to-do officer in H. H. the Mahārājāh’s Court. He became very poor and was obliged to do the mean work of a town-crier. His sister, too, equally humbled herself by going about the city selling garlands of flowers.

Gudah lorih-han tah patah lorih-han.
First (he asks for) your walking-stick and then (he wants) your pet daughter.

Hindustānī.—Ungli pākaṭe pahunchā pakhnā. Bāt deke bakrā leṇā.

Gudanich kulai chhai hī tai zii ;
Duyim kulai chhai garih garih drii ;
Trēyim kulai tsain sumah tah kadal ;
Tsurimih badal lagih nah kaih.
A first wife is as jasmine and income;
The second wife swears hourly by your name;
The third wife cuts bridges, great and small;
The fourth wife—there is no one like her for all manner of wickedness; she is a hopeless character.

“Swears hourly by your name” means she makes great profession of love for you. Kashmiris frequently swear by the person or thing they most love.

“Cuts bridges” is said of mischievous and extravagant wives, who altogether hinder their husbands from crossing over to the other side, where prosperity and peace are to be had. The reader will please remember that Kashmir is a valley full of rivers and streams.

Gudanich kulai chhai rani matsuī ;
Duyim kulai chhai totih keitsāh ;
Trēyim kulai chhai tūlih mukatsuā ;
The first wife goes mad over her husband;
The second wife—there’s something good in her;
The third wife is as an axe to the head.

Gudanuk sodā gatshih nah rāwarun.
One must not lose the first offer (lit., trade).

Kashmiri traders, like those of some European countries, are very superstitious about refusing the offer of the day’s first customer. They will frequently rather lose than allow him to depart without purchasing something.
Guh grattah-bal.
Manure by the mill-house.
Cited against a man who after promotion is reduced to his former rank.

Guh zānīh tah bīlchīh.
The dung will know and the spade (but I am not the person to have to do with, or to know anything about, such a mean affair as that).

Guhāli gupan mūn khēwān, garih gupan mūn lēwān.
Jungle cattle eat salt while the home cattle lick the wall.
Charity should begin at home.

Gur bādīh son, dūnāh khēyīh chon.
Our horse will grow big and will eat your grain.
Cited when a wife’s relations keep her rather a long time; also when a friend borrows a horse or anything, and is not particular as to when he returns it.

Gur chhūh nah khēwān pēls; yēlīk chhās buchīh lagān, tēlīk chhūh khēwān mīts.
The horse does not eat the bulrush, but at the time of hunger he will eat earth.

Gūr dapiyā, kih myon dud chhūh tsok?
Will the milkman say that his milk is sour?
Hindustānī—Apnī chāchh ko khaṭṭā koḥ nāhin kahtā.

Gur garih tah nakhsásas mul parītān.
Leaving the horse in the house and going to ask the nakhsās its price.
Wishing to sell the goods without first showing them.
Nakhsās is the officer appointed over the sale of all horses in the valley. No person can sell a horse without first arranging the price with this officer and paying him one ānā in the rupee.

Gur jōn sum jōn, yēl jōn, chūl jōn, kudam nai.
The horse is a good one; the hoofs are strong, the mane is nice, the whole appearance is beautiful; but the step is bad.
A man with one glaring fault.

Gūr kawah zānīh kur hāhorīt?
How will the milkman know how to marry his daughter? (i.e., outside his own class of people).
“Like blood, like goods, and like ages,
Make the happiest marriages.”
Gur kyah pahiḫeś sirī chhuḥ pohān.
The horse does not walk, but the secret walks.
People generally take a man for what he seems to be, and not for what he is. It is not the real man they see walking but his disguise, his secret.

“For man is practised in disguise,
He cheats the most discerning eyes.”
Gay’s Fables.

Gur zanīnah, tāh šahmsher, yim tēnawai chhiḥ be-wafū.
A horse, a wife, and a sword, these three are unfaithful.
Persian.—Asp o zam o šhamsher wafūdar na bāshad.

Guṇas gīb bali tōshīn hāṭas gīb khet roshīn.
The cow-herd’s cow, whether she gets a good meal or not, is a comfort to him; but the Pandit’s cow eats and is angry. What is the good of keeping a beast for mere show?

Guri chhuḥ dupanāt “Khasawunis khārat, wasawunis wältum.”
The horse said “I will help you to mount the ascent, but you lead me down the hill.”

Gūri gariẖ cchuẖ wutsh ṭawīn?
Does any harm happen to the calf in the milkman’s house?
A servant of a good master; a son of a good and clever father.

Gūri gariẖ watshī kur bāhiḥ wahari ḏāīn.
The calf lived after twelve years in the milkman’s house.
A little child sometimes speaks after a long silence. After many years of barrenness sometimes a woman gives birth to a child.

Gūri wohawah cchuẖ wutsh marīn?
Does the calf die by reason of the milkman’s curse?
A child’s reply to a parent’s hard threats and words.

Gurih khasit tih bēṣḥchod tah gurih wasit tih bēṣḥchod.
Whether on horseback or on foot he is a scamp.
Do what you will somebody will speak evil of you. You cannot please everyone.
The Kashmiris have a story similar to our school-book story of the “Old man and his donkey.”
A very wicked Kashmiri owned a pony. One day he was riding upon the animal, while his daughter was walking on in front. The passers-by on seeing this cried out, “What a shame! What a lazy, cruel man!” The man felt a little ashamed of his thoughtlessness, and calling his daughter took her up with him on the pony. Thus they proceeded for some distance, when other people met them and exclaimed, "Rather a big load for a small pony"; whereupon the man and his daughter both got off and led the pony along by a string for the rest of the journey.

Gurij sawāri tah khārachih atah-gat.
To the mare riding, to the foal trouble.

Going to work a man calls after his mate to come along as well. The latter replies as above, "What if the good? I should only be like the foal running after its mother."

Atah-gat corresponds to the Hindustání ána-jáná. Here it means trouble, because people run about hither and thither in time of distress.

Atah-gat is also the name of that money which the Hindú father places in the hand of his married daughter when she goes on a visit to her husband’s family. The "going and coming" pay.

Gurin vīgik vāne tah khar gai padar dārit.
The horses got shod, and the donkeys put out their hoofs (for shoeing).
Seek not what is beyond your position.

Gurin nah poshán, lēz ḵhalin chob.
The can’t manage the horses, and so he beats their manure.
Too weak to trouble the "big guns," and therefore he oppresses the poor.

Gurnut pāṁsah tah runmut myund.
Money made up (into gold, silver, and copper ornaments) is like a cooked mouthful (i.e., they are ready for sale in case of need, and until then they are useful ornaments).

Gursas māl tah tsūd ḵet potah kani.
Wishing to drink the butter-milk, but hiding the vessel behind him.
To eat little when dining out, and to refuse more, yet all the while longing to eat a big dinner.

Gyav khēwān tah gardanih kun atah lágān.
Eating ghí and then feeling his neck (to see if he was getting fat, the fool,—as if results would happen so quickly as that)
Há málíh, Há májí!
O father, O mother!
Among other occasions used on the following:—A man wants a loan, and the person whom he asks for this loan, replies: “I would lend it you willingly, but Há malih, Há májí,” when shall I get it again?

Habbah sháh tohi télíh rakh tah wuni.
O Habbah Sháh, tumour wálá, then, not now, was the time (for removing it)!
Opportunity passed.
Habbah Sháh had a very ugly tumour on his forehead which might easily have been removed at one time, but he allowed the opportunity to go by.

"Hachivis guris zachve zín. q
Tas kus khasih? Mahí-Din.
A saddle of rags for a wooden horse. Who will mount him?
Mahídín.
Let a fool have to do with foolish things.
Mahídín was a great student. Report says that he was well-up in all languages and religions; at all events, he became mad and his name a proverb. His son now wanders about the city in a mad condition, and everybody does him honour.

Hájíh Bábah machánah, kénah tsariyá?
O Hájí Babá, give me some dinner? Is it any trouble for you to eat?
This is replied sometimes, when any person wants a special favour from another person; or when a servant applies for increased wages, &c.
Machánah is a company dish consisting of rice, vegetables, raisins, colouring matter, and sugar.

Hákah tsúras galih chápát.
A cabbage to a thief is as a slap on the cheek.
Little punishment for a small theft.

Hukímas tah kákímas nishiñ rachhtam Khudáyo.
O God, deliver me from the doctor and the ruler.
Both Muhammadans and Hindús are frequently heard praying this prayer as they recur by the ghat in the morning, washing themselves.
Hakk nah pūthih tah inān!
I’ve not got my rights, and yet he gives me a reward!

When Kashmiri people give a little more than they intended, or think right, for any article, they are apt to tell the shopkeeper that the overplus is largesse. The seller would then reply as above.

Hāl gatshuni chēk pūl gatshuni.
To form habits is to make pain (e.g., a habit of drinking, smoking, gambling, and extravagant dining, &c.)

Halālas hisāb tah karīnas azāb.
A reward for things legal and punishment for things illegal.

Hālav galan nā tah dānēs dāh karīt?
The locusts will certainly decrease, but (meanwhile) they are destroying the rice.

Many die but his influence remains.

Small numbers of locusts visit Kashmir almost every year. Sometimes a great army of them invades the valley and does terrible injury to the crops.

Muhammedan eat the locust. They dry them in the sun, then grind them into powder, and afterwards make cakes of them. They are regarded as a great delicacy.

Būstān of Sādī.—Na dar koh sabzi na dar bāgh shakh;
Malak būstān khurd o marium malakh.

Hālēn būnān wukari thān; hīlēn hīhī samakhān.
Dented covers for dented saucepans; and like men for like men.

Hammān karīh rāzah tah tūwis garīb;
Bukhārī karīh garīb tah tūwis rāzah.
A wealthy man can build a bath-room and a poor man can make it hot;

A poor man can build a fire-place and a rich man can burn it.
The whole world is one great family, each member of which, however so lowly, is indispensable for the help and comfort of the other.

Hamsiyah wandiyav, garo.
O house, I will make an offering to you of my neighbour.

To try and pass one’s misfortune on to the head of another.

In time of sickness and trouble people are accustomed to make offerings unto the house. Sometimes a ram is slain, and the priests are assembled and fed, and special worship is paid to the gods. Instead of offering anything at his own expense the man in the proverb wished to offer something belonging to his neighbour.
Hani truk mana ranih, kačal truk karih nah kōnh.
A person with a little tact will cook a maund (i.e., will do something), but a dull, ignorant person will do nothing.

Hangah nah tah rangah nah zangah zichh hashye.
Dod nah tah dag nah. Kawah yiyem aushye?
I am independent of you, O long-legged mother-in-law.
There is no pain or agony to me. Why should I weep?
No love is lost between mothers-in-law and their children-in-law

Haniḥ gayih baras gūnt dit.
The barren woman fastened her door and went.
No heir to look after the property.

Haniḥ zōyāv gubar shituli pojih dāryāv āś.
A barren woman bore a son, and the small-pox swallowed him up.
A man who suffers much pain rather than give up a work, but after all dies in the midst of carrying it out.

Hinzas gubeyih lulih, ditshan dārit kulih.
It became a weight upon the boatman’s bosom, and so he threw it into the river.
Cited when a man of some family marries his son to a daughter of lower birth, or does anything else equally ignoble, because he cannot afford to do the right thing.

Hinzas gōliḥ chhuh dāryāvas andar wāw yiwān, puth namah chhuh brolōth namah karān tah brolōth namah chhuh puth namah karān.
When a storm arises on the river the boatman rushes from the fore-part to the hinder-part of the boat, and from the hinder-part to the fore-part.
A man in trouble knows not what to do.

Hapi-hāyun.
Scarcity (lit., an outcry is raised).
While these words are being written there is Hapi hāyun in the city of Srinagar concerning rice. For some reason or other rice is scarce and dear.

Hōpat ashud hyūn gomut suh chīs nỳūb.
Like the bear’s ashud that thing has become scarce.
It is said that when the bear gets this grass, he devours it most greedily, and becomes unconscious for six months afterwards.
Hūpat yāraz.
A bear’s friendship.
A stupid friend.
A bear formed friendship with a man who was passing through his jungle. For some time he brought his friend large quantities of honey. One day the man fell asleep after eating the honey. While asleep a bee attracted by the sweetness alighted upon his mouth. The friendly bear seeing this thought that he would save the man from the pain of a sting, and so he went and fetched a great piece of rock and aimed it with all his might at the place where the bee was. The stone frightened away the bee, but killed the man! Cf “Folk-tales from the Upper Punjāb,” by the Rev. C. Swynnerton, Journal Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. LII., Part 1., 1883; also the story of the calf who got its head into the pot in “Notes on some Sinhalese Proverbs and stories in the Atīta-Vākya-Dīpaniya,” by A. M. Senānāyakā; also the story given in “Dusent’s Norwegian Folklore,” where a goodly is discovered by a friend beating her husband’s head with a mallet in order to make a hole for the head in a shirt, which had been previously thrown over it; also the Makasa Jataka, where a son broke his father’s bald head to kill a mosquito, which had settled upon it.

Hūpatas ai aut āsihe tah suh kariheh nū tsučihi?
If the bear had flour would he not make bread?
Cited against a poor man with extravagant ideas.
The bear may be sometimes seen snacking his paws together as natives do when they are making chapātis.

Har kar, har kar, har wizih sur kar.
Fight by all means, but at the time of fighting be careful.

Hūr khēwān gus tah kār mārī mārī.
The starling eats dung and then shakes his head in a pleased sort of way.
A shameless man.

Har rangah musībat chhui ak diwānāgī.
Every kind of misfortune is a madness.

Hūhah tsūr.
A cowrie thief.
A mean fellow, a stint.

Harāmuk mūl harāmachik watih; nah khēyih pūnas tah nah niyih athih.
Ill-gotten wealth goes in the way of wickedness; the getter neither eats it himself, nor takes it with him.
Persian.—Mūl i harám bud bajā c harám raft.
Hardah gurus mētras, sontah gurus shētras.
Autumn butter-milk for the friend, and spring butter-milk for the enemy.
The autumn grass is much better than the spring grass; consequently the milk is better in the autumn.

Harafas gawīh tah mēndis sharīk.
A witness against (my) words but a sharer in (my) mouthful.
The man who is always “loafing” about like the mahalladār or spies, appointed over every village and district in Kashmir.

Hārīh aq wūqiḥ kunun úsiḥ tah hār nāi úsiḥ tah hērīśis kyah?
If an elephant is to be sold for a cowrie, and there is not a cowrie, what can be done?
Nothing can be done without money.

Hārīh anī bāzarah kanit tūḥ chhui syuḍ bozanah yiwān.
You think him a righteous man, but he would sell you for a cowrie in the market.

Hārīh gov nāv kyah?
What is the name to a Hār? Hār, of course.
“What’s a table? A table, you stupid!”
Hār is a black and white cow. People give a special name to every cow except this one.

Hārīh, harih samih koh.
Gradually from chippings a mountain is made.
Many a little makes a muckle.

Hārīh nāk jā; nūbud phaliṣ shāi!
No place for a cowrie, but place for sweetmeats!
““The doctor orders this and that, but how can I afford it?”

Hārīh sodā tah bāzaras khalbālī.
He has only a cowrie to spend, but he rushes about and makes a stir all over the bāzār.

Hārīh tah totas wamun.
(May as well) speak to a starling (or a parrot).
An inattentive person.

Hārīt tāṅ tah zulahnai; muhuri tsoiṅ tah zulit.
If the pear cost only a cowrie it should not be peeled; but if the apple cost a muhur it should be peeled.
Natives of Kashmir, from H. II. the Maharājah down to the humblest subject, seldom over skin a pear, but always skin an apple.
Apple-skin, they say, is not easily digested.
Harkat kar tah bārkat karī.
Be up and doing and God will bless you.
Persian.—Himmat i marādān madad i Khudd.

Haramukh Khwājā Gosānī.
The jogī of Haramukh.
Haramukh is a mountain 16,905 feet high, to the north of Kashmir.
A person with a bad memory.

There was a Jogī who tried to mount Haramukh. Every day for twelve years he climbed to a certain height, and every night for the same space of time he descended as far as he had ascended. How it came to pass he could not tell. Perhaps he was a somnambulist.
At any rate every morning he found himself reposing quietly in the very spot, whence he had started on the previous morning.

One day, the last day of these twelve years, a shepherd was seen by this Jogī coming down from the mountain. The Jogī asked him whether he had reached the summit and what he had seen there.
The shepherd replied that he had reached the top of the mountain, and had seen a sweeper with his wife, and they were milking a bitch with a human head, and they had asked him to drink that milk, which he had refused to do, because he thought that it was unholy; and then they threw some tikā upon his face, which, perhaps, was there now. The Jogī knew that the supposed sweeper and his wife were none other than the god and goddess Shiva and Parvati, and so he went close up to the shepherd’s face and licked off the tikā. He was then caught up into the clouds much to the astonishment of the poor shepherd.

The reason the shepherd was able to climb the mountain and the Jogi unable, was, that the shepherd went heedlessly and totally ignorant of the great deities who resided on the summit. (“An ignorant man fears nothing.”)

A boy with a dull memory works hard all the evening, and the next morning, when he comes to appear before the schoolmaster, he finds that he knows nothing, and is like the Jogī, as he was, and where he was, before.

Hāruch gugaj tah Lāruch gunas chhīk barūbar.
A June turnip and a Lār serpent are equal.

A native would not eat a turnip in the month of June on any account.

Gunas (or af‘a) is a short, thick, round-headed serpent, whose bite is generally fatal. Some say it has a black back and yellow belly; others that it is ash colour. It is met with principally in the district of Lār. The native method of treating snake bites is amusing.
“When a person is stung on the arm or leg, a ligature is applied between the heart and the wound, which is bagmuraed with foam. The patient has ‘arak and conserve of roses given to eat, while music is played to cheer him up.”

Lār is a parganah of the Kamrāz district.
Hasah Matin wasamat.
Hasah the madman's wealth.
A spendthrift's money.

Hash tik bad tah nosh tik bad lőj duz tah wőlih kus?
The mother-in-law is great, the daughter-in-law is also great;
the pot is burnt, who will take it off the fire?
Somebody must do the work.

Hash gayih tah noshih kur árím.
Grandmother (on husband's side) died and the daughter-in-law got peace.
Those old dames have great authority over the entire household.—
Vide "Hindús as they are," Chap 1., pp. 3, 4.

Hasti dareyi nah wávah tah bujih kád kupas.
The elephants couldn't stand because of the wind, but the old woman went out and gathered the cotton from the plant.
A poor, insignificant man can often accomplish what kings and others in authority have utterly failed to do.

Hasti yad gisah gyad.
A handful of grass for an elephant's stomach.
A mere drop in a bucket.

Hastis yad phat tah bongih dőlih wúth!
The elephant's stomach burst open and they mended it with hemp-skin!
Imperfect repairs.

Hatah dedi ruhana man dúi, tah kheni sum nah ak kuj!
"O, mother, two and half maunds of onions will be given to you;" and she has not got a plant to eat!
Promise of help, but no means of fulfilling it.

Hatah juwah, puněshú měh tik hōtah manz.
Hic, sir, here's a puněshú. Take me into your company.
A man who forces himself upon people who do not particularly care for him.
Puněshú is the twentieth part of an áná, a small coin, not in use now, but to be obtained in the bázár.

Hatah núr hakím.
The doctor killed a hundred men.
A doctor of some experience.
Haṭih gav zih maṭih gav.
A promise is a charge to keep.
Workmen who have promised to do some work, and on that promise have received some rupees in advance, often repeat these words as they walk away from the person’s house.

Haṭis khass tak hangani máthi.
Kisses for the chin and an axe for the throat.
A traitor.

Haźiras bog náźiras chob.
A share of the dinner to each of those present, but a beating for the cook.
Siē vos non vobis.

Hōh paṃtsh, dih paṃtsh bārābar.
To take five or give five—all the same to him.
Poco curante.

Hēlīah karo, Hājo, pullah, ehhui dūr.
Be encouraged, O pilgrim, though your destination is far off.
Encouraging a man in a difficult work.

Hemāyat āsin tak hēwunī mah pēyin hānsīh.
Patronize and be patronized, but do not tell any one, lest there should be harm (to the person patronized).
Keep your own counsel.

Hāṁī hēṁī.
Like an insect to the pod (so is sin to a man).
Sin brings its own punishment with it.

Hēnah ās tak mōh nah rōh.
Involved in difficulty, or taken prisoner, but for no fault of mine.
The guiltless punished for the guilty.

Hēng ās nah tak watshānī chhīh!
She has not got horns yet, she is only a calf!
Cited concerning a woman who bears her first child late in life.
A beardless man. An elderly person without a grey hair.

Herat ēyīh wauḍunī kah naḥ tak naḥ kauk.
When Herat came eleven days of winter, or nothing, remained.

Herat (Shīva-rīḍi) is a Hindu festival held on the fourteenth of the dark fortnight in the month Phāgun (Feb.—March).
Herih wutshas anigațih, but chhulum baritih națih yêt garas yii watih.
I came down stairs in the dark and washed my face in a waterpot filled with water. This must be done in this house.
If you go to Rome you must do as Rome does.

Hisīh harih tah bakhshish kharwārih.
To take account of every cowrie, but to give away money by the maund (80 lbs).
Careful but generous.

Honav ratshni id.
A festival without dogs.
Pleasure without difficulty.

Honj marūn kih nah kat, Lalih nalawat țalih nah zah.
Whether they killed a big sheep or a small one, it was all the same, Lal always had the nalawat in her plate.
Hardly treated.
Lal Bēd was very badly treated by her mother-in-law. One of the ways in which this woman delighted to tease her was by sending a stone called nalawat in her dinner. Cf. "Panjab Notes and Queries,"
No 20. Note 743.

Honih chon buth nah tah chânis țhâwândah swâd tih wî?
You have not a face like a bitch? Then your husband has (i.e., all the lot of you are bad).

Honih khîyih jîts sîn, bunî khîyih parah sîn.
He will eat a bitch, fur and all; and he will eat a chinâr tree with the leaves.
Quævera pecunia primum, virtus post nummos.

Honin nîtân tah monin tuchûn.
Fleecing dogs and scratching walls.
Ploughing the seashore.

Hor kēv.
A black and white crow.
A marked man.

Hud gav kunnī myund.
Just a morsel without vegetables left.
Natives are accustomed to eat their dinner in the following manner. First they take a mouthful of rice, and then a little vegetable, and so on regularly, until the meal is over. Should there happen to be a little rice left, but no vegetable, i.e., left to eat with it, that little rice is not eaten.
Hud is dry and poor food; without vegetables, &c.
Cited concerning one who is experiencing a little trouble in his old age. All the previous time he has been very prosperous.

_Hukm-i-hukim o hakim chhuh marg-i-mafi qut._
The ruler's and the doctor's orders are (like) sudden death (i.e., they both must be obeyed quickly).

_Thi gandit batich natsin._
Tightening her girdle the duck dances.
Cited against a woman who wishing to quarrel, goes and unites in a "row" going on close by. Kashmiri women have terrible tongues and most shrill voices. At the time of quarrelling they screech, shout, and dance to any extent.

_Hul gandit har karin._
To tighten one's girdle and fight.
He means business.

_Hul kyah karik siddis?_
What shall a crooked man do to a straight man?
The strength of a good character.

_Hun usin tah kuns mah usin._
May you be a dog, but not a younger son.
Younger sons are generally the father's butt, the mother's scorn, and the brother's fag.
_Persian.—Bay bish khurd ma bash._

_Hun kus nitiq tah kuir kus mangit niyih?_
Who will fleece a dog and who will take and marry a girl?
A good marriage is not such an easy matter.

_Hun nah tah kutsurna._
Not a dog but a pup only.
A childish-looking or childish-mannered person.

_Hunini huni har kuran tah shilah sinzih tungih wizih kuni._
Dogs fight among themselves, but at the time of the jackal's cry they are united.
Enemies are united against one common foe.

_Hini lut ai thawizon kandilas undar, tutih tih nerih huni lutni._
If a dog's tail be set in a kandil, there even it will remain a dog's tail.
Place does not alter race.
Kandil (Kandil, Arabic,) is the painted wooden or silver box about 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) ft. long and \(\frac{3}{4}\) ft. in circumference in which the heron’s feathers are fixed, and from which they depend. As many as three hundred feathers are sometimes worn, and as much as one rupee has been given for a feather. Rich people keep them hanging from the ceilings of their rooms from fear of the cat. Poor people can only afford to hire them for weddings, &c.? There are three or four heronries in Kashmir.

Húni mizas wátal wizah.
The sweeper is the cook for dog’s flesh.
A wicked, dirty man for bad, dirty deeds.
The Wátal has been called the gipsy of Kashmir, and indeed these people have all the manner and appearance of gipsies. They live separate from others, and by reason of their indiscriminate use of food are despised by all others, both Mohammedans and Hindús. It is a moot point whether the gipsies are not the descendants of Kashmírs, who were obliged to leave the valley at one time and another on account of persecutions and famines.

Húni neyih bastah khalari.
The dog took away the piece of leather (while the men were quarrelling over it).
The dog represents the lawyer.

Húni sund hyuh sabúr, achh púr, balúi dúr, buthis núr.
May you have patience like a dog, and may your eye keep undimmed. Let misfortune remain at a distance from you, and let cheerfulness be always upon your face.
A Kashmír’s blessing.
One may often see both Hindú and Mohammedan women spreading forth their hands in a supplicating manner and offering this prayer as they squat by the river-side in the early morning.

Húni warín tah kíravíñah pakhán.
The dogs bark but the caravan goes on.
A dog may as well bark at the moon.

Húni-wushkah yúr nah wáwín túr bowín.
Tares spring up where we do not sow them.
Húni-wushkah literally is dog-barley.

Hunih mashidih hund jinn.
The ogre of the deserted mosque.
A wretched, selfish fellow.
Hūnis athik aut māndanwun.
To knead flour by a dog’s paw.
   Ne sutor ultra crepidam.
Shūrin o Khusru.—Ki az buztna najjārī nu yāyad.

Hūnis chob dinah nerīh gasuí yot.
You only get manure from hitting a dog.
   What is the good of a policeman beating a poor man? He will not get a bribe.

Hūnis mukhtahūr.
A string of pearls to a dog.
   Casting pearls before swine.

Hūnis pyav “Sūbirah” nāv, suī, ā mālih, sānih yas wuthit āv.
The name “Patient” has been given to the dog, but he knows, O father, whom he has come to bite.
   A generally good man, who now and again breaks out into a fit of passion, &c.

Hūrih ān wūrih kyah tah dānas?
What! will he throw a handful of grass into the fire-place?
   Like a handful of grass in a fireplace is a little money in a big concern—soon swallowed up.

Hurūs tuh burdus!
A beating and smiting!
   Such a hullabaloo!

Hūsih wun tuh musih āyih patsh.
A woman said something and she believed it.
   Credulity.

Hīyut kami tuh dyut kami.
Who took and who gave? (God).
   “The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away.”—Job i. 21.
I. J.

Jahámáːh tamok.
Tobacco from Jahám (i.e., splendid tobacco).

Jahám tobacco is said to be the finest in the valley.

Jahún chhúh ashkun mazhar.
The world is a theatre of love.

Jamiat gayih karámah.
A company of men is as good as a miracle (i.e., difficult matters are easily accomplished by their mutual and united help).

Jún êk mês chhúh? Panun pín.
Who is good? I myself.

Swam cuique pulverum.

Jránk, ditah dastár pínah rozh taṭ wudah mún.
Beloved, give me your turban and you remain bareheaded.

Cited when a man asks for something which is indispensable to you.

Jandami chhúh zuwah úsín.
Lice is in the beggar's ragged cloak.

A quick reply given to the importunate mendicant.

Lice here stands for money. Hence “You've got as much money as there are lice and dirt sticking to your garment.”

Jandás póri, yath karizih wondas réhat.
Blessed be the ragged garment, which keeps me warm during the winter.

The poor man's retort when twitted concerning the antiquity of his garment.

Jangas manz chhai thil tik tah yúli tik.
You get purse and bullet, too, from fighting; (therefore think over the matter before you enter the lists against an adversary.)

A man had an ass which he used for carrying loads by day, and was leaving out in the field at night to pick up what grass the poor animal could find there. The ass rebelled against such treatment, and one night ran away to the king's stable, and was there fed most liberally along with the royal horses. He became very fat and strong and was very happy; but, alas! a war commenced, and when the enemy had arrived near to the king's capital, all the royal horses, and the solitary ass, were turned out and sent forward to the fight. There the ass saw one horse after another shot down, and becoming afraid he escaped back again to his former master. "There is the güli as well as the thul," said he, as he galloped back. "Better to have little and sure."

"Jat pat" zih Khud'í rat.
"Quickly" you must lay hold upon God.

There is but a step between you and death, or some terrible misfortune, or some great event. You must act at once. Then throw yourself upon God to prosper you.

Neu Deus intersit, nisi dignus vindice nodus.

Jóyih chhuko zih shíyih chhuko.
You are safe in your own place.

Lended and house property are sure investments.

Jawún is nah vozgár; lukatis míj mavan ; tak budis áshani mavan. Yim trónawai kíthah chhích sakhí musihat.
A young man without work; a mother dying and leaving a baby; the wife of an old man dying. These three are terrible misfortunes.

'Id gahn wasit sun kyah ranav? Watih karav maslahat katih karav dún?

Yándárás bikt gáthak panun háwai, thusik pan khárav ajik dusih tin.

Daharih místiñ gax pat pívah núwai; háwai garah karun kíhó gav.
Súlîh wálîk gor pístiñ zah tik nov chówai; umríh thówai garsih tammáuí
Katih pélh wálîk pélh búnah phújárówi; háwai garah karun kíhó gav.
Sémít khot chót pínjak thoh thówai; háwai garah karun kíhó gav.

Léj pashpíwai míj máshrúwai; háwai garah karun kíhó gav.

Going to 'Id gah what shall we cook? Let us take counsel on the road, where we shall make the fire-place.

Sitting at my wheel I will show you my wisdom. I will stretch the bad cotton to half the height of the wall.
I will get a five-yard than for you out of six pounds of wool;
I'll show you the manner of my house.
I will never get the milk at early morning from five cows;
but I will keep you all your life waiting for milk.
At a word upon the road I will break the pot; I'll show you the manner of my house.
I will eat and drink with my friends, but keep the millet-seed and straw for you. I'll show you the manner of my house.
I will give you the strainings of the pot; and you will forget your mother. I'll show you the manner of my house.
A lazy, ill-tempered woman.
The author of these words is unknown, but everybody knows them and quotes them, in whole or in part, and sometimes in song, against that woman, through whose bad temper, indiscretion, or extravagance, the husband has been brought to ruin.
‘Id gāh, ‘Id, Arab., (the place of sacrifice), is a beautiful park-like plain lying just outside the right of Srinagar. At its northern end there is a fine old wooden mosque overshadowed by some lofty chinār trees. The mosque is called the ‘Alī Masjid, and was built in the time of Sultān Husain Bādshāh by Khwāja Ḥasti, Sonar, about 1471 A. D. No Muhammadan observes the fast of the Ramazān with greater strictness than the Kashmirī.
Thān is a piece of cloth. A five-yard thān would be an extremely small one; and six pounds of wool, if properly spun, &c., should make a full thān of ten yards or more.

Illat galīh tah ādat galīh nah.
The ill may go, but the habit will stick.

Ilm be-amal goyā kih an sindis athas mashal.
Knowledge unused is like a torch in the hand of a blind man.
Persian—Ilm i be 'amul zamār i be-'asat.

Ilmas gatshih amal āsunī.
Knowledge should be brought into use.

Insān chhūh poshīh khatūh āvel tah kahī khatūh ālur.
Man is more fragile than a flower, and yet harder than a stone.
A man's own pain or trouble affects him, but not he tears and pain of another.

Insānah sund kimāt chhui satowīh-shat rupayīh.
The price of a man is Rs. 2,700.
Two men get angry with one another and fight. The above saying is generally quoted by the man who is getting the worst of the scrimmage, and wishes to end it.
Two reasons have been told me why this sum especially has been set as the price of a man. One reason is, that in the days of the Mughals Rupees 2,700 was the fine imposed upon every murderer in lieu of his life. Another reason is, that Akbar, like other equally great and envied monarchs, was accustomed to sleep in secret places. Sometimes he would disguise himself as a fakir, or as a shopkeeper and sleep by the roadside or in a shop. One night he wandered a little farther than usual and found himself in a foreign and uncultivated country. Strange to say, his favorite minister, Bīr Bal, had also strayed to the same place. They met, and while they were engaged in conversation, an one-eyed man came up to them, and said to the kinsman, "You have taken out my eye which I think to be worth the sum of Rupees 1,200. Give me this money, or restore to me my other eye." Akbar was nonplussed by the man's sudden appearance and audacious request; but Bīr Bal was equal to the occasion, and replied, "Yes, it is quite true. We have your eye; and if you will come to-morrow morning, we will return it to you." The man agreed and left. Bīr Bal immediately sent off to the butchers for some sheep's eyes. After some time they arrived, and he had them put each one separately into a little wooden box by itself. In the morning the man came again; and when he arrived he was informed that the king had several eyes by him, and that it was impossible to tell which particular one belonged to this man. Would he kindly allow his other eye to be taken out, so that it might be weighed and measured; in that way they would be able to tell which of the number of eyes belonged to him.

The man was blinded for life, and henceforth gave no more trouble to the king. (So much did the poor man value his sight, that he estimated each eye at Rupees 1,200, and the whole rest of the body at Rupees 300 only.)

Insānas guṭshih āsumi khoe.

Poshas guṭshih āsumi bōe.

Politeness is required in man.

Scent is required in a flower.

"As charity covers a multitude of sins before God, so does politeness before men." — Greville.

Insānas tah insānas chhēh titś tufāwut,

Yīts khudīyas tah bandus chhēh.

Between man and man there is as great difference as there is between God and a slave.

There are no two persons alike.

Jumah Mashidih handin nimāz athāh.

The Jumā Masjid people have given up praying.

While people from the country come in crowds to the great mosque of the city, the people living close to the mosque sit in their shops all through the Friday hoping for trade; and they are not disappointed.

Nimāz athāh, lit., prayers from the hand—out of hand—gone.

12
Izzat chhuh pananis ásus andar.
Honour is inside your mouth.
Take heed to your words.

Izzatich húr tak be-izzatich khar chhěh barábar.
A cowrie obtained honourably and a kharwár obtained dishonourably are equal in value.
K

Kahah rūt sanz būsh.
Like an eleven month's man.
A man who stints himself now, that he may be rich hereafter.
A man hearing that rice was cheap and good, bought as much as he thought would be sufficient for the next year, and stored it away in his house. Kashmiris are constantly storing something or other, so that their houses generally resemble a small godown. Well, it happened, that this man had not correctly reckoned, and that there was only enough for eleven months in store. What was he to do? He had spent all his money, and to borrow he was ashamed. Accordingly he determined to fast for one month, and stupid man like he was, he thought that it would be much better to have the fast now instead of having to look forward to it all through the eleven months. He had not faith in God to supply his wants hereafter. The consequence was that the man and wife and all the family died just before the fast was over, and left eleven months' rice in the house!

Kahan garan kuní tāv; himmat rāv tāh wanav kās?
Only one frying-pan for eleven houses; courage gone; and to whom shall we speak?
Time of great distress.

Kahan gāv rāmuts.
Eleven men have lost a cow between them.
A great loss, but many to share it.

Kahan gayik kuní wani, tim gayik rani anānī.
Eleven men came to the same unfortunate state; they each went and fetched a wife for themselves.
Cited when several male members in a household are unfortunate.

Kahan kāh watah.
Eleven roads to eleven men.
Tot homines, tot sententia.

Kahan kuní shaitān.
One wicked fellow for eleven men.
Hindustānī.—Ek machhī saṛē tālāb ko ganda kartē hai.

Kahan māli puturan kunui srāṇah-pat.
One loin cloth to eleven fathers and sons.
Climax of distress.
Kahan thayin së akis nah tshanin wäi.
He promises eleven people but does not throw food to one.
    Great promises but little deeds.

Kajih hanzah korih sat.
Kaj and her seven daughters.
    There was a poor deaf woman who had seven daughters, whom she supported with the greatest difficulty. At last God seeing her struggle gave her seven handfuls of food secretly every day. After a time the mother thought that if she left one daughter to go her own way, she might save one handful of food, or, at all events, have a little more to give to the others. But God only gave her six handfuls then. After a while she sent another daughter away and then another, but still God continued giving one handful less for each girl dismissed, until at last not one daughter and not a scrap of food were left to the woman.

Këkuñ hëpyut.
Father's bear.
    Nothing really to be afraid of.
    Kashmiri parents are accustomed to frighten their children into good behaviour by saying "There is a bear coming. Quiet, quiet," &c.

Kal ai korak tah kaji marak; kal nai korak tah marak nah zah.
If you worry, it will bring you to the grave; but if you do not worry, you will never die.
    'Tis not from work, but from worry, that half the people die.

Kalam-zan, shamsheer-zan, kuste-zan chhïh be-aklus nish bar sober.
A quill-driver, swordsman, and brothel-keeper, are (each one) no more than an ignorant man.

Kalas pëth gäri phujarit khëni.
Breaking a water-nut upon one's head and eating it.
    Earning with difficulty.
    There was a very godly Hindu, a Rishi, living in Kashmir. Upon a certain day one of his disciples came crying unto him and saying, that his mother had died. The Rishi enquired the age of the woman, and finding that she was very old, he told the man not to weep; because it was time that his mother should die. The disciple, however, did not agree with this, and begged the Rishi to allow her to live a few years more. The Rishi told him to crush some water-nuts (Traba bispinosa) upon his mother's head; and it should come to pass that she would revive, and live as many years as there were broken water-nuts.

Now the bereaved son did not like the idea of breaking hard nuts upon his deceased mother's head; still it was the order of the Rishi, and so he did so. Eleven nuts were broken and for eleven years longer the mother lived.

Kali sanz bol-bāsh zānib kali sund mol máj.

Only a dumb man's parents understand a dumb person's speech.

A little child's prattle is comprehensible only to the parents; and a man's speech is understood by his countrymen only.

Kalas tih raz, nulas tih raz.

A rope for the head and a rope for the legs.

A strict watch over any body or anything.

Kalāyih bisini thulas kurān treh sini.

A tin finger-ring turns an egg into three dishes of meat and vegetables.

A great show, but little under it.

Kalis mundis Khudāi rázi.

God is pleased with the dumb, simple man.

"Kali nun zih nuní?" "Kali; syun zih syunni?"

"O dumb man, salted?" "Yes, salted." "O dumb man, unsalted?" "Yes, unsalted."

A story of a nervous young Englishman comes just now to mind, which exactly illustrates this saying. He was breakfasting out; and at the breakfast-table the hostess remarked, "I'm afraid your roll is not nice, Mr——." "Oh, yes, thank you," he replied, "it is splendid." In a little while eggs were placed upon the table, and Mr.— took one, which turned out to be bad. The host, who was sitting close by Mr.—, noticed this, and begged him to let the servant take it away and give him another; whereupon Mr.— said "Oh! please don't, I like bad eggs."

Kam gatshih khyn thun gatshih nah khyn.

Better to eat a little than to eat grief.

"Any price rather than you should be angry," says the shopkeeper to the customer.

Kámadevan chhus athah dolumut.

Kámaádev has smoothed that man's face with his hands.

Cited on seeing any beautiful man or woman.

Kámaádev is the Hindu Cupid or Eros, the god of Love, thought to be one of the most pleasing creations of Hindu fiction.
Kamas chhuh kamül tah tsaris chhuh zawül.
Perfection is to the less and destruction to the more.
A man somewhat slack in speech, expenses, &c., will become great; but a man extravagant in words and expenses, &c., will come to ruin.

Kaminas khidmat chhūh zaminas chob.
To serve a mean man is like beating the earth (i.e., it is a profitless work).

Kanah-dol chhui Botani sodhás barābar.
A man who turns away his ear (from scandal, &c.), is like the Botan or Ladák trade (i.e., receives great profit).
A brisk trade is carried on between Kashmir and Ladák. I have heard that about lbs. 128,000 of kil-phamb (pashmî) or shawl-wool are imported annually into the valley by the batâhânî or Ladák merchants. For the preparation, &c., of this wool, cf. Drow's Book on Kashmir and Jammú.

Kanah kapolis khaduni.
To bring cotton from the ear.
Impossible. Some people attempt to do things in an impossible way.
Cited also against that servant who hears everything pro or con about his master, and then goes and retails his information to his master.

Kanas chhhas naň batâh ladân.
I do not load my ear with food (i.e., I am not such a fool as to try to put the food into my ear instead of into my mouth. I know what I'm about).
Kashmiris say that a drunkard, who was very much under the influence of drink at the time, tried to feed himself by stuffing rice into his ears; hence the saying.

Kandas tah mujih kumû sūd.
The same taste to sugar-candy and a radish.
Good or evil, noble or mean, all the same to him.

Kānh naň kom Kulah-gom.
(Going to) Kulagom without work.
A man going on an errand calls a friend, whom he meets on the way, to come along with him. If that friend does not wish to accompany him, he will probably reply as above.
The workmen of Kulagom are said to be the cleverest in the valley.
Kani tagiyā nār zih zanis yiyih ār?
Will the stone burn, that the acquaintance should have mercy?
"Save me from my friends."

Kani tah nunah phul gāv duryāvas. Kanih dup "Buh gujis."
Nunun dupus "Yusū gul suī gul."
A stone and a piece of salt fell into the river. The stone said "I melted." The salt said "That which melted, melted."
We should never complain as long as there are others worse off than ourselves.

Kānih achh surmah tah lanjih zangih pāiyānah.
Antimony for the blind eye and trousers for the lame leg.
"Madame Rachel will rectify it."

Kānih achh wuzih kyah nindarih?
What will rouse the blind eye from sleep?
What cannot be cured must be endured.

Kānih, fiulū, tah athas kūt.
"O, one-eyed man, work." "It is at hand."
A one-eyed man is always ready for mischief.
Panjālū,— Kānā, terha, badjolū.
(Also) Kānā, kachā' koch—yardanā : zeh ānuh kaṃzāt !
Jablū has apnā chale, to kā nā puchhē būt.

Kanih garah barun jān tah wānguł garah nah.
Better to fill your house with stones than to have a stranger in it.

Kānih gurih kah mirah-khur.
Eleven grooms for a one-eyed mare.
A very strict watch over a very wicked person.
Cited also sometimes when there are a large number of people appointed to a small work, which one man could easily perform.
"One-eyed" is an expression generally introduced to show the wicked disposition of the person or beast. Vide supra.

Kānih korih karyāk rān tah shangun kyut gos kūj kāmūnī.
The one-eyed girl was married; but she had not a room for sleeping in.
An imperfect arrangement.
Kanih nakhah kani tah mēh nakhah nah kaih.
One stone lies close to another, but there is nobody near to me.
Sikandar-nāma.—Birahna man o gurba rā postin.

Kanih palah chhānpun.
Sling after the stone.
To send another messenger to get news of the first, &c.

Kūnis chhūdā bhūks pūṃk “Kūnū” dupāṅ?
Is it wise to say “O one-eyed man” in his presence?

Kanjur kuttah.
The brothel-keeper’s dog.
Quoted against the person who bears much humbug and pain at the hands of another, because he eventually hopes to get some profit out of him.

There was once a dog, who day-by-day visited a certain house of ill-fame in the city. Every time the dog went, the harlots used to beat it, but nothing discouraged the dog went again and again. One day his brother dogs got to hear of this, and enquired why he thus went time after time to a place, where he generally got beaten. “I do not go there for what I get to eat,” replied the dog, “but because sometimes, when the chief harlot is angry with the other harlots, she says, turning to me, ‘This dog shall be your husband. That is the reason of my enduring all this abuse.”

Kanjur kuttah.—Kanjur is Hindustānī; the Kashmirī ordinary word is gān. Kuttah of course has been Kashmirised from the Hindustānī kuttā.

Kār-i-Khudā zānīh Khudā.
God knows his own work.

Kār guā karit tah phishul gav zōt.
The work is all over, and an unlucky child is born.
The deed is done. No alternative now.
Several times are mentioned in the Nechih-puter as unlucky moments for a child to be born in. One time, Mul, is especially unpropitious. A child born at that time is sometimes separated from its parents, that it may not bring harm upon their house; at all events, it is an object of much care and expense to its father and mother, until its fate, perhaps, changes.

Karīm nanahsvor.
Barefooted Karīm.
Give a dog a bad name and you may as well hang him.
Karīm one day was seen walking without shoes on. The people called him “Barefooted Karīm,” and although always afterwards he wore nice shoes, yet the people continued calling him so up to the time of his death.
Koshirik kahai garah.
Only eleven houses in Kashmir.

dark days.
The reader may have noticed the frequent occurrence of the number eleven, and especially in the last few pages. "Like an eleven months' man"; "Only one frying-pan for eleven houses"; "Eleven men have lost a cow between them"; "Eleven men arrived at the same unfortunate state"; "One wicked fellow for eleven men"; "One loin-cloth for eleven fathers and sons"; "Eleven grooms for a one-eyed mare"; and "Only eleven houses in Kashmir," &c., &c. As far as one can ascertain from the limited means of information at hand, this number is quite peculiar to the country. Captain Temple, in his most valuable and interesting "Survey of the Incidents in Modern Indian Folktales" (one of the appendices of "Wide-awake Stories") does not mention this number. The numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 12, 13, 14, 18, 24, and larger numbers are quoted as occurring in several tales, but never the number eleven. This is somewhat remarkable, and the only reasons suggested for the frequency of this number in "Happy Valley" folklore are the following stories:—Nearly 800 years ago a faqir named Bulbul Shah came from Tibet to Kashmir. When he had been here a little while he succeeded in turning Rentan Shah, the son of Raki, then king of the Valley, from Hinduism to the faith of Islam, and then Rentan Shah killed all the Hindus except eleven families.

A variant of this story, leading to the same result, is that Zaimulabadin had a most hot-headed son called Sultan Haji, or Sultan Hyder. One day as this youth was going down the river Jhelum, when the boat reached Ali Kadal (the fifth bridge), he shot an arrow at a water-pot, which a little Panditani girl was carrying on her head on the bank close by. The pot was broken to pieces, but the water was not spilt owing to its having been instantly turned into ice, which remained perfectly still upon the girl's head. The little Panditani went home crying to her father, a Rishi, who was so much enraged with the young prince's conduct, that then and there he cursed him, saying, "May his hand be paralysed." It happened according to the Rishi's word. From that moment the prince was unable to move his right hand.

When Zaimulabadin heard what had come to pass he was much grieved, and at once went to his son's house to enquire further of the matter. Said the prince, "I fired an arrow and broke a little Panditani's water-pot, and soon afterwards I felt that my right arm was utterly powerless." The king then summoned his ministers and bade them enquire where the little girl's parents lived, and when after some time they had discovered the abode, he himself went to beg the Rishi's pardon, and to beseech him to invoke the gods that they might restore the hand of the prince. The Rishi heard the king's request and prayed, and then turning to Zaimulabadin said, "The prayer will be answered, if you will take one of my daughter’s grass shoes and burn it, and then rub the ashes thereof over the prince’s hand.” The king thanked the Rishi for his kindness, went away with a glad heart, and did as he had been directed; and no sooner was the prince’s hand rubbed with the ashes of the burnt shoe, then its former use and strength returned. There was great joy in the court that day.

When the king saw this, he perceived that these Hindús were a very holy people; for none but the good and righteous could thus afflict and recover again by their curses and prayers. Accordingly, he at once began to think of a plan for rendering them unholy. Persian teachers were introduced into the valley, and the Hindús were ordered to learn that language; and they were also commanded to eat yesterday’s food and pickles under penalty of the king’s great displeasure. A band of officers called Tsráli were appointed to see that this latter order was carried out. Tsráli is the ancient name for the functionary called Mahalladár, for which see note to “Khafi kaham ud chhad, &c.” cf. also note to “Mol gar tsrd,” &c.

At length through threatenings and bribes all but eleven families complied with the king’s order. (Another story says that all but eleven families refused to obey, and so were killed or obliged to flee the country.) In consequence of this the Hindús became unholy; therefore their prayers and curses were of no avail, and they remain so to this day, eating yesterday’s food and studying Persian.

However, the gods could not lightly pass over this matter, and therefore a Jogí went to the king and predicted that he would soon be ill, which prediction was fulfilled.

On a certain day the king became very sick and the next day he was worse, and so he continued until all hope of his recovery had quite gone. While in this state the Jogí with his disciple was walking about outside the palace, and telling every one that he could divine; and that by virtue of his art he was quite certain that there was no other remedy for the king but the following:

“The Jogí must take out his own soul from his body and place it within the lifeless body of the king.” Presently Zainu’lábadin died, and the Jogí with his attendant was admitted within the palace and conducted to the corpse. In a minute or two the Jogí and his disciple were left alone in the death chamber. Turning to the latter the Jogí said “I am about to take out my spirit, and put it within this corpse. Take care of my body after death, and put it in some secret place.” It was so done; and when the king’s wazírs and servants came into the room afterwards they beheld Zainu’lábadin sitting up in his bed well and strong. Great were the rejoicings of the people and great the gratitude of the king, who lived for many, many, years after this.

These accounts are most perplexing. Rentan Sháh, the son of Rakí, has perhaps been mistaken for Ratan Sháh, the successor of Rájá Von or Vená of Ventípúr, concerning whom the people say that a famous faqr named Bulbul Sháh flew over from Baghdád in a night and converted him and all his subjects to the Muhammedan faith on the following morning. But again this Rentan may have been Runjön, son of the king of Tibet, who invaded Kashmir in the time of Sama Deva, 1315 A. D., assumed the rule of the country, and became a Muhammadan under the name of Shams-ud-dín (the son of the faith).

A story just crops up, in which Rájá Ven is called Ratan Sháh!

Then in the second story Zainulábádín has certainly been credited with the evil deeds of his father, Síkandar Butshikan, of whom it is related, that he did put to death all Hindús who refused to embrace Islám. (Cf. latter part of story attached to "Máttanuk baháh," &c.) Zainulábádín is generally represented as a good and merciful king. "Táwáríkh-i Birmál" says: "He was good and kind to every one, whether Mosalmán or Hindu, and he brought back again to the Valley the Bráhmans, who had been compelled to leave it during the oppressive reign of Síkandar."

A few notes from a Persian work by the late Díván Kirpá Rám, and entitled "Gulzár-i-Kashmir," are still more confusing. Runjón, son of the king of Tibet, is now Sultán Rattanjo, an imbecile prince of Tibet, who as a mere child was brought into this country and so knew nothing of his father's religion, and was therefore easily converted to Islám by Bubhul Sháh. Sultán Shams-ud-dín was the third ruler of Kashmir after Sultán Rattanjo. It was during Síkandar's successor's, Sultán 'Ali Sháh's, reign (1418-1524 A.D.) that those Hindús who refused to embrace Islám were obliged to leave the country, and while on their way out of the country many of them were seized and burnt alive.

Whatever the truth may be, it will be seen that the Kashmiri Hindús, especially, have reason to remember the number eleven. (Cf. also Drew, "Jam-nan and Kashmir," p. 69.)

Kathik khutish wakef pakawani.
A bribe for a word and bakshish for just going (to call a friend, &c.)

A man keen upon bribes and gifts.

Kathik suët chhuk wálán háñthi dud.
By a word to cause milk to flow from the breasts of a barren woman.

The power of a word in season.

Kathik suët wasih wék tuk kathik suët wasih swëh.
A word stirs up anger or love.

Káthik, Bú, ìk? Kút, Bú, gatskák? Kyak chhùí náv?
Sirih ús, Sirahom gatskák. Sus chhùm bastik. Sálih chhùm náv.

Whence have you come, Brother? Whither are you going, Brother? What is your name?
I have come from Sirin. I shall go to Sirahom. I have some pulse in my wallet. My name is Salih.
A take-off upon the conventionalities of the day. Notice play upon the letter sin.

Kātsur dapân hát san guts nah dínah dyu n.
Kon dapân son guts nah kānh tih yu.
Khosah dapân gojah guts nah kānih gatshun.
The brown-haired man (or woman) says, "Why should I give food to my family?"
The one-eyed person says, "We do not want to see any one."
The khosah says, "Why should any person be angry?"
Kashmiris say an ordinary brown-haired person is invariably stingy and selfish; a one-eyed person is generally disrespected, cf. "Kānih jōli," &c.; and the khosah is a man with the little goat-like beard who has got a name for affability,—cf. "Khosah khēn."

Kāwah kāwah, kāwah, hat.
A crow, (another) crow, (a third) crow, a hundred crows.
A lie increases as it goes.

Kāwah yanīhwał.
A crow's wedding company.
A bad wedding arrangement; everything upside down.
These words are the first line of a little verse sung, or rather shrieked forth, by little children, who gather together in different parts of the city at evening time to play, and watch the crows come home to roost. I have seen thousands upon thousands of crows, a procession, at least, half-a-mile in length, returning past my house; and a tremendous noise they make during the five minutes or so they are passing. This is the song the little children shout:—

*Kāwah yanīhwał.
Murāden moł.
Dīham nai ras han.
Kadī nulah aut.

Of which the translation is:—
O company of crows.
Keen after your own interest.
If you don’t give me a little wine.
I will pull out your nest by the roots.

The crow, on account of its bold and selfish character, is called in Kashmir "The father of Matlab."
Kówán gojih tshar.
A big basket of kernels for crows (soon gone).
    Cited to a man who gobbles up his food quickly.

Kówán hickhóe bakkú sand pakun. Pananní p.kun thanus.
A crow learnt to walk like a cuckoo, and forgot his own walk.
    Sríkandar-náma—Kulágha tage lacal rá yosh kard.
    Táge Éhérawshíta rá járamosh kard.

Kúwas mish nátih-hun.
A small piece of meat in a crow’s claws.
    A bad debt.

Kúrí bar kín zih tshétiwoni ttrár.
The crow has cawed; throw away the tshétiwon (i.e., the water in which Hindús wash their hands after a meal);
    and be off to your work.
    One of the divisions of the city of Srinagar is so far removed from the Sher Gári (or Sher Gadhí,) where all the state apartments and government offices are situated, that the government servants, who reside there have to rise and eat their breakfasts early, so as to arrive at their posts in the Sher Gári at the right time.

Káunj yutän kilih kilih khóyan, tután maskinam náh sitam chóni.
As long as the burner of the dead will not poke me (i.e., to arrange my body so that it may burn quickly and properly), so long shall I not forget your tyranny.

Káumr nár tah parud yér, yim donowai chhíi náh wasfádár.
A pine-wood fire and a strange-countryman friend, these two are not lasting.

Kézis tah lántsás myulni kyah?
What has the kází to do with an eunuch?
    The judge is not for the good but for the evil.
    There are many eunuchs in the valley and they are all Muham-medans. Nearly all of them live in Táshawán, Srinagar; and are employed in marriages to make amusement, or at funerals to join in the laments.

Kóhkhií chhuh dán kání n pöth, trúh man ranún tah sheh man thékún.
Kóhkhií’s fire-place is in the top storey; she cooks three maunds and boasts six maunds.
    A lying braggart.
Kënh moh tah ditam tah kani tali nitam.
Don't give me anything but let me have your ear.
A patronising look from those in authority is worth a large sum.

Këntsah chon tah këntsah myon, su' gar wisah-pon.
A little for you and a little for me, this is friendship.
A friend is one not merely in word, but also in deed.

Këntsah dittham gublah yiitui;
Këntsah zoutham nah dinas wår;
Këntsah tshunitham nuli brahma-hatsui.
Bagawonah chëni gaj namaskår.
To some you gave many poppies (i.e., sons);
And some you haltered (with a daughter) for murdering a Brähman (in some former existence).
O Bhagawan, (the Deity, the Most High,) I adore your greatness.

Këntsah dyuttham aurai ùlav, këntsav racheyih nìlah Wûtth.
Këntsah achh lajih mas chøt ùlav, kënh gai wînan phûlav dit.
Some Thou (O God) called from Thy heaven; some held the Jhelum in their bosom.
Some have drunk wine and lift their eyes upwards; some have gone and closed their shops.
Whom God will, God blesses.

Këntsah dyuttham yut kiho tut, këntsan yut nah tah tut kieh?
God has given to some (blessing) here and there (i.e., in both worlds), and He has given to some nothing either here or there.

Këntsan rani chhai shihij bûni, nerav nôbar shuhul karav.
Këntsan rani chhai bar pûth bûni, nôrav nôbar tah zang khëyiwo.
Këntsan rani chhai adal tah wadal; këntsan rani chhai zadal tshai.
Some have wives like a shady chinár, let us go under it and cool ourselves.
Some have wives like the bitch at the door, let us go and get our legs bitten.
Some have wives always in confusion, and some have wives like bad thatch upon the roof.
Lal Dēd’s sayings.

Kētah kahē tah bāzār josh.
False coin and bāzār noise.
The consequence of going into the bāzār. It is better to have things made at home. Then one may be sure of no deception.

Khairah nah bog tah sharah.
No share in the good, but in the evil.
A real friend.

Khairus tijil tah nyāyas tātil.
Quick to do good, but slow to quarrel.
Good advice.

Khairuk gom tasallī chānīch sharah nishīk ruchnam Khudāī.
I have got the comfort of having done good; God will bless me from your wickedness.

Khaisch-i-zan prīk kanī, khaisch-i-mard sar-gardān.
A woman’s relations are honoured, but a man’s relations are despised.

Khām tama huchhimatsīk kolīk.
An avaricious man goes to a dried-up stream (i.e., gets no profit).
Avarice is always poor, but poor by his own fault.

Khām tama tah apazyōr.
An avaricious man is a liar.

Khān baḍā khān baḍā, manzbāg chhēs kum tsuṭ adā!
A big tray, a big tray, and in the middle of it half a loaf of chaff!
Ostentation.

Khanabalab Khādan Yār.
From Khanbal to Khādan Yār (i.e., as far as one can go in a boat in Kashmir).
Dan to Beersheba. Land’s End to John O’Groats’.
Khánamólën nah koj tak parzanun minuz.
No breakfast for the son, but a luncheon for the meaner domestics.

Khandawír bors.
A shawl-weaver’s load, (i.e., a little light load).
Shawl-weavers are in general a sickly class. If they get five traks instead of six traks of paddy, the proper measure now-a-days for one rupee, they will not notice they have short weight; on the contrary, they will think that they have seven traks. (A trak is 4\(\frac{3}{4}\) sers.)

Khandawír hémáyat.
Defending a shawl-weaver.
Rájá Kák, who died about eighteen years ago, was over the shawl trade in Kashmir. If any person in those days took upon himself to order or harm a shawl-weaver, he was immediately summoned before Rájá Kák and severely punished. Consequently these weakly, ill-paid people then enjoyed such immunity from petty tyranny, as they do not experience now.

My servant (I am sorry to say) is constantly striking and commanding others “as good as himself.” He thinks that being the servant of the sáhib he is infinitely superior to ordinary folk, and has a licence to do so. Frequently he receives the above reply, “Who are you, a shawl-weaver, to do such an act?”

Khur bud tsalinui tah wél bud taginai
May bad knowledge (lit. an ass’s understanding) flee from you and good knowledge (lit. that derived from a study of the Vedas) stick to you.
A Kashmirí Pandit’s prayer before teaching his child, or before sending him to the Bráhman to be taught.

Khur khënai khär-khów.
(Called an) ass-eater before he has eaten the ass.
Undeserved blame; a false charge.

“Khur kirégih. Áshnéi kyah?”
“Worked like an ass. What is friendship?”
Work is work, whether done for a relation or friend, or not; and the labourer is worthy of his hire. Don’t be afraid to ask for the money.

Khur pútis guri pút lonahwani.
Asking a colt as a gift after buying a young ass.
It is the custom in Kashmir to give “a trifle in” with the purchase. This is called dastúri.
Kharas gor yíj
A big sugar-biscuit for the donkey.

Instruction is wasted upon the stupid man.

Kharas kharakharaḥ.
A comb for the donkey.

Honour given to one not worthy of it.

Kharas khasit tah buth path kun karit.
Mounting the ass with his face towards the tail.

A brazen-faced fellow.

The whole saying is—

Kharas khasit tah buth path kun karit;
Kulahchan manjanak kharahan phirīt!

He mounted the ass with his face towards the tail;
And at night he asked the ass from them!

During the rule of the Patrans, debtors were sometimes punished by being made to sit upon an ass in this way and driven through the bāzār. A certain Pandit was once thus treated, and was such a shameless man as to ask the government for the ass, when his ride was over.

Kharis rāj díayanū garin.
A wicked man’s reign is of one hour’s duration.

Khaīt dit tāh chhīh dāpān, zih sūnūn chhīh bar wathī.
Giving a bill of divorcement, and the woman saying, “The door is open to me.”

Some hope of re-instalment.

Khauf kahunāl chhuī? zih pananis mahallādārah sund.
Whom do you fear? My Mahalladār.

A mahalladār is an officer in charge of a division of the city. His principle duty seems to be to spy over the people in his district.
He is always fee’d by the people, and generally hated by them, which is no very great matter for surprise.

Khē, khē, gomut ghūs maunich chhas nah khabar.
Eating, eating, he has become lustful, and there is no care of death to him.

Khē kīvī gāsah dharmakīh pāsah.
O cow, eat some grass for the sake of dharma.

Come let us be friends again.

Dharma is a Sanskrit word, and means the duties of the masses of the Hindū people. Sometimes these are called Abhi-dharma.
Should the family cow be sick, the owner will often stroke her neck and face, saying the above words. Great is the love of all Hindus, and especially of the Kashmiri Hindu, for the cow. It is gratitude that prompts this affection, and has lead the Hindus to regard the cow as sacred—gratitude to the beast for sustaining them during their wandering southwards over barren mountains and through treeless deserts. If it had not been for the cow's milk then, probably hundreds upon hundreds of them would have perished; and so in gratitude to the cow, which furnished them with sustenance and carried their burdens, the Hindus magnified her into a god, and worship and honour her accordingly.

Khomas khar tah horas nah kór.
I will eat his kharwar and not pay him a cowrie.
A bad debtor.

Khónah khotwán tah máshihwit.
Eating dinner, but as if he did not want it.
A very nice, prim, proud fellow.

Khónah khotwán tah wénah tsári tsári.
Eating his dinner, as though he were picking the wénah plant.
Wénah is a plant like mint in shape of leaf and flavour. It is a favourite of Shiva's, in whose worship it is much used.

Khónah khush kó tah kómih dilgir.
Happy enough at your dinner, but sorrowful when at work.
"If any would not work neither should he eat."—II. Thess. iii. 10.

Khónah manzah wukus.
Separate from eating.
A quarrel in the house; father and son will not eat together.

Khónah myúth tah horanah tyuth.
Sweet to the taste but bitter to pay for.
Fly the pleasure that bites to-morrow.

Khétah, mallah, keistéh. 'Aúzu b'llah.
Dítah, mallah, keistéh. Naúzu b'llah.

O mullah, eat something. (Ans.) Let me fly to God.
O mullah, give something. (Ans.) God defend us.

Khómúth paínsah wópas dyun chhuh dándas barábar.
To give back a paisá that has been eaten, is equal to losing it.
An "eaten paisá" means a spent paisá.
Persian.—Zar dádan barábar ján dádan.
Khét título.
The field must be always under the eye of the master (i.e., needs constant looking after.)
Mind your shop and your shop will mind you.

Khówin pánas tah thekán jahánas.
He eats to himself, and then makes a boast (of his grand dinner) to the world.
A selfish braggart.

Khóyíhek Tsrólís hórihek nah múlis.
He would eat a Tsról’s money, but would not pay (even) his father.
A man who will make money any way, but will not pay any one,
even, his own father.
For Tsról, cf. note “Kashírí kahái garah.”

Khidmat karizih nah Bátah gánas hati wahari dapós ner pánas.
Never serve a vile Pandit, for after a hundred years (service) he will tell you to go away.

Khizmat chhíh azamat.
Service is greatness.

Khojah inyíh wín tah dégilav sán.
The Khojah sat in his shop among the pots.
Carpenter with tools, but no work, &c.
Shopkeepers make a great display of pots, although sometimes there is nothing in them. A very poor Khojah is here supposed, all of whose pots are empty.

Khojah chhuh Khushi karán kih náchuv chhum gátul; níchuv chhus pánah diwín kih nolú chhum be-akl.
The Khojah is happy in the thought that his son is wise; the son is reproaching his father for his foolishness.
Gulistán, chap. VI.—Khirája sháhi’ karaan ki farzandam ’áqil ast o pisar ta’na zanán ki padaram furtút ast.

Khojah chhuh pathuí tah pív wot bónth.
The Khojah is behind, but news of him has come on before.
News beforehand.

Khojah Háji Bándiyas suét mujih bójwat.
To go shares in a radish with Khojah Háji Bándi.
Little people cannot afford to speculate, though there may be every chance of making a lot of money quickly.
Khojah Háji Bándí was a great man in Srinagar. One day he saw his son playing with the greengrocer’s son, and noticing that the other boy had a nice shawl on, he went off straight to the greengrocer and said: “Look here. I see that your business is thriving, and so would like to do something in ‘your line’ for myself. Will you go partners with me? Will you give me rupees 1,000, and allow me to spend the money in radishes? I also will give rupees 1,000, and we will share the profits half and half alike.—You know how these vegetables pay for growing.” The greengrocer agreed and paid the money. Radishes were purchased to the extent of rupees 2,000 and planted. When the month of February came round, the two partners determined to take up their radishes, but, alas! they were every one a failure. The poor greengrocer was ruined, whilst the wealthy Khojah simply lost a little money.

Khojah Momnmu thul, kah heni tak bah kanani.
Khojah Mom’s egg; buy at the rate of eleven and sell at the rate of twelve.

A non-paying concern.

Khojah Mom once brought up eleven melons with him from Baramula direction, to sell in Srinagar. On reaching the custom-house he was obliged to give twelve melons as a tax for his eleven melons. He gave the eleven melons and then went and sold his blanket to purchase another melon to give the toll-taker. Things were carried on in a very loose way in Kashmir in those days. Khojah Mom then went and sat down by a cemetery and would not allow the people to bury their dead without first giving him some money. In the course of a few days the king’s son died and a great company, including the king, went to bury him. When the crowd reached the burial-ground, the Khojah went forward and said, “I cannot allow you to bury the body.” The king enquired, “Who are you to speak thus?” The Khojah answered, “I am the queen’s brother-in-law.” “Bah ekhós rékáhkind kahar.” When the king heard that, he begged the Khojah to permit the burial of the body, and gave him a large present in money. On the king’s return to his palace he told his wife about the relation whom he had met in the cemetery, and she replied, “O king, how stupid you are! Did you not know that men only have hahars—not women?”

A wealthy man, the Khojah now began trading again, and used to buy eggs at the rate of eleven and sell them at the rate of twelve. Cf. “story of the villager who, going to sell his eight brinjals in a village where there were nine headmen, returns minus vegetables and basket, because he had to conciliate the headmen with a brinjal apiece, and the ninth with the basket,” given in “Notes on some Sinhalese Proverbs and Stories in the Atita-Yákya-Dipaniya,” by A. M. Senánáyaka.

Hahar is Kashmirí for the Hindustání sálá.
Khojah, nun til kohi?
Khojah, what's your salt and oil?
Cited by people when asked to do something beyond their power.
A Khojah through change in the prices of things lost all that he possessed. For some time, however, until his case was thoroughly known, the people came as usual to enquire the prices of his goods. The poor old man would sit at the back of his shop and cry, "Humph! What's your salt and oil?"

"Khojah si gāmah han niyihawah." "Asi trov pōnai."
"O Khojah, you were turned out of your little village."
"(Oh, no,) I left it of my own accord."
Salvá dignitāte.

Khojah tih moēl tah tsūs tih baleyih.
The Khojah died and got relief from his cough.
Death puts an end to all troubles.

Khojah, tsah tih yik nah, tah bah tih samakhai nah zah.
O Khojah, you will not come to me, and I shall never see you again.
Lamentation over a corpse.

Khojah wagavi kēyih mukimōnah, tah Khojah wagavi kanik tah mukimōnah.
If the Khojah buys a mat, it is a fee, and if the Khojah sells a mat, it is a fee.
Khojahs are very sharp in striking a bargain.

Khojah, wuthū tshun tah sudah kumik.
O Khojah, take a leap. What's the good?
Look before you leap.

"Khojah, wulush." "Suh tulūn pōnah pathrah."
O Khojah, (give me) the remains of your dinner. (Another man replies, What is the good of asking him?) He himself even picks up (a piece, if it falls upon) the ground.
A stingy person.

Khokhar Mirun bror.
Khokhar Mir's cat.
Too lazy to do it himself.
It is said concerning this cat that it would scratch the ground immediately on seeing a mouse, as if to inform its master that there was a mouse about, if he liked to try and catch it.
Khoran nah kāṁsh tah Pūshi nāv.
No shoes for her feet, and yet her name is Pūsh.
Kāṁsh—a kind of shoe having high iron heels, and the uppers lessening towards the heels, worn only by the very respectable class. Pūsh is a grand name.

Khoran nah khrāv tah Padmāni nāv.
Not a patten even for her foot, yet called Padmān.
Padmān is a Hindus female name of great honour. The Padmāni or Padmini (Sanskrit) are the most excellent of the four grades into which womankind is divided by the Hindus. Abu’l Fazl thus describes her:—“Padmān, an incomparable beauty, with a good disposition; she is tall and well proportioned, has a melodious tone of voice, talks little, her breath resembles a rose, she is chaste and obedient to her husband,” &c. The name Pāmpūr (chief town of the Wīhū pargannah, Kashmīr,) is supposed to be derived from pādum, a lotus, and pūr, city, hence, “the city of the lotus” or “the place of beauty,” from the beauty of its inhabitants; which must have very much degenerated of late years.

Khosah khōn.
Khosah’s dinner.

When a lot of men are hired for one work, so that the work may be quickly accomplished, people say “Khosah khōn” style.

A certain king made a great feast for all his subjects, and commanded them all to appear on a certain day, except the one-eyed people and those who had not beards (i.e., big beards, the Khosah folk). Everybody obeyed, and each had placed before him a great tray of food of about six sers in weight. The order was that each man was to finish his trayful on pain of punishment. This was a difficult matter. A Khosah, however, who had made up for his deficiency by an addition of a little goat’s hair, was equal to the occasion. He suggested that they should all gather in small companies around the trays and eat their contents one after another. In this way the royal order was fulfilled.

A variant of this story is as follows:—

A great man had married his daughter, and as is customary on such an occasion, he made an immense feast. He invited one hundred people, but ordered that only men who had beards should attend. However, a Khosah, sticking goat’s hair upon his chin and face, determined to go.

Now the bride’s father, being very anxious that his wish should be carried out, himself stood at the entrance door and tried the beards of the guests as they passed in. The Khosah feared the examination; so when the time came for him to have his beard pulled, he begged that that appendage might be left alone, as nearly one hundred people had passed in and were found to be thorough bearded men. The host, supposing him to be some great man —perhaps the father of the bridegroom—allowed him to go by without a trial.

Twenty large dishes of food were provided for the guests, and as a good dinner such as this, was not to be obtained every day, the Khosah suggested that they should finish the dishes, and the only way to finish them, was for them all to stick at one dish until they had got through it, and then go on to the next, and so forth, until the whole twenty dishes were completed. The plan succeeded.

The Rev. A. W. Burman, in a most interesting article contributed to the "Church Missionary Intelligencer" for October, 1883, and entitled "Notes on the Sioux Indians," thus writes:

"During their sacred feasts a curious law is enforced. Each person is compelled to eat whatever may be set before him, no matter how great a portion he may receive, or else pay some one of the company to do so for him. Not a scrap of food must remain uneaten when the company breaks up. As no invitation to such a meeting can be refused, and there may be occasionally, two or three in a night, at each of which a bountiful help will be served, this must prove a somewhat formidable rule."

Khotan wits pulan tah koishih badai chhès ati.
Khotan had arrived to grass shoes, but a little shoe was in her walk and manner.

A person considerably reduced pecuniarily, but who still continues the same high manner and extravagant way of living.

Khudá chhuh thulas zú diván.
God makes the egg to live.

Have faith in God.

Khudá chhuh diván tshali ȳ̂ le lali, nahl teh zaminih tali.
God gives without our knowing or working, or else from out of the ground.

Khudáyih sund pùwer, yami ȳ̂ tih áwur.
God dwells, where he has taken possession.

Khudáyih sunz khar tah návidah sund phush.
God's scab, and the barber's rubbing.

To trouble a man, whom God has terribly afflicted.

Kashmiris suffer very much from a disease called scald-head (favus).

Khunts pèth khunt.
Misfortune after misfortune.

Khur ai ùsìh bikkul sèf totih ìsanì hat phèpharah.
If a scabby head be perfectly clean, still there remains a hundred pimples upon it.

A great man who bears traces of his previous mean estate.
Khuri tih ząyun tah wálah-wúshih tih.
A fishing-net, a lying-in-wait, and a net spread for the bird.
   Per fas et nefas.

Khru, Shor, tah Mandak Pal; manzág chhus Ludawis nár.
Khru, Shor, and Mandak Pal; in the middle of them Ludu is burnt by fire.
   Shekhi Nu-rud-din cursed the village of Ludu, because the inhabitants were once rather uncivil to him. In consequence of his curse, eyery year some houses in this village are destroyed by fire.
The natives, both Muhammadans and Hindús, are terribly afraid of the curses of their saints and religious leaders. Only a few months since I witnessed the burning-down of a house at Púmpur, which had been cursed the previous evening by a Jogi, because the owner would not give him some wood for a fire. The Jogi was present at the time, and from his manner and a few hints which I picked up on the occasion, I am almost convinced that the Jogi was the incendiary.

Khyun dyun pulay tah athak chhalun grumit.
Giving puláv to eat and cow's urine to wash the hands in.
   To nullify the good done by abuse of word or look.

Khyun' gatshih teuthuí yuth báyi. khush yiyih.
Dinner must be eaten in a manner pleasing to the other.

Kibras chhuk násh.
Destruction to pride.
   Pride goes before destruction.

Kijih peth kájiwat; welijih peth wukhul.
A pestle upon a peg, and a mortar upon a clothes-line (will not hold, but will tumble).
   A man appointed to a work for which he is in every way unfitted. A weak man thrust into temptation. Prendre la lune avec les dents.

"Kisar bóríáyí dalis dul den."
"The barley stained the hem of the garment. Clean it."
       Shiva Kák was a Pandit of very high family and great learning.
In course of time he was appointed overseer of the village of Wutrus in the Kothiáh district. His duty was to collect H. H.
the Maharájah's share of the grain in that village. Once when the harvest was over and the grain all gathered in he invited the villagers to come to him to the granary, where he would give them each one his share of the produce of the season. When the disbution was over, and while he was returning to his house, somebody noticed that his clothes had been stained by the dirty grain and asked him to shake it off ("Śūra śūrayāt caulis dhat dhat"). On this remark the thought struck the Pāṇḍū, what an unprofitable busi-ess this was, and thence his mind took flight into loftier regions.
"Behold," said he, as though to himself, "Behold, O heart, the state of affairs. Here am I, who all this day have been giving away, returning, as I came, empty-handed, may, worse than empty-handed, for my garments have become stained. Listen, O heart, thus will it be with you. When you die you cannot take any thing with you. Empty-handed you arrived; and empty-handed you will return; moreover, you will repent your birth, because in this life there is naught but sorrow and pain." Therewith he tore his clothes from off his back, and went to live in a near his village, there to give himself up enti-early to austerities. Attracted by his devotions the goddess Umā (Pārvatī) appeared unto him in a dream, and said how pleased she was with him, and promised that he should know more and more of things divine; and as a guarantee for these words three springs arose in that place, by the which if any person in sickness or trouble offered the sacrifice of Homa (a kind of burnt-offering, the casting of ghi. &c., into the sacred fire as an offering to the gods), he, or she, would be immediately rid of these things.

On awaking from his sleep, Śiva Kāk saw the three springs, and while engaged in worship close by them, behold! several apsaras (beautiful female dancers from the Court of Indra), came and sang to him and played some heavenly music.

It was some time after this that a famine arose in the country; and great was the distress of the people. There was no rain; and harvest-time came, but there was no grain to gather in. Thousands upon thousands of the poorer classes perished, and the corpses of horses and cows and sheep and goats were to be seen stretched out in every direction. The ruler of the country was very much graced, and thought of several plans for the relief of the people, but what could he do against the great monster "Famine!" One night, however, he sent for his minister, and asked him with much expectation what he would advise, and whether there was not a religious mendicant, to whom they could apply. "Yes," replied the minister, "there is one called Śiva Kāk, who resides in the jungle, a good and holy man and in favour with the gods." On hearing this the ruler went to Śiva Kāk and worshipped before him,
"Wherefore came ye hither?" said the faqir. "For this reason," answered the ruler, "that my country is dying from lack of rain.
O pray ye that rain may descend and water the ground." Whereupon the faqir bade him to make a burnt-offering (Homa) unto the gods, and promised him that then it would rain. The ruler did so, and the rains came and replenished the parched lands, so that they yielded food again, and the people lived.
There are other tales concerning this man—one especially good, wherein the king is said to have sent to seize this Shivā Kāk, because he was so very holy, and got his prayers answered so quickly; but as soon as the king's messengers drew near, lions and bears came forth from the hills to devour them, &c., &c.

Koh koṭvaḥ tah yur subadōr.
Mountain the police-officer, and pine-tree the district-officer.
No government. Everybody does as he likes.

Kolīk kośīvat khasīh nah hukh.
The pestle will not come forth dry from the river.
A poor fellow, who has a case in the Court.

Kolīk khutah koṭ tarani.
One river is colder than the other.
Out of the frying-pan into the fire.

Kolīk īshunān chhuk āśān tah kāūrun mushkil.
It is easy to throw anything into the river, but difficult to take it out again.
Easier to fight than to conciliate; easier to give than to take.

Kom gayih hubi, "durah" kurus zih gayih.
Work has become a dog, and "durah" has frightened it away.
A workman afraid to undertake a certain work.
_Durah_ is a word spoken sharply to frighten dogs away.

Korōn hande tēlie gorōn gruvit kāmāni gav.
The daughters' stars were so unlucky that the milkmen got only a little, even, of the cow's urine.
A daughter, born under an unlucky star, so hard to get married.
Hindūs have a custom of washing their daughters' hair with milk and cow's urine two days before the marriage.

Korīk hund batah gav dorīk hund gēs.
The daughter's dinner is as dirt in the streets.
It is thought most despicable to depend upon one's daughter's husband for a living.

Korīk lokh gayih torih dāb.
To have one's daughter abused is like receiving a blow from an adze.

Krūlasān chhuk khund bānāh āśān.
To the potter a broken vessel.
The washerman with a dirty shirt on; the cobbler, &c.
Krām ehhiā pūm zil tsaq yi'rīh?
Is krām a reproach that one should become angry, when another calls him by it.

Krām, a nickname. A name which has been added to the original name by reason of the man's special calling, or because of some peculiar circumstance which has occurred to him. For instance:—There was a very respectable citizen of Srinagar, by name Jāfār Mīr, who had a beautiful pear tree growing in his court-yard. One day during a heavy wind this tree fell down, and in its fall wounded Jāfār Mīr's grandfather, who unfortunately happened to be sitting under it at the time. Henceforth Jūng, which is the Kashmīrī for a pear, was added to his ordinary name by the common folk; and even to the present day the third generation are thus named.

Totā Rām, who now has the supervision of H. H. the Mahārájāh's mules, is never called Totā Rām, but Totā Khuchchar.

Jūni Wātul is thus invariably called, because he happens to be the clerk of accounts to the wātul or sweeper class.

Sahaz Chhān, i.e., Sahaz the carpenter is so called from the reason that one of his predecessors for a short time helped a carpenter in his book-keeping.

Darim Kāndur is the name of the Pandit, who accompanies the baker's coolie on his rounds with the bread-basket every morning. Kāndur is the Kashmīrī for baker.

Tālib Kalah is a well-known character in Srinagar. Kalah means a head, and this word was added to the family name by the common folk, when Tālib's father, who was a Naqqāsh, or painter, tumbled from off the ladder, upon which he was standing and decorating the roof of the Shālimār Bāgh pleasure-house, and very severely bruised his head.

Hājī Muhammad Sādiq came to this country from Bombay six years ago, or more. He brought a parrot with him; that was sufficient. From the moment that this was known everybody called him Totā Hājī.

Nearly every person I have met with has a krām, with which the majority are not at all pleased. I can only account for the extreme frequency of these nicknames from the fact that there are so many people of one and the same name, and a difference sometimes must be made.

Kranjilih, kranjilih, poun sīrūn.
To take up water in a basket.
To draw water in a sieve.

Krayiḥ khutah ehhuḥ insīf.
Justice is better than worship.
Kruhun batah tah chhut Ḍum tah wazul Musulmán.
A black Ḍaulit, a white Ḍum, and a red Musulmán (are wicked, deceitful, characters).

Kruhun ubur gar gar kare; chhut ubur dare nah zah.
Suslar mór kare; wál kare nah zah.
The black cloud will only thunder, the white cloud will never stop raining.
The malicious man will fight, but without giving an answer
(i.e., he will not smite openly, not just at once, he will not retaliate at the time, but will wait until he gets a quiet opportunity).
Persian.—Az abri isafed bitars o az ādam o wām.
Az abri sigīh matars o az ādam o wām.

Kub-kul kus? Mutkh hund tulah kul.
Which is the crooked tree? Muṭ’s mulberry-tree.
Who is the fag? The badly-paid, hard-worked junior servant.
Gopāl Muṭ had a garden, in which was a stumpy and crooked mulberry tree. All the boys and girls of the neighbourhood were wont to come and annoy Gopāl very much by climbing his tree. It would sometimes be filled with children, singing and shouting, and making a great noise. In short this tree was a source of nuisance to Gopāl and everybody around. The regular reply to the question, “Where shall we play to-day?” was at “Gopāl Muṭ’s mulberry-tree.” Every little boy or girl could climb it, it was so small; and nearly every child in the neighbourhood did.
The above saying is frequently cited by the under-servant in any establishment, who is constantly imposed upon by the other servants.
They are so small in years and inferior in position, that everybody feels a perfect right to send them there, or command them here, or to tell them to do this, that, or the other thing.

Kubis lat dawāb.
A kick is as medicine to the crooked old man.
’Tis false mercy to try and patch up an old, decrepit man.

Kuchē-ḥünk hünk hynū.
Like a kuchē—boatman’s mortar.
A fat man.
Kuchē-ḥünk, a class of boatmen who pound rice at so much the kharwār for the great folk in the city. They keep boats to carry about the rice in.
“Kuduris nishk dol kothah kudut?” “Yii dupnam rih tii kurum.”

“How do you manage to spend your days with this passionate man?” “Whatever he says to me I do.”
Anything for peace and quietness.

Kukaran mukhatah chhakan.
To scatter pearls for the fowls.
Casting pearls before swine.

Kukaras kuno zanig.
But one leg to the fowl.

A certain master-in-trade gave a fowl to one of his apprentices to kill for him. The young fellow killed it and cooked it; but being exceedingly hungry he was tempted to break off one of its legs and eat it. When the fowl was placed before the master, he enquired the reason of there being only one leg. The apprentice replied that the bird must have been born so. The master became very angry and went about the room beating the young man and saying,

“Where is the leg? Where is the leg?”

One day, when there was a great storm and the wind blew fierce and cold, a cock belonging to the master was observed to be standing on one leg only. The apprentice was delighted to see this, and went at once and called his master: “Sir, sir, there’s another fowl of yours with only one leg.” The master went outside, picked up a little stone, threw it at the cock, and cried “hish-hish-h,” and the cock at once put down the other leg. “There, you fool,” said he to the apprentice. “Ah,” replied the young man, “you didn’t throw a stone at that other fowl.”

The Kshmri Pandit who told me this tale does not know a word of English and extremely little Hindustani. I particularly asked him where he had heard it. He said that he didn’t know, but that he had heard it when he was a little boy, about thirty years ago.

Kukor dapun “Mil kyah roh!
Batah thalum dyuttun phuh.”
The hen says what a wrong I have done!
I have given heat to ducks’ eggs.
An ungrateful protégé.

Kukor karih na mén tah putton kyah karih?
Of course the hen would have self-respect (if she could); but what would the chickens do?

A good and respectable man overwhelmed with a large family, or rather degraded by it, i.e., he has to seek some inferior situation for the boys, because he cannot afford to teach them a profession, &c., or else he has to steal, and lie, and take bribes.
Kukūr tachhān tah pūti hōchhān.
The hen scratches and the chickens learn.
As the old cock crows the young ones learn.

Kukūrih hinzhī latīh chhih nah pūti marān.
Chickens do not die from the hen’s kick.
Spare the rod and spoil the child.

Kukūrih dine batak thulo tāh kavah zānak “titī tī?”
O duck’s egg, hatched by a fowl, when will you know “titī tī?”
Don’t interfere in matters unknown to you.
Titī is the call to fowls at feeding-time.

Kukur ai khiyu khur, totih sapadih nah khur.
If a fowl eats a kharwār, it does not appear (in the bird becoming bigger).
If a man of low birth becomes rich, he does not become great.

Kukur ai thawizān muktah dēras manz tātih tīh hōyih tachhūn.
If the fowl should deposit a pearl in a heap, there even will it be scratching.
The man who, for his purse, or his stomach, will do any meanness.

Kukur gatsikah bāh truk?
Could a fowl become 12 traks in weight?
Can such a man ever become great? No.

Kukur yak kas haif du kas.
A fowl is enough for one man, but for two it is nothing.

Kulah pūthi zuhn dafā.
From the very beginning oppression is overcome.
God is the beginning of the world; the king is the beginning of the kingdom; the husband is the beginning of the house—if anything goes wrong, these and nobody else can right it.

Kulis khasit guṭah rūh.
To climb a tree and spread mud over the trunk.
To promote a man and afterwards degrade him.
It is a favourite amusement among the villagers to climb a tree and then get the trunk plastered with mud. This causes them to come down with a run, and not unfrequently they are hurt by the sudden shock.
Kuni hat chhêh nah gajih tih dazân.
A single stick upon the hearth does not burn.
A man is no good alone.

Kunih gabi'h muthî läj.
A vessel of muth for the one ewe.
A spoilt only child.
Muth is a species of leguminous plant.

Kunih gabi'h shál.
The jackal (attacks) a single ewe.
An only child will die.

Kunî läj phentane; aku phash tah rentane!
Just enough to go round once and yet he fastens it like a grand pagri; only just one stroke (in the water would clean it), but he wants soap-nut for it!
A poor man with great ideas and expensive wishes.

Kunû thâng yap jân, phut bharit khâm nai; garah andarih sun jân, gâmah andarih zâm nai; wuparah sunz lêk jân, piturih sunz pâmînai.
A single ripe pear is better than a whole basketful of unripe pears; a second wife in the house is better than a zám in the village; a stranger's abuse is better than a cousin's curse.
Zâm is a daughter's husband's sister.

Kûr bu'dunás tah tser papanas chhêh nah kihñ tih lagân.
In a girl's growing and in an apricot's ripening there is no delay.
Kashmiris say that girls grow faster than boys. The growth of the latter is hindered very much by anxieties, &c.

Kûr chhêh ásanás chhenráwán tah nah ásanás mana-chháwán.
A daughter lessens the wealth of the rich man, and is a cause of shame to the poor man (i.e., it costs a lot of money to get her married into a suitable family).

Kûr chhêh khûr.
A daughter is as a heel (i.e., a great hindrance).
Kur dizih nah Ishibare.
Trust him but be wary.
Sirijih khasis naivik gare.
Do not give your daughter to a man from Ishibari;
Because there she will die from hunger.
There the sun rises after nine garis.

Garí is a space of time equal to our twenty-four minutes. The mountains hide the sun from the village until a late hour.

There is a very famous spring in Ishibar, called Gupta Gangá, after Guptanatsarí, a rikhi, a very holy Hindú. He was so holy that he frequently visited Gangá, and Gangá was so pleased with the trouble which he underwent to see her frequently, that she one day said to him, "You suffer much to see me; now I will go and visit your village." Guptanatsarí asked when she would come and where he should meet her. She replied, "Throw your cup into me and get to your house. Wherever you see this cup again I shall be there."
The man threw his cup into the water and went his way. On reaching his village the following day he saw his cup floating about in a little spring, wherein he at once bathed.

There is a great festival in honour of this spring every April. II. II. the Maháríjah has just issued an order for six temples to be built in Ishibari for the priests, &c., in connection with this spring.

Kur gayih lorih rus piyádah.
A daughter is like a runner without his stick.

These piyádahs or chobdaras give their orders showing their sticks, and then the demands, &c., are paid. The chobdar is of little authority without his stick.

Kur, kur, karán pananik garih tah thul tráwán líchah handik garih.
Crying "kur kur" in your own house, but laying eggs in the house of another.
Kur kur is the chuckling of a hen.

Kurí, dilsmak géri gáman, tári khanjih losai kanjih tsápán.
O girl, I gave you to singhárá villages, but your jaws are tired with chewing the shells.

Apparently a good marriage, but it turned out to be a most unfortunate one.

Singhárá villages.—Villages wherein those people live who gather this water-chestnut. The Singhárá is found in the lakes of Kashmir. It ripens in the month of October, when it is gathered by the people in enormous quantities. (Cf. "The Abode of Snow," p. 377.) These people are called gāri-hānz. The nuts are sometimes fried with butter, and eaten with salt and pepper, but generally they are crushed into a flour or meal, of which cakes are made. These cakes are eaten with gūf and salt, &c. To the gāri-hānz these water-chestnuts serve as a substitute for rice.

Kuti kultur.
The room fowl.
An oves-dropper.

Kutsamut hin hyuh rud daryāvas manz bud pānah khut buḱ tah barin lūl.
Like a wet dog if he remained in the middle of the river he got drowned; and if he climbed the bank he wetted the people.
A man who is doing no good for himself or for others.

Kutsuri khyos budah hāni sandih hūsah.
The pup bit the man at the old dog's incitation.
A great, respectable, man never beats a refractory servant, but always gets another servant to do it for him.
Has, an exclamation for stirring up a dog to fight.

"Kutī gatshak, giliye?" "Berik, berik, khwik."
"Kihai karinih, giliye?" "Thulun dinih phal."
"Kotīyāh cihī, giliye?" "Kah kih nah bah."
"Akāh ditai, giliye?" "Putrah mūz kainh."
"Kihai gok, giliye?" "Khudāi lutuk rāh."
"Where are you going, O water-fowl?"
"Along the path to the field."
"What are you going for, O water-fowl?"
"(Going for)—to sit on my egg."
"How many are they, O water-fowl?"
"Eleven, or twelve (they may be)."
"Give one to me, O water-fowl!"
"By my son's life, I have none."
"What's become of them, water-fowl?"
"God has destroyed them."

Distress.
A woman bereft of her children—any person at all miserable—is often heard chanting those lines in a most melancholy tone.
Kyeh gav Harih Tsandar Rázanih rane!
Lutásh thawun péth kane;
Topih núth bosagune.
Sonah túnk chih khowán zálahwone.

What has happened to Hari Chandar, the Rája’s wife!
She has placed Lutásh (her son) upon a stone;
And he has died from the bite of a snake.
And the “káwij lúk” are taking golden paisás for the burning.

Chanted in a most melancholy tone by the Hindús in time of great trouble.

Most Bráhmans can tell folio upon folios of stories concerning this Harischandra, who was once ruler over the whole world; and then by way of alms parted with his wife and child and kingdom. It was after his separation from his wife, that the poor woman, now obliged to go into the jungle and cut her own wood, once laid her child upon a big stone, while she clomb a tree to cut off some of its branches, that a snake came forth from the grass and bit the boy, so that he died. Shevya was the wife’s name, and the child’s name was Lutásh or Rohitáswa. Great was the grief of the woman, who somehow got back to her first husband Harischandra and told him what had occurred. Harischandra became overwhelmed with sorrow, and caring no longer to live, he at once went and sold himself for “sonah túnk, i.e., the golden paisás wherewith to pay the “káwij lúk (or burners of the dead) to burn his son’s body.”
Labah kolanik kanadarih.
The tassel on the roof of Labah Kol's house.
This man built a house so high that a man on the roof of it could not hear any one in the court below, let that man shout as loudly as he was able. It is a Kashmiri custom to affix wooden tassels to each corner of the roof by way of ornamentation.
Cited when a man does not hear or accept.

Lal shinasi zanih lalaoh hadr.
A ruby-dealer will know the worth of a ruby.
A bon chat, bon rat.

Lalan mulah mul.
Price upon price (i.e., a great price) for rubies (but not for this article).
It is to the interest of the buyer to depreciate the goods in question.

Lantsh budan tah pulahari phirun.
The eunuch gets old and weaves grass shoes.
Hard times for the old people who have not been able to save for their old age.
Grass shoes, or rather sandals, are worn by the poorer classes in Kashmir.

Lantshah garik sutuk.
Sutuk in the house of an eunuch.
An extreme improbability.
The sixth day after a Hindú child's birth birch-wood is burnt in the house, and a lighted piece of it is passed around the head of the child and of all the persons present. This is the work of the midwife, and the custom is called sutuk in Kashmir. After this purificatory act the mother is allowed to leave the room for a short time, &c. Cf. Sanskrit word "sâtak."

Lantshas mal hatik tah nal.
An eunuch's property consists in his (jewelled) throat and (embroidered) garment.
These eunuchs, who are all Muhammedans, are hired to sing at weddings or weep at funerals. They get a lot of money sometimes, but generally spend it all in jewels and embroidery work.
are very particular about the work around the "nál," literally, the border of the garment, called the "kurtah," round the neck and down the breast. Most extravagant work is lavished upon this part of their apparel.

Láph gutnim namph!
God forgive my boasting!

Often cited by the Kashmiri, when he has promised to do any work. He is afraid lest God should become angry at his pride and check him.

Lár khoshán pahas tah dákar tráwán lýśis.
He himself, eats the cucumber, and belches in the face of the other man.

An extremely selfish man.

Lár lorit tah kut.
To pull down a house for a room.

Cited when a thing costs more than it is worth.

Lárí kini Láhor.
To go to Láhor by way of Lár.

A roundabout way, on journey, or in work.
Lár is on the Ladák road.

There is a tale in Kashmir about a man who was once asked where his nose was. He did not reply by at once putting his finger on that organ and saying "Here it is," but he pulled up the right sleeve of his long cloak, and passing his right hand around his head, eventually and with great difficulty, touched his nose with it.

Laren háts tah hátsan butah.
A family is needed for the house and food is needed for the family.

An empty, desolate house, or a poverty-stricken family, or a man without knowledge, &c.

Latah liwan.
(Like a) spade for the feet to kick (and shove).

A butt for the master's anger, &c.

Láíh káníh Háshul.
A besom instead of a tail.

Turning good into bad.

Latiye wóthranth matiye ái.
O woman, you have come in a poor wretched state.

Natives are great swells when they visit their relatives. This is quoted when any person does not attend to this custom.
Lāv bud gayih sāv.
A young intellect is rich.
Lāv—a boy between the age of twelve years,—free from care, and able to devote himself entirely to study.

Lazan mazākb pāzān.
Unworthy people deserve to be played jokes upon.

Lōj tah tēkur chhēh kumī ; manzāg zālān pōtsiāh tul pān.
A lōj and tēkur are the same (i.e., both are made from earth, both are employed in the same work, both are heated in the same furnace, &c.), and the grass burns itself in the midst.
Be careful not to separate friends, lest in so doing thou destroy thyself.
Lōj and Tēkur are two earthenware vessels used in cooking: one is a little bigger than the other.

Lōj tih tsūr, gag tih tsūr.
The pot a thief, the fireplace, also, a thief.
All of these thieves together.

Lōjhīh milawān.
A sharer in the pot.
Close friendship.

Lēk chhēh nah tēk xih dalis lārih.
Abuse is not bird-lime that it will stain the hem of the garment.

Lēlis pharun chhūh phak.
To steal a pot is like a smell (certain to be detected).

Lochīh hanīh bud han.
A great matter from a little matter.
An angry word sometimes causes murder.

Log nah tah jog āw put phirit.
Couldn’t do the work—the lazy stupid fellow; and so he returned.
A man begins a work and is not able to finish it.

Lokachār chhūh bēbih nār.
Childhood is without care.

Bēbih nār, lit., fire in the bosom. Kashmiris whilst squatting on the ground in the winter time place their kāngārs under their long cloak next their skin. Give a Kashmiri a kāngār and he is perfectly happy. Hence the words “bēbih nār” come to mean without care.
Lokachár chhúi andahkár.
Childhood is darkness (i.e., the time for sowing wild oats).

Lokachár chhúi mokahjár.
Childhood is freedom.

Lokah hund katit nēthanun pān;
Lokah handih rachhit nēputrah pān.
Spinning for others, and one’s own back bare;
Nourishing other people’s children, and oneself childless.

Lokah hundih khándarah mēthar āradani.
To make one’s friends happy at the people’s wedding feast.
Dé aliēno corio liberális.

Lokah kunzi màje putrah dag pēiyai.
O, mother of the people, the pains of travail will come upon thee.
Cited to a lazy fellow, who eats the bread of another’s labours.

Lokah sunz har chhūl lokas diwai.
The wrangling of the people is the people’s pleasure.
Not a few quarrels in Kashmir are excited purely and simply for the sake of a tamashā.

Lokan kits wānti gāv, mēh kits shānti gāv.
For the people a cow with milk, but for me a cow that does not give milk.
“Everybody seems prosperous and happy except me.”

Lonchih lamun.
To pull the garment.
Asking a man to “pay up.”
Shopkeepers, and, especially, hawkers, frequently lay hold of a man’s “phēran” until he pays for the goods just purchased. A mission servant brought me a “tsādar” or wrap the other day, saying that he had seized it as the owner had not paid for a book bought from our city book-shop.

Lorih kuṭanis dastār gandun.
To bind a turban on the top of a small stick.
To give work to a man who is unflitted for it.
Lorik minit puł.
Measuring ğuțú with a stick.
A suspicious arrangement, because a properly marked yard measure is the proper thing.
ğuțú is a coarse woollen cloth manufactured in Kashmír. The cloth is washed like blankets are washed in Scotland, by trampling them under feet.

Lorik píthi saruf pilwun.
To extend a snake towards a man by means of a stick.
Any mean false trick played by a friend.

Lotúmanah sund tāhp.
The seal of Lotúman.
A man careless of his accounts.
Lotúman was a Kashmír banker of great fame and respectability, but most careless concerning his books. He would put his seal to any paper presented to him. The consequence was that he suddenly found himself bankrupt, and ended his days most sorrowfully.

Lúk nai ášik tah lud katíh gatchik paidal?
If there were no (young) people, whence would the old people be born?

“Young and old, this and t’other, Cannot do without each other.”

Lúsamatis láyun.
To beat a tired man.
A sick man ordered to work, or a tired man asked to go a fresh journey.

Lútas tah husas bājbat.
A partnership with plunder and uproar.
Machā ḍyāk khākh pāmpuri gat?
Will the fly understand the revolutions of the moth (around the light)?
A place for every man and every man in his place.

Mādav Bilawani shōnt han.
Mādav Bilav’s little piece of ginger.
A sprat to catch a mackerel.
Mādav Bilav was accustomed to squat down beside any man he might see cooking his food; and to give the man a little piece of ginger, expecting a good share of the meal in return.

Māg auwi drāg wurhū, Kāŋgrī.
Phāgun auwi zāgun tsoi, Kāŋgrī.
Tsithar auwi muthar piyoi, Kāŋgrī.
Wahēk auwi rahi kati, Kāŋgrī.
Zet auwi bret gayaik, Kāŋgrī.
Hār auwi lār laji, Kāŋgrī.
Shrāwun auwi yāwun sūrui, Kāŋgrī.
Badarpūt auwi wādār peyī, Kāŋgrī.
Ashid auwi kāsid sūzmait, Kāŋgrī.
Kārtik auwi nāraḥ-tik lazmait, Kāŋgrī.
Manjhor auwi konjiḥ lajai, Kāŋgrī.
Poh auwi toh luḍmai, Kāŋgrī.

January came and there was a famine for you, O Kāŋgrī.
February came and a plot was laid against you, O Kāŋgrī.
March came and you were put to a mean use, O Kāŋgrī.
April came and where will you abide now, O Kāŋgrī.
May came and you were thought a senseless thing, O Kāŋgrī.
June came and you were pursued, O Kāŋgrī.
July came and your youth was numbered, O Kāŋgrī.
August came and sickness fell to you, O Kāŋgrī.
September came and I sent a messenger for you, O Kāŋgrī.
October came and I placed a bit of fire in you, O Kāŋgrī.
November came and you were a matter of anxiety, O Kāŋgrī.
December came and I burnt, even chaff in you, O Kāŋgrī.
The Kângâr or Kânjâr, as it is generally called, is the Kashmiri portable fire-place. It generally consists of two parts, the inner earthenware vessel called kundal (somewhat like the charcoal-burner of Italy), wherein the fire is placed, and its encasement of wicker work, sometimes very pretty, being tastefully ornamented with rings and brilliantly coloured; a little wooden or silver spoon (tsâlan) tied to the handle (kânjh) completes this oriental brazier, which may be purchased in any Kashmiri bâzar for the sum of one anna and upwards according to the make and size. Should the kângâr consist merely of an earthenware vessel a little ornamented, it is then called a manan. These are principally used, I believe, in the Leh and Ladakh direction.

The best kângars are said to be made in Zainager, a big village in the Kamrâz district. Islâmâbad, Shâhabad and Sopûr are also noted for good kângars, which are very often called after the places where they are made, e.g., Islâmâbadî Kângar or Tsârî Kângar, &c. An ordinary peasant’s kângar, very rudely made, is called Grîsî Kânjâr, from grist, which in Kashmiri means a husbandman, while a finely-worked, highly coloured kângar used by the wealthier class is called Khojah kângar from the Persian Khâjah, which means a master, a gentleman, or man of some distinction.

Kângars are also to be met with in the bâzârs of those cities and villages, whether oppression and famine have driven the Kashmiris. I have heard of them at Badrawâh, Kashtawâr, Râm-Nagar, Bisauli, Nûrpûr, Kângâz, Amritsar, Ludiânâ and other places; but the kângars manufactured outside “the Happy Valley” always seem to be of a very inferior pattern and quality, and to be used by a very limited class indeed outside the Kashmiri emigrants.

The Kashmiri is very fond of his kângar, and wherever you see him, whether asleep or awake, at work or at play, sitting down, or walking, he has this little fire-place held in one hand underneath his loose, long, night gown-like garment called phûran, and in immediate contact with his stomach and thighs. As will be expected this very close familiarity generally proves very dangerous; a person is tripped up by a stone in the way and tumbles upon his red-hot kângar fire, or a child rolls in her sleep and upsets the fire-place, and burns herself, the bedding, house, and everything. There are really very few of the wealthier, middle, or lower classes who some time or another have not been more or less burnt from accidents with the kângar.

However, the kângar continues more popular than ever, and not a few songs and sayings in its honour are extant in the valley. There is no doubt that this portable brazier keeps off many a disease from the poor Kashmiri, when so terribly exposed as he is sometimes to the bitter winds, freezing rains, and biting hail—for King Winter now and again makes Kashmir the centre of his dominions and rules supreme there.
A story is told of a native doctor, who once visited the valley to see what his skill could do for the poor people there during the severe winter season. On reaching Baramula, the place where visitors change the horse, kahár and coolie for the boats, on their way into Kashmir, he noticed a boatman with only a loin-cloth on, squatting in his boat in the cold wind, and eating some cold food. The doctor thought that the man was mad and would certainly soon die. But the boatman had a kangár between his knees, and when the doctor on a closer observation saw this, he at once determined to return whence he came, saying, “The Kashmirí people have got their own antidote for their winter cold. There is no necessity for me to go there.”

It has been suggested that the Kashmirís learnt the use of the kangár from the Italians in the retinue of the Mughal Emperors, who often visited the valley, but no reliable particulars have as yet been ascertained. I have enquired from high and low, rich and poor, but no one can tell me anything, fact or fiction, as to who originated, and whence originated, this popular and necessary article. (Other particulars, concerning the derivation of the word Kangar and Kangri, &c., &c., may be found in my article published in the August number of the Indian Antiquary.)

Mági shin kunun.
Selling snow in the month of January.
An unseasonal work.

Mahárinih maájih patah kanih pitur boi.
Behind the bride is her cousin (on father’s side).
Take care. There’s an enemy present.

It is a wedding custom among Pandits, when the bride is taken to the house of the bridegroom, to place her in a lower room, while the bridegroom is in the upper room of the house. After a little time the sacred fire is kindled in the upper room before the bridegroom, and appointed portions from the holy books are repeated. Meanwhile the bride is brought to the upper room by her mother’s brother. Arrived in the room he sits behind her and is her “best man,” as it were; he sees that she is thoroughly concealed, gives to her the appointed meats and drinks at the stated times, and leads her around the sacred fire.

Great friendship exists between this uncle and the bride, but intense enmity between her and her father’s brothers’ sons. These two are constantly quarrelling concerning property and position, &c.

Mahárinih nah gukush tah wígi phirih mukush.
At the time of the wedding the bride had not a straw, but ten days afterwards, when she returned to her husband’s house her face was covered with jewellery.
Mukush is a preparation of gold and silver leaves, &c., which are plastered over the bride's face (ten days after the wedding, when she returns to her husband's house) making it look much like a model in tarnished silver. This is a Muhammadan custom.

Mahärinih nah wänkahpan tah wiği phirih länkaran.
At the time of marriage the bride had not even her hair plaited, but ten days afterwards, when she returns to her husband's house, she wears a länkaran.

Länkaran (Persian, Halyat; Sanskrit, Alankāra) a jewel or woman’s metallic ornament.

Ten days after the wedding the bride returns to her husband’s house splendidly dressed, richly jewelled, and with abundance of furniture and provisions, &c.

Mai tih ati tah mai-khánah tih ati.
Wine is here and wine-shop is also here.

Every thing at hand.

Máj karán "kúri, kúri"; kúr karán "rēnh, rēnh."
The mother cries, "daughter, daughter"; the daughter cries, "husband, husband."

Máj karín "shuri, shuri"; shur mah karín "máj, máj."
Let the mother say "child, child"; but let not the child say "mother, mother."

An orphan.

Máj tah kúr, tsakar tah lír.
A mother and daughter are like the handle and stick of a spinning-wheel, (necessary to one another;—and work together).

"Máj, tsah thawum kängar phukit, buh yimai wustas doh thukit."
"Ó mother, blow the kängar and set it for me; and I will come after my work with the teacher."

"Light the kängar for me, I will be back again presently," referring to the short time one is able to work during the dark winter months. Workmen come, just lay a few bricks, &c., and go again.

Wustah, a teacher, here means a master blacksmith, or bricklayer, or carpenter.
“Máj wuhawan chhum nah kaih.” “Watih pě́h bě́h tah dah zami wuhawanai.”

“Mother, nobody curses me.” Sit by the way-side (my son), and ten men will curse thee.”

They who live in public must expect to “rough it.”

Máji bādeyih tháji tih bādeyih.

When the mother becomes great, the pot, also, becomes great.
The expenses of a family.

Májih kar dandah-tuj tah shuri lhyav gósah khur.
The mother used a tooth-pick only, but the child ate a bundle of grass.
A mother’s utter unselfishness.

Májih kūtah kūrui bād.
The daughter is bigger than her mother.
Case greater than the original quarrel. Wages above the work.

Májih lęk, běníh lęk, korih lęk; tah kolayih nah lęk.
Abuse my mother, my sister, my daughter; but do not abuse my wife.
A Pathán saying. Patháns are especially particular concerning their wives.

Májih nah lachakah tah sitáras giláph.
The mother hasn’t a lachakah, but the guitar has its wrapper.
Cited against the man who has hardly means sufficient to keep body and soul together, and yet buys books and other dispensable articles.

Lachakah is the piece of woollen cloth that hangs down on the neck from the back of the head of a Muhammadan woman.

Majnun as parutshuk zih kihelásat kahanz chhě́h, Dūpnak, “Lailih hinz.”

It was asked of Majnun “Whom do you like?” He replied, “Lailih.”

Anybody or anything a man is especially fond of, is called that man’s “Lailih.”

Lailih Majnun—a famous Persian love story translated into Kashmiri by a poet called Muhammad Gámi.

Mákir tah kákir garin tah pharin, lů́jh nah bazin tshurui wih!

A garrulous, sharp, unconscientious and malicious woman, no oil in the pot,—only pride!
A woman who flatters herself that she is as good as her rich neighbour.
Makkah mēlih magar nakhaḥ mēlih nah.
Mecca shall be found but not your neighbour.
   Neighbours are constantly going to law about ground, &c.

Māl fitnah yā aulād fitnah.
Either trouble about one’s money or trouble about one’s children.
   If a man has money then he has not children; and if he has children then he has not money, because the children have swallowed it all up; in either case, however, man has trouble in this world.

Māl mast tah hāl mast sandih khutah chhuī nanyah mast be-parwā.
A naked man has less care than a man of wealth or a man of position.
   Much coin, much care; little goods, little care.

Māl-i-muṣṭ tah dil-i-be-rahm.
Property by gift and a heart without mercy.

Māl wuchhit zagtā.
Seeing (your) property give alms.
   Give according to your ability.
   Zagtā (Arabic, Zakāt) a portion of a Muhammedan’s property given in charity according to the rules laid down in the Qurān, cf. “Hughes’ Notes on Muhammedanism,” pp. 125-126.
   The Kashmiris have a story concerning one Lakshman Dar, an officer of the Kashmir government. He was one day eating pulāv when a jester was present to whom he gave a little portion. The jester disgusted with the meagre meal, and in order to make those present laugh, stuck a grain of rice upon a needle, and laying it outside his platter said, “Huṇi mit” i. e., the dog’s portion. On noticing this done in such a ludicrous fashion all the people laughed, including Lakshman Dar also. “Why are you such a fool?” they asked; whereupon the jester replied, “According to Lakshman Dar’s gift I have given (Māl wuchhit zagtā).
   Huṇi mit, lit., the dog’s handful. Hindus before touching their food take out two or three handfuls, as the case may be, and lay it on one side for the dogs to eat. The real idea of the custom, however, is an offering to Vishnu.

Mālas chhuḥ mol.
Price according to property.
   Good article, good price.
Máli Wētsār-nāghah tāh Bahwano, yas nah peyih dānas pēwino tōs kyah cchuh pānas rōwano!
O fathers Wētsār-nāgh and Bawan, what a sight! He who cannot afford to have a fire in his house, yet adorns himself for the festival.

Hindūs address their sacred places as fathers, because through them they think they obtain all blessings. Wētsār-nāgh is a sacred spring about three miles from Srīnagar towards the north on the Gangabal road.

Bawan also is a sacred spring—the most sacred in the whole valley. Near to the village called after this spring are the famous ruins of Mārtand or Maṭṭan.

Great religious fairs are held at both of these places at certain seasons of the year, and it is the custom of the Hindū people to appear at them dressed in their best and gayest clothes.

Mālis rāj tah muhtāj, bāyis rāj muhtāj; ranis rāj tah shēr tāj.
If my father has the rule then I want something, and if my brother rules I shall be in need; but if my husband rules then (I have got my heart's desire), I wear the crown.

Mallah dyuthum amalah karān, hūkas dapān kachh;
Gānūch khiwān alāi balāi, mūsfirās dapān mashidiḥ cchui yachh.
I saw a mullah performing his duty, and calling a cabbage grass.
Eating the sacrifice of the village, and saying to the traveller, "There is a hyæna in the mosque."
A selfish, hypocritical mullah.
Alāt balāt is the sacrifice offered to ward off, or abate, any pestilence, &c., in a place.
Mallah (Mullah) is a Muhammedan well-instructed in the Qurān, and generally a teacher or schoolmaster.

Mallah goi palah pēti poni ḍalit.
O mullah, (my words to you are like) water which trickles down off the rock.
In at one ear and out at the other.

Mallah har gayih palah har.
A mullah's fight is like a fight with stones (so bitter and unrelenting is it).
Mallas tuk chhôh m ashdih tûm.
A mullah’s “beat” is to the mosque.
“Matlab” carries us hither and thither.

Mâm thawiñ izzat tah gûm tih thawiñ izzat.
If an uncle honours (a man) the village will also honour (him).
A smile from those in authority is worth much.

Mâmâh-hilurah marano dûr nah tah bar no.
O Mâmâh-hilur you are worthy of death, there is neither shutter nor door.
You exaggerated,—you deceivèd me.
Mâmâh-hilur is the husband or wife’s mother’s brother.
A young woman was asked by her affianced husband’s mother’s brother to come and see her future home, which he described as very grand and beautiful. When the girl arrived at the place she found a very humble abode without even a shutter or a door.

Mân yâ mân bûh chhusai zorah mûzâmân.
Whether you consent or not, I will be your guest.

Mananih yiñiñ nah panani tah hahadûnas rûk.
A manan does not get sufficient for itself; how (then can it obtain,) flame for the hahadûn?
Manan is a kâñgrî without the wicker work.
Hahadûn is a big cone-shaped fire-place with holes in the top, through which they stir-up and blow the fire, &c.

Mandakhahan lûntsh tim khôwân natsi, natsi.
The eunuchs ought to be ashamed of themselves, yet they dance and eat.
A shameless person.

Mandakhhanos tannah-nannah.
Rejoicing in his shame.
Tannah-nannah, supposed to represent the sound of the Kashmîrfi cîthúrá. “Tom, tom, tom; tannah nûðir; tannan, tannan tannah nannah,” the instrument is supposed to say.

Mangawun ai tahwîzen t琅ah-wani andar tih karih mangamang.
If a beggar be placed in the midst of a grove of pear trees, there, even, he will beg.

“Habits are soon assumed; but when we strive
To strip them ’tis being flayed alive.”
A Kasmírí friend tells me a story of a beggar, whose son became a great man. However, his father still continued to beg. At last one day his son put the old man into a room and locked the door. At the regular times the servant carried food to him; but it was too much for the old man, who had been accustomed for so many years to stint himself, so he only ate a little of the dinner, and tied up the remainder in his clothes, crying “Yá Khudá,” “Thank God,” as he had been accustomed to do on receipt of alms.

Mangun tah mójíi pakun tah parisú.

Asking, even, from one’s mother, and walking, even, one step, are hard.

Mangun tah marun.

To ask (a favour) is to die (i.e., you put yourself under an obligation—you lose your independence).

Manžinih lëjih pánsú.

Six pounds weight of anything to a three pound pot.

A man in adequate to circumstances.

Manuṭ tah phambah dyonq tah háyuh barábar. i.e.

A three pounds weight and a ball of cotton and the scales are equal.

A sharp fellow without any principle, who will, and can, say or do anything to accomplish his object.

Manz atsun chhu hanz atsun.

To go between (i.e., to act as a surety) is to put your head into a mortar.

A certain man borrowed some money, and persuaded a friend to become surety for him. The mean man as soon as he had obtained the money spent it and ran away from the country. The poor surety was punished by having to keep a mortar upon his head for a certain time. “Manz atsun, chhu hanz atsun,” cried he, as the people going by laughed and jested at him.

Manz gam jishnah husih run garih.

Dancing and feasting in the village, whilst Husih Run (who has paid the expenses of the tamáshá) is indoors.

Cited when the very person who ought to be present, is not present.

Manz gani manzamis; kalah sardáras; laṭ gunahgáras tak becháras.

The middle portion (of the fish) for the middle-class man; the head for the host; and the tail for the sinner and the helpless.
Manz thaw tulit dud math athan. Shekh chhuh hákim.
Kathan chhuh höts.
Rub milk over the hands and take off the colour. The Shekh is ruler. There is fear of accusation from one's words.
Oppression.

Shekh Ímám-ud-dín hated the Hindús. One day, a day fixed for the celebration of a very grand Hindú wedding, he sent an order that no wedding was to take place. The people heart-sick and weary said the above words. This Ímám-ud-dín also forbade the Hindús to wear the tıká.
Manz is the Lawsonia inermis, the Indian Hinná, with which the people stain the nails of their hands and feet.

Már pêthu gilkár; ár khûni chhii tsuki nár; lûr khûni chhii shajár; zâras gindun khabardár; kûr zêni chhîi tabardár; nôchhu zûn chhû chhûi syûd dastûr.
One should build upon the bank of Már; eating ár is bitter like fire; eating cucumbers is cooling; beware of gambling; the birth of a girl is like a wood-cutter to you; but the birth of a son is as a straight turban.
Már is a canal which flows through the northern portion of Srinagar. It resembles the old canals in Venice. It is crossed by several ancient stone bridges and is fringed in many places with trees and festooned with vines.
Ár, Abû-i-Bokhâra, Prunus domestica.
Kûr zêni chhîi tabardár—Like as the woodcutter “brings down” the trees and cuts them up, so a daughter is a continual strain upon the father’s purse.
Syûd dastûr is an expression signifying prosperity.

Marahah tah garih chhum nûh kankh.
I would die, but there is nobody in the house with me.
“Whosoever is delighted with solitude is either a wild beast or a god.—Bacon.

Máranaka gatschân ásunî dyârah ñer tah yárah ñer tah batah dêr.
For quarrelling, a heap of money, plenty of friends, and abundance of food are required.
Money—to bribe and pay court fees, &c.
Friends—to swear falsely and back you up.
Food—to nourish and strengthen in these troublous times.
Maranas nah mokal tah mast kásanas nah fursat tah hárih nah zi.
No time for dying and no leisure for shaving (he is so busy), and yet he has not one cowrie's income.
Lots of work and small pay.

Máras márih, táras tárih, yáras khyáwihi tsuiť tah ŏang.
He will smite the man, who has to be smitten, will help the man who has to cross the river, and will feed the friend with apples and pears.
A man au fait at most things.
This is also a Kashmiri riddle, of which the answer is a stick.

Maras' tsong zálun goyú kih saras pamposh phulun.
To light a lamp in the house is like the flowering of the lotus on the lake.
A son is the lamp of the family.
Hindu saying.—Kul ko dipak putr hai; mukh ko dipak pan;
Ghar ko dipak istrī; dhar ko dipak pān.

Maratsah wángan khār ai khéyi ŏs kādih nah tyut chhuh sun tah saṅgin!
If he eats one kharwār of red pepper he will not smack his lips; so deep and philosophical is he!
An unexcitable disposition; semper idem.

Maraz galih wedah-wán ádat katih galih?
The disease will go by the doctor's shop, but the habit will never go.
Habit is second nature.

Maráz-o-Kamráz; shahr chhuh Yamráz.
Maráz and Kamráz; the city is Yamráz.
Yamráz is the city, where everything finds its way.
"O, everything in London."
These are the three great divisions of the valley. Maráz is the whole S. E. end. Kamráz is the N. and W. end and the water-shed of the Jhelum as far as its junction with the Krishna Gangá. Yamráz is the city of Srinagar, &c.

Mas pyav mas bánih, yēs pyav suí zánih.
Wine has fallen into the wine-vessel; that vessel knows (its strength, smell, &c.) into which it has fallen.
Experience is the best teacher.
Mas wunchih pēth nindar.
Sleep upon a wine-cask.
A man of property. In the lap of luxury.

Mat phutārit bobus!
Breaking a mat for a bobus.
Spoiling a good thing in order to make an inferior article. Mat is a large earthenware vessel. Bobus is a small earthenware vessel about the size of a slop basin.
The saying originated many years ago in this way. One day a child was playing fireworks with bobuses. He got some gunpowder and put a little into each bobus, and then ignited them. At one time he could not find a bobus, and so he broke up a mat and made something like bobuses out of the shreds. His father was very much shocked and said, "What breaking up a mat for a bobus!"

Matanas mashk.
Practising madness.
An unseasonable or impossible study.

Mātās tah kabri chhuk hisāb.
There is an account between the corpse and the grave.

Matēn hund dup chhui balāyan thup.
A madman's speech is a check to misfortune.
A madman's word, and a good man's word, are thought to be of equal value, because mad men are supposed by the common folk to be very good. Though they sin, the people say they do not sin; for they know not sin, but are like the beasts of the field.

Matis chhēch batani wīr.
A madman is only anxious about his dinner.

Matlab chhuk tsaṭān put-lab.
Matlab cuts the back wall of the house.
Any thing to accomplish his purpose.

Matṭanuk batah tah Paṭṭanuk Ḍumb.
The Matṭan Pandit and the Paṭṭan Ḍumb.
There was a Ḍumb from the village of Paṭṭan, who had to take a letter of the Kārdār's to the city. (Kārdār is the Hindū overseer of a village, a government official, whose business it is to see that H. H. the Mahārājāh gets his proper share of the grain.) The letter was delivered to the man at evening time, and he rose early the next morning to go to the city. It was so dark when he got up that he could not see what he was about, and so he put on the first garment that came to hand, thinking it to be his own. By the time the day dawned he had proceeded far on his journey, and the more sorrow for him that he had walked so fast and had so many miles to return, for he found that he had clothed himself with his brother's wife's long cloak instead of his own. He determined to run back as quickly as possible, because, said he, "I have sinned in that I have done this thing, and I must rectify it by all means within my power." So he went back to his house, quickly, changed his cloak, and started off the second time, and when he reached Srinagar, he carried the letter to its destination, and then went to Sōd, Lal Dēsḍ's teacher, and told him what sin he had unwittingly been guilty of; and asked him what he must do to atone for it. Sōd ordered him to visit a certain Brāhmaṇ who resided at Maṭṭān, and explain matters to him.

Now this Brāhmaṇ was a very bad character, and was at that time living with his brother's wife. When he heard what the Dumb had related to him, he fell into a paroxysm of grief, and kept on saying, "What a sinner I am! Here is this poor fellow in such a terrible state simply because he once put on his sister-in-law's cloak, whilst I, who am living day after day with my sister-in-law, do not have the slightest qualms of conscience." The Brāhmaṇ asked the Dumb wherefore he had come to him, and who had sent him. The Dumb replied that Sōd had told him to come. Then they both, the Brāhmaṇ and the Dumb, visited Sōd and asked his counsel. The Dumb was quickly dismissed with the order to perform some very small penance. The Brāhmaṇ was detained alone with Sōd for many hours. Sōd told him that the only atonement he could make for his enormous crime was to offer himself as a burnt-offering to the god. The Brāhmaṇ accepted the advice, ordered the pile of wood to be prepared, and was burnt.

It is written that if any man gives himself up to be burnt upon the pyre he shall ask anything that his heart may wish for at the time of burning, and it shall be granted him. Accordingly this Brāhmaṇ was enquired of as to what he liked. He answered, "I want you to give me some milk and some flesh." When Sōd heard his reply, he became exceedingly sorrowful, and said to the people who crowded around the burning man: "O people, this man will become a Muhammedan king, who will destroy all our idols and cast all our shrines down to the ground." This prophecy was fulfilled.

Sikandar, surnamed Butshikan, or Image breaker, was the sixth Muhammedan king of Kashmir and reigned in 1390 A.D. He destroyed all the Hindú temples and broke their idols into pieces; and when there remained not another temple for this monster to destroy, he determined to go to Amaranāth and break up the sacred emblem of Shiva, which is there in a cave. On arriving at Ganesha Bal on the way, he struck a blow at Ganesha (the son of Shiva by a daughter of Himālaya). There is a fragment of a rock here, which lies in the torrent of the Lēdur, and has been worn by the angry waters into what the imaginative mind of the Hindū discovers to bear a striking likeness to the head of an elephant, the representation of Ganesha;
—a trunk and a pair of eyes have been painted on by a native artist), and broke his knee. Blood flowed forth in such abundance from the wound that the whole stream was coloured by it. Seeing this Sikandar became very much frightened and left off his sacrile-gious works, and returned home.

Mattan, a celebrated spring of water in the village of Mattan or Bawan, near to which are the magnificent ruins of the temple of Mártand or the sun.

Paṭṭan is a little village in the Bángil parchana.

Matyav aneyih noshí, suh tih mateyih.
The mad men brought a daughter-in-law, and she also became mad.

Evil communications corrupt good morals.

Máyárámuni nosh.
Máyárám’s daughter-in-law.

A contrary person.

Máyárám’s daughter was celebrated for her contrariness. She always did the opposite to what she was told. Tell her to bring water, and she would bring earth, &c. One day a friend advised her father-in-law to order the girl to do the very opposite of what he wanted. Accordingly the man one morning asked her to jump into the fire. She went and drowned herself in the river, and there was an end of her; and the father-in-law lived happily ever afterwards.

Méh chham gámuts grattas tal phusi.
My hat is under the mill-stone.

A work to be done—no alternative.

Phusi is the cap of a Yach or Yech, the classical Yakshas. Some say that this cap is made from the skin of some animal—perhaps, the jackal; while others declare that it is perfectly white—and that is all one can know about it. This cap possesses wonderful powers.
It is a mist-cap (nebelkappe) by which the wearer becomes invisible (cf. Schwartz” “Der Ursprung der Mythologie dargelegt an griechischer und deutschen sage,” p. 247); and the person, who should be so lucky as to obtain one, can compel the rightful owner to do his bidding—to bring gold without stint, to furnish the rarest delicacies, and to remove the greatest difficulties.

The Yach or Yech, however, remains the humble servant of the possessor of his hat only so long as that precious article is kept safely either under a mill-stone, or under a vessel containing saldurkánz
(i. e., rice water kept in a ghará for several months until quite sour, and then cooked with salt and spices; and drunk, especially, during the hot season). From underneath these two things a Yach cannot remove his cap, though he could carry great rocks and with a brush of his hand clear away great streams, that his master might pass over without danger.

This cap has come into the possession of several people, who apparently have not failed to profit by it. These fortunate folk, if they are Hindús, have become distinguished into a separate community, and bear the title of Yach, as Kawal Yach, Gana or Ganesha Yach, Sokha Yach, Damúdar Yach, &c.

Much might be written, if needed here, concerning the ancient and modern idea of the Yach, his origin and general character, and many stories might be told concerning the seizing of this man or creature, whatever he may be. It is my idea to get these published in a separate book or pamphlet. Captain Temple has a few interesting notes on the Yach in the “Indian Antiquary,” Vol. XI., Pt.
cxxxvi. p. 260.

Mehar-i-áráí chhuh kahr-i Khudá.
A farmer’s love is like God’s anger.
Persian.—Yár i dih tá kár i dih.

Méhnatas chhóh mazúri.
Wages for labour.

Métras gobar zái, dushmanas zangih áí.
Sons are born to a friend, and they go to their (father’s) enemy and bless him.

General reply of an enemy to a friend, who wishes to be reconciled.

“Métro shéthar muduí,” “Métras tih chhuh marun,” “O friend, your enemy is dead.” Ans.—“The friend also will die.”

Death is every man’s debt.

Mewagari, munjigari, bégih bághwán.
Yim tróshawái chhíh Kaum-i-Marwán.
The fruiterer, confectioner and gardener, these three are a Quam-i-Marwán.(i.e., a dirtily clothed, wandering sort of a class.
Kaum-i-marwán.—Marwán was the ninth caliph of the house of Abbas. Some Kashmiris say “hál-i-hairán” instead of these words.

Miri miri phats.
From horses to asses.

The above is not the translation but only the meaning of the saying. Miri miri phats is a favourite game in Kashmir both amongst children and adults. Two holes are made in the ground, one about half-a-foot deep and half-a-foot in circumference called mir, and another close beside it, about two inches deep and two inches round, called phats. The players two, three, or six, as the case may be, range themselves in order at about a distance of two yards from these holes, and one after another try to fling a walnut into the big hole. If the first player succeeds he is called mîr, until some other player, also, gets in, when this other player is called mîr, and so on until the last mîr player. If however a player fails to get his walnut in, he is called plâts. When all have tried, the last mîr, who is the greatest man, collects all the walnuts from the other players, and holding them in both his hands together over the mîrî hole he lets them fall. As many as fall into the mîrî hole is his; but those, which chance to fall outside are gathered by the second mîr and dropped by him in the same manner. Should it happen that after all the mîr players have tried, there are still one or two walnuts left, which have not fallen into the mîrî hole, then the plâts player, if there is one, takes them, and holding them in the same fashion, but above the plâts hole, tries his luck. And so the game continues.

Mîrza Razâhun gûdah árah.
Mîrza Razâ’s necklace of fish.
A shameless man.
This man was a government debtor, and not being able to pay his debt, he was ordered by the king to parade the streets, wearing a necklace of fish. He did so, and after he had gone the round and reached his home, he took off the necklace, cooked the fish, and ate them.

Miskîn Shâhun ástán, brangâh thûd tah sharafî náh kinh.
Miskîn Shâh’s zîarat has a lofty tower, but there is no honour attached to it.
A wealthy, but an ignorant, low-birth man. A well-dressed fool. Zîarat is a place to which a pilgrimage is made.
Miskîn Shâh’s zîarat is a beautiful building in the Surah-ţenq division of the Kháňyár district of Srínagar.

Mîs ai tulak sun gatshunai.
If you pick up earth may it become gold to you.
A Kashmîrî’s blessing.

Mît punîl tah zît umr.
A pleasant sneeze and long life (to you).
A Kashmîrî blessing.
By a pleasant sneeze is meant a single easy sneeze, that does not give pain to the throat, or to the nose, or eyes. If such a sneeze happens when about any of the seven special works mentioned below, and quoted from the Sanskrit work Vâráhiya, then it is a really good omen; some say that good fortune will meet you, and others that people must be speaking well of you (as foolish people in England do when their ears burn in a peculiar manner). The Vâráhiya says—(i.) sneezing is a good omen if it comes at the time of taking medicine,
Remember this for you will not need to take another dose; (ii.) sneezing is a good omen if it comes at the time of setting out upon a horse; (iii.) sneezing is a good omen if it comes at the time of argument. To him who sneezes, or hears another person sneeze, it means success; (iv.) sneezing is a good omen at the time of retiring to rest; (v.) sneezing is a good omen at the time of eating; (vi.) sneezing is a good omen at the time of reading; (vii.) sneezing is a good omen at the time of seed-sowing. Great shall the harvest be.

Except on these seven occasions it would be very unwise for a Hindū to do any other work, if he himself should sneeze, or hear anybody else do so.

However, above and beyond these, at all times, even on the seven occasions quoted above, the sneeze of (a) an unmarried girl; (b) of a widow; (c) of a barren wife; (d) of a shoemaker’s wife; (e) and of a woman sick from cholera, is an extremely bad omen. Let not a Hindū commence any work, when he hears such, but sit down and reconsider what he is about to do or say.’ Cf. “Punjāb Notes and Queries,” Vol. I., notes 776, 949.

Mits ai tulazih badih bunih.

If you will get earth, then get it from a big mound.

If you must work then get the service of a great man.

Mol ai krāji karih suh tih gayih máji.

If the father marries a potter-woman she is the mother.

A second wife.

Mol gav tsrol tah máj gayih aul.

Father is a tsrol and mother is a nest.

Tsrol is a Muhammedan sect, who have the choice of three employments. They can become jailors, or bootmakers, or beggars. If they select the latter they visit everybody’s house, and generally get something. Muhammedans outside their sect do not eat with them. They are said to be most unkind to their children. There are about two hundred families of the Tsrol sect in Kashmir. Cf. note to “Kashirī khāhī garah” for their origin.

Mol gutshum worah, moj gatshum sak, khēmahas trak tah kom kahahs nah ak, tas lagīhīh khunt, suh dāpiham ungajih karun muthur, buh láyahas mak.

O father, I want another father: O mother, I want my own mother. (In the old days) I used to eat (with them) about twelve pounds of food at one time, and did not even once work.

O may he be wounded, and say to me pour water over my toe; and then I will slay him with an axe.

A step-parent.
Mol mej gav kázi, akis rázi tah akis bázi.
Parents are like judges, they are satisfied with one child and displesed with another.
Kázi (Qázi) was a Muhammedan judge in all cases of law, whether religious, moral, civil, or criminal. The office is now virtually extinct under the British Government.

Mol pánúr, nechuv Murád Beg.
Father—a water-carrier, and son—Murád Beg.
An upstart.
Murád Beg was the head of the chabdárs in Gulão Singh's time.
These people carried a staff, and besides the ordinary work of a chaprási, they executed the state punishments, such as serving a summons, flogging, &c.
Panjábí.—Báip na máre titar pútur gol-ándáz.

Mondih nishih rani mángai.
Asking a husband from a widow.
Drawing blood from a stone.

Monguh mat chácht chácht tah kakáv.
To eat a big pot of moíg; to drink; and then to run away.
An ungrateful servant. Untimely death of a cow or horse.
Moíg.—Phaseolus Max or Radiatus; a vetch or kind of kidney bean.
Kakáv is a species of partridge, but here it means to fly or run away; to disappear.

Mordah málas chhuh khord-u-bord.
A dead man's estate is eaten and taken away (i.e., the deceased's descendants quarrel over it and eventually carry the matter into court).

Mordah tih chhuh pánsas às dáráñ.
The dead even opens his mouth to get the paisás.
The exceeding love of money.
Hindús place some paisás within the mouth of the corpse just Mordas chhuh marit martabah hurán.

After death the man receives greater honour.
De mortuis nil nisi bonum.

Mordas chhik wadin bikit, batas chhik wadin wudanik.
People weep for the dead sitting down, but they weep for the bread standing up.
Loss of bread is greater than the loss of one's friends.
"Morun ai tah mórun kyah?" "Rat chon ai tah woṭ dini kyah?"
"If you squeeze me why do you kill me?" "If you have drunk the blood, why do you leap?"
A dialogue between a flea and a man.
To worry a man before giving the final punishment.

Mūlamatis sharbat chhukas marham pyos.
Sherbet at the time of death is as ointment upon a wound.
Opportune help is sometimes spoken of as sherbet to a dying man.

Mudis loriḥ hataḥ tah trukis kuni kataḥ.
A hundred stripes for a fool, but a word to a sharp man.
Persian.—Agar dāṭ ḫūq ishāra bās aṣṭ.

Mūdis nūḥaṭ sud kyah?
What is the good of giving sugar to the dead?
Punjabi.—Ike na pāckhe, mne ḫār ḫār ḫāc.

Mudur dain tsukh nah tah tsuk dain mudarikh nah.
A sweet pomegranate will not become bitter, and a bitter pomegranate will not become sweet.
A man is according to his disposition.

Mugul dishīt gatshīh Phārsī khasūnī.
On seeing a MugHAL one should speak Persian.
One should be ṩē ṣāfīt in all society.

Mujih pūṭhah muliwrīni.
From the radish radish leaves.
"Can the fig-tree bear berries or a vine figs?"

Mulan drot tah patran sac.
A sickle for the roots, but watering the leaves.
Quoted when a son is treated better than the father.

Muli hūt kulih ẓishānun.
After buying a thing to throw it into the river.
Expenditure without profit.

Mulk-i begūnas andar chhuk mahnyuv sac-i-ḍīwānā.
A man in a foreign country is like a mad dog.

Munanūn hūnūn shaposh tah mēḥ nah kalaposh tih.
Muna's dogs have got a big quilt, but I have not even a skull-cap.
Not a shirt to his back.
Munih, munih Phátí kunih nai kěnh.
Pounding pounding, O Phátí, but nothing anywhere.
    Working like a horse and spending like an ass — nothing for the rainy day.

Máníś nah livun húnis nah nást chhúh thawán.
He will not let the whitewash remain on the wall or the nose upon the dog (so cantankerous is he).

O Murúdí, húl. The kite has taken the egg. Give an answer.
    Let syphilis attack you.
    A Kashmiri curse.
    "The kite has taken the egg" means "Death has taken your child."
    Húl is the sound made for driving away kites.

Músah Khánum hastur.
Músah Khánum's nightingale.
    An obstinate fellow.
    This was a celebrated bird, which would sing when its master did not wish it to sing, and vice versa.

Musalmán marih dráigh. Báthah marikh Mágh.
Musalmán will perish from starvation, the Pandit will perish from cold.
    It is imperative upon the religious Pandit to bathe in the month of January, and not a few die from so doing. The ordinary Musalmán is not accustomed to fast, and so in famine time is not able to bear the limited living so well as the Pandit can.
    Mág corresponds to our month of January.

Mut tśul put-dárīh kulai hēt atak hárik.
The madman escaped by the back window taking his wife upon his back.
    A man who forsakes his fatherland, &c.

Myáníh kánz pisko tah wugrah dúlyo, tah nunah tũlyo.
My drop of vinegar, pot of unstrained rice, and pinch of salt.
    That is best which is according to one's lot and temperament.
    Kánz is rice-water kept till sour, and then used with fish, &c., as vinegar.
    Pisko, lit., a fles, but here means little, an atom, a drop, &c.
    Wugrah is unstrained rice. The poorer classes do not strain their rice, as the doing so would considerably lessen the quantity.
    Dũlyo is a large earthenware vessel, big enough to bathe in.
Myon āsit chon gav, mangun hyut tah aśhūḏ gav.
It was mine and became yours, and when I began to ask for it, it was (as if) collyrium to me (i.e., something to be much desired).
To give away a thing and very much want it back again.

Myon kājiwaṭ panun wachh.
(Would that you would take) my pestle (and beat) your own breast with it.
A Kashmīrī curse.

Myūṭh gāmas tah krūṭh pananis pūnas.
Sweet to the village, but rough to one’s ownself.
Charity begins at home. A gentleman should show himself such in his own house.
Nādān ai zānīh ziḥ nādān chhus, udah chhhuh nah nādān.
If the ignorant man knows that he is ignorant, then he is not ignorant.

Nādānas nasīhat karuni goyū kih pannēn nun dyun.
Giving advice to a stupid man is like giving salt to a squirrel.
(Cui bono?)

Nādarēn māl tah āmbug hīt.
Wish of nadur, but pretence of āmābb.
“A little, very little more, if you please”; and all the time he wants a plateful.

Nadur is a vegetable growing in the city lake, (the stalk of the Lotus-Nilumbium). It is eaten by all natives during the winter, because of its heating qualities, but it is especially eaten by Hindūs on the anniversary of a relative’s death, when neither fish, nor flesh, nor turnips, &c., are allowed for food, and on other great days also.

Āmābb is thin, small nadur.

Nade nām samjhog chhhui insānah sunz žindagi.
A melā by the river (all alive with excitement one minute and quiet the next) is like a man’s life.
“What is your life? It is even a vapour.”

Nadhārānī nāt.
Nadhar’s fright.
Any special fear.
Nadhar is a cormorant (?)

Nā-fāhm gav suī, yas nā-fāhmās suēt kom gatshīh.
He is an unintelligent man, whose business is with an unintelligent man.
A man is known by the company which he keeps.

Nafas chhuh san dáwān tah tsūrah karanāwān.
Lust causes a man to break into a house and rob.
A glutton will steal.
Nafas-parwaras nishih yiyih nah kunar parwarī; be-kunaras nishih yiyih nah sarwari.
From a sensualist will not come a fondness for art; and from an unskillful man will not come leadership.

Nafnī myon chhuī hustūī, ami hastī munganam garīh garīh bul;
Lachhīh manzah sāsah manzah akhāh lustūī nah tah ātīnam sārī tal.
My soul is like that of an elephant and that elephant asked me every hour for food;
Out of a lakh and out of a thousand but one is saved; if it hadn’t been so, the elephant had crushed all under his feet.
One’s craving lusts.
A saying of Lal Dūd’s.

Nāgah gādah, wuchhanīh halāl tah khānīh harām.
The fish in the (sacred) spring is lawful to look at, but unlawful to eat.
Touch not; taste not; handle not.

Nagrah nīrit Pāndrānthān.
Going out from the city and living at Pāndrānthān.
A merchant’s country-house.
Pāndrānthān is a pretty little village about three miles from Sri-nagar.

Nah chhas wutsani tah nah dazānī, bihit chhas labīh, hanih hunā khōṇī.
There is scorching or burning to him; he just sits aside and eats a little.
“What does he care? He has not had to pay for it.”

Nah gatskīm māṇchh tah nah gatskīm top.
I do not want honey, nor do I want the sting.
“Every thing that fair doth show,
When proof is made proves not so.”

Nah khair tah nah barkat.
Neither well-wishes nor blessing.
A man who earns much money, but spends it in such a way as that nobody is especially benefited by it—not even his family.
Nah tran manz nah truwáhan manz.
Neither in three nor in thirteen.
A partnership by no means.

Nalah Ráizun palav.
Nala Rájá's piece of cloth.
The climax of distress.
Nala Rájá began his reign well. He was just and holy, and everybody respected him. But it chanced that one day, while he was out eating the air, he saw two or three men gambling, and noticing that they each one seemed to be most excited over the game, he thought that it must be a very interesting means of amusement and determined to learn it. Accordingly, when he got back to his palace he called his wife and began to gamble with her. He grew more and more interested in gambling, until at last under one or another form it was his hourly amusement. He went to lay very high stakes—sometimes a palace, sometimes an army, and sometimes a lákh of rupees. Rájás and other great men came from distant countries to play with him; and as he was more often unsuccessful than successful, he soon lost all his country and his fortune, and escaped into a foreign land. He was wandering with his wife in a jungle in the strange land one day, when nothing remained to them both but one large wrap, which they cut into two pieces and made two wraps of. The Rájá told the Ráni, Dámyéntí by name, to walk about the jungle in one direction and see what she could obtain; and he would go in another direction. A peasant who happened to be in the jungle met the Ráni and gave her three dried fish. She took them to her husband with great delight, and he told her to go and wash them in the river. As she was washing them behold! aaurit, the water of life, came forth from her thumb and touching the fish made them alive again, and they escaped in the river. She went and told her husband, who did not believe her, but thought that she had eaten the fish. The poor woman was very much hurt at her husband's want of confidence in her, and was in much fear lest he should forsake her—leave her alone in that desolate jungle. So she arranged the bedding (which consisted only of the divided wrap) in such a way as that the Rájá could not possibly arise from his bed in the night without disturbing her. He was enveloped in one side of the wrap, upon the other side of which she was lying. The Rájá however defeated her plans by cutting his piece of the wrap; and ran away. On the road a snake bit him and his whole countenance turned quite black and was so Changed that nobody would have recognised in him the Nala Rájá. However he survived and went and took service in another Rájá's establishment.
The Ráni finding in the morning that her husband had abandoned her, resolved to go unto her father's house. Her parents were terribly shocked and grieved to find their daughter in such a state. They comforted her, arrayed her again in fitting garments, and promised her, that if her husband did not appear by a certain date they would arrange for another marriage. News was sent to all the Rájás to appear at a certain date, because one of them would be chosen as the future husband of the beautiful girl.

Among the many other Rájás which were present on the appointed day was the Rájá in whose service the Nála Rájá was employed. Nála Rájá also went with him; and when he had opportunity on the way, he related to his master all that had happened to him,—his gambling propensities, his ruination, his life in the jungle and his abandonment of his wife there. When the Rájá heard this he was dumbfounded with astonishment, and fell at his feet, “My brother,” said he, “why did you not tell me all this before?” And he gave unto him his own mantle and sword, and appointed unto him a full number of servants. Thus they reached the Ráni’s parent’s palace. The other Rájá introduced Nála Rájá and recounted all that he had heard.

Great was the rejoicing in the palace that day and many days afterwards;—for the lost husband and son had been found. How glad was Nála Rájá! How happy was Ráni Dámyéntí! Gifts were lavished upon them; they again lived in a grand house; had servants and horses, and every luxury; and were happy ever afterwards.

This story was told me by an ignorant Pandit, and varies from the original story, for which vide Mahábhárata, Parab. III.

Nalam, kalam, yá halam.

Denial, the pen, or begging.

The way the Pandits make a living.

Muhammadans cite this concerning their Pandit brethren. Tho say that they lie, they write reports, petitions, &c., or they beg.

Náli gom tah nál wulnam.

He annoyed me and leaped upon me like a serpent.

A troublesome, worrying person.

Náli nah sat tah máli nár.

Not a rag over the body and her name Máli.

Máli, a female name, from mál, meaning wealth, property.

Punjábí.—Akhán te anhun te máon Nain Sukh.

Nam ai wuthih tah mázas dag.

Mázi ai wuthih tah namas dag.

If the nail rise there is pain to the flesh.

If the flesh rise there is pain to the nail.

Love me, love my dog.

Naman mits kaman kits?

Why is there dirt in the nails?

“Ye’ve got no family. Why do you go scraping in the dirt for money? To what purpose are you soiling your hands?”
Nama'dánám chhui ráhat-i-jánam.
Ignorance is the peace of life.
Know not anything about anyone, or anything, and you shall preserve your peace.

Namrúdun hyuh dam diwán.
He boasts like Nímród.

King Nimrod was a great oppressor, and became so proud and independent as to say there was no God; and if there was, he dared him to do his worst. At last there came a voice from heaven bidding him to repent; but Nimrod thought scorn concerning it. Then God sent a mosquito which entered Nimrod’s nose and penetrated to the brain, causing him constant agony. Every time the pain came, the king used to send for his servant to beat him a hundred blows upon the left temple with a shoe. Eventually he was so worn by the pain that he died.

Namañor pakun ján kuish nah tang.
Better to go barefooted than to wear shoes too narrow.

Nandapúri chánzinén lável lug dyáran.
Kahan rúpéyan kanihai ōmbah-hákah náv.
Sarmáh sáé tshándán jumkah gráyih nárán.
Búzítav dyáran kyah khuchár tsáv.
Téndé rúpéych nerán halam chhíh dáran.
Toshán garah zan rúsh hét áí.
Saudá ninih wízhí aífos lárán.
Búzítav dyáran kyah khuchár tsáv
Páinsás nín gatshún ýhulán táráñ.
Khudíyih wíñ n tshunúh tendi kháv.
Nún dít adhán táratsih lárán.
Búzítav dyáran kyah khuchár tsáv.
The money of the boatwomen of Nandapúr became rusted.
They sold one boat-load of vegetables for eleven rúpís.
They seek for collyrium to wash their eyes with, and shake their earrings (with pride).

Hear what alloy entered into their money.
When they go out to change a rúpí they hold out their skirts for the paisás;
And on returning to their houses they rejoice as if they had brought a kingdom.
The buyer gets vexed at the time of buying.
Hear what alloy has entered in their rúpís.

* * * * *
One paisá’s worth of salt is only sufficient for three eggs.
O God paralyse the fingers of the baniyás.
When they give the salt they take half of it back in their scales.
Hear what alloy has entered into their rúpís.
Gafárá, a poet living in Káwadára, composed the above for the benefit of the vegetable-boatwomen and the baniyás; and sometimes the whole, sometimes portions of it are constantly quoted.

_Nangas nindar prangas pūh, sávis nindar pávis pūh._
The poor man sleeps upon a bed (without a care), but the rich man sleeps upon the stairs (for fear of thieves).

_Nání, bungriwání hai awí, achh myáníh ñísht pachh müd wání. Kan myáníh ñísht wan tsul wání. Nání bungriwání hai awí._

O grandmother, the bangle-man came, and after seeing my eyes he died in fifteen days. When he saw my ears, too, he ran away into the jungle. O grandmother, the bangle-man came.

Little children sing these words sitting upon the door-step. They are also cited when any man is filled with envy against another. He sees that man’s prosperity, runs away in a rage, and dies from grief.

_Nání nání karán gayih málunui gilawán topar áyiñ chhiñih nurui harám tas ñhoron puluhuruí._
She went in grand style to her father’s house, and returned thence shaking the cuffs of her garment though she had not a grass shoe to her feet.
A stupid, trifling woman.

_Nanis dub kyah chhalih?_
_Phákahladas kyah zaliñ?_
What shall the washerman wash for the naked man?
What shall the fasting-man vomit?
Breeks from a Highlandman.

_Nanis tar tsáyih tāh dráyih;_
_Khanís tar walanah áyiñ._
Coldness to the naked man,—as it comes, so it goes
But coldness sticks to the rich well-dressed man.
Nanis wurun ehhuh sudur purun.
To “set up” a naked man with clothes is like trying to fill the ocean.
Reply to a poor debtor, or great spendthrift, to whom Rs. 100 would be a mere trifle.
Nanis wurun hero means to “set a man up” in a business, to stock his shop, and marry his daughter, &c.

Nar zinik tah nadur sinik badal.
Reed in the place of firewood, and the stalk of the lotus instead of meat.
A stupid arrangement.
Nadur is the stalk of the Lotus (Nelumbium), which grows abundantly in the Kashmiri lakes, and is eaten largely by the inhabitants of the valley. Hindus cut up the stalk into small pieces, cook it with oil and spices, and eat it along with fish, &c.

Náruh dráv sun hyuh.
Like gold come forth from the fire.
The better for his sickness, trials, &c.

Nárah wizih kyúr khanun!
Digging a well at the time of fire!
Panjábi.—Ag layrún khúh khatauná!

Naras nábad tah tulařih máńchh, tah halam halis ráníhas duchh.
Sugar-candy from a reed; and honey from the bee; and grapes from a very crooked vine.
God brings good out of bad.

Nast tsathai tah babarih āukhá.
Cutting your nose is like cutting the top of a babar (it only grows the stronger).
Cited to a shameless person.
Babar (Persian, Bihán), the sweet basil.

Nátaah ganzarit tah ras mínit.
Counting the pieces of flesh and measuring the soup.
No chance for a thief under such a man as that.

Natich dimai nah tresh, hatynk wandai rat.
I will not give you water from the water-pot to quench your thirst therewith, but I will give you my throat’s blood.
Great words but little deeds.
Natsunah tah ángun chhum tsut.
Wanahah tah wan chhum durih.
I would dance, but the yard is small.
I would speak, but the jungle is distant.
Fear on account of circumstances.

Natsön tih pánai tah wáyán tih pánai.
He himself dances to his own playing.
A fool who laughs at his own remarks.

Nawih handi gindán pumbarih dashan; paránih handi pashán pashan tal.
The children of the new wife are playing with the fringe of their father’s shawl, while the children of the old wife are crying under the roof.

Nayih andar pai.
A fence on the plateau. (Cui usui?)
An unnecessary work and expense.

Níz karishih babas tah májih múz wetsés nah khalih;
Níz karishih kókas tah kákanih chapáí láyas gálih?
We should ask our parents for anything we may want;
because their body will not contain them, they will be so happy to give;
We should not ask our elder brother, or his wife, for anything,
as they may give us a slap upon the cheek.

Nébarah mundhon tah andarah tshutsah kon.
Outside he is beautifully and splendidly dressed, but inside he is an empty walnut.
Hypocrisy.

Nébarimis mahynicis gatshih ásun tídi tah padur tah yál tah chál, dár tah káír.
To the man with employment the turban (must be right),
the feet (proper), the hair (behind the ear), the character (good), the beard (trimmed), and the neck (clean), (i.e., he must mind his P’s and Q’s, or else he will be turned out of his employment).

Néchivi handá wánganas sumb, yad chhas ánganas sumb,
A boy about the size of an egg-plant has a stomach about the size of a courtyard.
Wangun is the Solanum melongena, called Brinjal in the plains.
Nekan chhuh Khudái khush.
God is pleased with good people.

Nekan lór tah badan phuiun.
The good are troubled and the bad blossom.

"The ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches. Verily, I have cleansed my heart in vain."—Psalm lxxiii. 12, 13.

Neko, nek kar tah bad labih pánai.
O, good man, do good; the wicked will receive his deserts.

Neknám chhuh gatshán yêt-skálí tah badnám chhuh gatshán juld.
A good name comes after a while, but a bad name is soon obtained.

Neknám chhuh bekkh daukat.
A good name is the root of wealth.

Némáž chhuh farz tah lut chhuh karz.
Prayer is a duty and plunder is a debt.

A Pathán saying.

Némázi sunz unguj.
The finger of the prayer.

"Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."—Eccl. viii. 11.

A Pathán of high family while saying his prayers in the Juma Masjid here was very much annoyed by another man poking him from behind. He gave him one rúpí to desist. The man left off annoying this worshipper, but was encouraged by the present to prosecute his wickedness upon some other worshipper. The other man, however, was not of such a quiet disposition as the Pathán, for he at once rose up, drew his sword and struck off the troubler's head with one stroke.

Niyatas mújúb diiyih tas Khudái.
God will give a man according to his wish.

"Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart."—Ps. xxxvii. 4.

Nosh gayih rōti zan ās yēti.
The daughter-in-law went for a month (to her father's house) and it was as if she had not been away at all (time passed so quickly because they were so much happier during her absence).

Daughter-in-laws are a continual stumbling-block to the other inhabitants of the house.
Nosh layih nah hár tah khor pēsh máritos hund!
A daughter-in-law is not worth a cowrie; and kill a ram for her over the feet!
Daughter-in-laws are altogether despised until they are grown up—they may develop into ugly and uncouth women, or they may die, or their affianced husband may die, &c.
A certain daughter-in-law was sick and likely to die, and therefore her mother-in-law was advised to sacrifice a sheep for her. The woman replied in the words of the above saying, the plain meaning of which is “Let her die. What does it matter? My son is not bound to her.”
“Over the feet” refers to the custom of slaying the animal near to the closed feet of the person for whom it is sacrificed.

Nosh lükas, kúr lükas, ná-hakk lükas mengah dag.
Daughter-in-law to some, a daughter to others, but as far as the unconnected man is concerned she is only a headache.
At a native marriage there is much feasting, music and dancing. A general hubbub prevails. The parents and relatives of course enjoy themselves; but the other guests and friends, especially those who have come out of pure friendship to help and congratulate, have a hard time of it; to them the wedding is as one continued headache.

Noshi, lajoi “málínih múlinih,” múlin chání hai, čišt.
Adal lajoi “áihih áihih” bastai phait bišt.
O daughter-in-law you are always boasting of “my father’s house.” Look here, we have seen your father’s house. You said, too, that you would receive some flour (from your father’s house); but the skins must have burst (and the men who are bringing it) must be sitting down (on the way). Kashmiris carry their flour, rice, and other grain, tied up in a sheep’s or goat’s skin.

Noshih düp hashih kun “Wastai bun.” Phirit düpnas “Zan chhahum sun!”
The daughter-in-law said to her mother-in-law “Come down.” (The mother-in-law) answered, “As if you were my rival with my husband!”

Nov golih gáv pyáyih-hál khôyá kih nah wutsh tríwih?
The cow is about to be delivered of her first calf; we do not know whether she will die, or give birth to a calf.
General reply to the too-inquisitive dispositions which beset a house at the time of a woman in travail.
Hal khyun, to eat the after-birth, i.e., to die.
Nov natsai tah paráni diwai.
New dancing and an old fair.
When any man is seized on some charge, the kotwál comes, sipáhts come, and a crowd gathers as if to an old-established fair; and the people almost dance with excitement.

Nov nut hyuh.
Like a new water-pot.
A man fresh and strong, "spick and span."

Nún nábád tah til phalilah tah zún tsandun tah batah mukh-tah.
Salt as rare as sugar, oil as scarce as ointment, wood as if sandal, and dinner (i.e., food) like eating pearls (so expensive).
Hard times.

Nun nizēn nah bazzizah-wán tah buchh nizēn nah vázah-wán.
Take not the naked man to the cloth-shop, or the hungry man to the cook-shop.
Another version is:

Buchh gatskíh nah nyun vázah-wán tah nun gatskíh nah nyun dubi-wán.
The hungry man must not be taken to the cook-shop, and the naked man must not be taken to the washerman's house.

Nún, til zyút, athah myon myút.
More salt and oil, and my hand is sweet.
Give me the money, and I will transact the business; give me the tools, and I will do the work.

Núnan mún.
Wool is obtained by giving salt (to the sheep).
Money is not wasted on some people and things.

Nunih núnih hundo tšiníh-āshnán.
A supposed grandmother's charcoal-relations or acquaintances.
A cousin of the fifth or sixth remove.
Charcoal-acquaintances. People from the villages often pay a visit to the city during the winter season bringing with them charcoal for sale. They sell their load, put up for a night in some person's house, and are off again the following morning.

Núrah achhén tšúrah toli.
A heavy look about the bright eyes.
Grief.
Núrah buthis chhuh gatskán sûrah buth yatímas.
The bright face becomes ash-colour, when the child is left an orphan.
God protect the fatherless.

Núrah myáníh tür tsalán.
(At the look of) my bright face fever runs away.
Always carry a pleasing countenance.

Nuṭ tak hammám.
Just a water-pot and a bath.
Hardly a stick in the house.

Nyuk chhuh àsán truk.
A lean man is clever.
Pādis tal tungul.
Fire under the sole of the foot.

"Ah! when you get a red hot coal under your foot, you will know what fire is."

Pādshāh sindis dēwān-khānas.
Til o chōrāg dūzān chhus.
Sāri gatsān pānas, pānas;
Kunui zanā rozān chhus.
In the palace of the monarch.
Oil and lamps are burning (burning).
All are to their own place going;
Only one (man) is remaining.

This is metaphorical language. The monarch is God, the palace is the world, and the people are the inhabitants thereof; the oil and lamps are the sun and moon, which are constantly coming and going: the people are also temporary—gradually they die off, until at last only one, and that God, will be left.

This is also a Kashmiri riddle, of which the answer is the Sun and Moon.

Pādshāhas pāshānī.
To the king the work of a watchman is difficult.

A man who has come down in the world, and is not equal to his reduced circumstances.

Pahar gav, wahr gav; doh gav, koh gav;
Pachh gav, wachh gav; rēl gav, khet gav;
A watch (i.e., a space of three hours) gone is as if a year had passed;
One day gone is as if a mountain had become;
Fifteen days passed by is as if (the debt) had been forgotten;
And a month elapsed (without payment) is as if the money had been eaten (i.e., irrevocably lost).

Pakanah pāz; gandanah gosānī; khānah bulbul.
Like a hawk in his walk, a jogi in clothing, and a bulbul in eating.

Some people want servants manufactured to order.
Pakharporik hakhar.

The oxen of Pakharpúr.

Like a tantony pig.

Saiyid Muhammad 'Ali, a very holy man, came all the way from Baghdad to Kashmir to be Shekh Núr-ud-dín's disciple. He took up his abode in Pakharpúr, about fifteen miles from the city of Srinagar. He was one of the Shekh's favourite followers. After a time he became so enraptured with the country that he begged to be permitted to remain there altogether. Núr-ud-dín consented to this, and to save him expense and trouble, he miraculously brought all his house, ground and family, from Baghdad to Kashmir in a moment of time. There was no doubt about this in olden times; because there was the man's wife and children standing before him; and there is no hesitation in believing this in the present day, for you can examine for yourself the different style of building of the house, the different nature of the soil, the different trees and plants, &c.

This Saiyid Muhammad 'Ali, in consequence of this especial favour, became a very celebrated character. He was accustomed to speak and to act strangely, but all the people accounted him holier on account of these eccentricities. One of his orders was, that if any man was in trouble and wished to be relieved of it, he must set free an ox. These oxen thus set free were to wander whither they liked, and do whatsoever they wished, and nobody dared to lift up a stick against them, or to complain. In olden days several of these oxen wandered about, and were a great nuisance; but now they have been reclaimed and put to the plough. Saiyid Muhammad 'Ali was buried in Pakharpúr, and many visit his grave during the year.

Pákhuá chhúh púk.

Only the Pure One is pure (i.e., God).

Panah sán khúyih búní tah jíts sún khúyih húní.

He will eat the chinár tree—leaves and all, and he will eat the dog with the skin.

A regular cannibal, not satisfied with enough.

Panah tali díij tah dênjih tali pán.

Below the thread the ball or knot, and below the knot the thread.

A man, who sees that he is, but will not confess that he is, in the wrong.

Panane hacíh chhíh bañíh trachíh.

One's own harvest (no matter how small) is as twelve traks.

The produce of one's own labour is sweet.

Trák is a grain measure containing nine and a half English pounds.
Pananēv chhuh nah paigambar mānumt.
A prophet is not accepted by his own people.
    "A prophet is not without honour save in his own country and house."—Matt. xiii. 57.

Pananī kūkēr nai bad āsih tāh lūkah hundih garih kyūzih trīvih ṭhul?
If your hen is not a bad one, then why does she go and lay her eggs in other people's houses?
Ungrateful offspring.

Pananī nam chhīh pananīh thar kashūn.
Scratching one's back with one's own nails.
    Satisfying yourself with your own money, own house, &c.
    Būstān of Sa'dī.—Na juz nākhun o juz savaṇyusht-i-man,
    Na ḍhūrād kase dar jahān pushti-i-man.

Pananī pām divīn būyis.
Giving your reproach to another.
    Some Kasīmīris say pān instead of pām, and then it is ;—
Giving yourself to another.
    Making out everyone as bad as yourself.

Pananīh athāh rāwarun tāh būyis sund ratshrun chhuh barābar.
To lose anything by one's own hand, and to receive anything at the hand of another, is equal.
    To receive a benefit is to sell one’s liberty.

Pananīh bāchhih ai animah āsih kūtsah machhih gatshan païdah!
If there should be any rice-water upon your fire-place, how many flies will be born there!
Money attracts friends.

Pananīh bānanah tāh lūkah handih wanananah.
Because I am, what I am, people say this of me.

Pananīh gārūk hāk-wāk chhūt būyis sandis pulūwas barābar.
Vegetables from my own garden are equal to pulāv from another man's (house).
    Pulāv is a dish of meat and rice cooked together with spices.

Pananīh thājih ai bātah āsih kūtyūh mōjih gābab gatshan païdah!
If there is any food in the pot how many mothers and children will be born!
Panannú pon chhuh panis phátawán.
Breaking the log with the log’s own wooden wedge.

Another version is:—

Ponuí phátawán chhuh zinis.
A (little) wedge (from the tree) splits the wood.

Set a thief to catch a thief.

A big tree in the jungle was ordered to be cut down, and already four men had gone to the blacksmith’s shop to purchase an axe for the work. One man, who admired the tree, heard these men speaking together and forming their plans; and went at once and told the tree. The tree replied, “Thanks, O friend, for the information, but do not be afraid. Four men and an axe will not do much damage to me.” The next day the man came again and said, “More news, O tree! To-morrow these men are coming to destroy you.” The tree again tried to assure the man that four little men and a pound or so of iron could not do any material damage to a big tree like he was. The man went, but returned again the next day saying, “O tree, be not slated by false hopes. These men have laid a clever and certain plan for your destruction. Listen, One man will first climb you; and cut off one of your thin top-branches. Out of this branch he will make a handle for the axe, and a wedge. Then he will prepare a hole in your trunk and insert the wedge, upon which they will strike and strike until your great wide trunk is completely severed.” “Alas! alas!” said the tree, “by this means they will bring me down; I am certain to die.”

Panannú zágán kulphus tah táris;
Panannú kustám san hēṭ dróv.
One’s own relation lies in wait for lock and bolt;
It is a relation who goes out with the stolen goods.

Pánas khétan magar dínás pevtan.
Let him eat, but let him keep his fire.
Selfish fellow, we do not want anything from him!

Pánas nishih pánasah chhui gút tai mul,
Béyis nishih pánsah chhui hil tai hech.
Your own money is flowers and wine, but another’s money is but weed—nothing.

Pándah-Chhuk, nashan sukh tah korin dukh.
O Pánda-chhuk, let there be peace to your daughters-in-law, but trouble to your daughters.
Shekh Núr-ul-dún’s curse upon this village, which is about three miles from Srinagar in the Islámábád direction.
Pánih rust dúnih khasiyá zih ráníh rust shur khasih.
Will the rice rise without water, that the child should grow without a grandmother?

A grandmother’s influence in a house is very often greater in every way than that of the mother of the family.

Pánsah ai thawzen murdás púth sul: tih gatshih thud wuthit.
If a paisá be placed upon a dead man he will rise up.

Money will bring people back from the dead.

Hindús place a paisá inside the mouth of the corpse, wherewith it may be able to pay the ferry, &c., cf. note “Áyas wte,” &c.

Pánsah gav púrud tah mikráz, yat púth thawizen tat tsaíh.
Money is as quicksilver and scissors, lay it upon what you will, it will cut it (i.e., do its work).

Pénsah nishíh chhuh pánsah phatóhn.
Paisás burst out of paisás.
Money makes money.

Panun ai máríh shihilis tráwih; parúd ai máríh tah mhrithuí gatshih.
If my own (relations or friends) smite me, he will leave me in a shady place (i.e., he will bury me); but if a stranger smites me he will kill me and go.

A friend’s a friend for aye that.

Panun ai máríh, totih kunih jáyih tárh.
If my own smite me, yet in some place he will help me.

Ad supra.

Panun khówán pínzú tah bóyih sund karón dálwénzú.
Eating a good dinner in his own house, yet interfering in the matters of other people (i.e., disputing for them, scandalising them, &c.)

Mind your own dinner and mind your own business.

Panun muhím chhuh khówán pínai wat.
Each misfortune will show its own way.

Panun paizáh babah sunz pombar.
One’s own shoe and father’s shawl.

Hardly earned, dearly loved.

A boy purchased a pair of shoes with his own earnings, and one day as he was walking along in those new shoes they became very dusty. The boy was much grieved and sat down by the way side and cleaned them with his beautiful pashmina shawl, which his father had given him.
Panun wadanáwiḥ parud asanáwiḥ.
He made his friends to weep, but his enemies to laugh.

Panzih kund pút.
A monkey's young one i.e., (a chip of the old block).

A variant of this with quite a different meaning is:—

Panzih kund pút, yusuṭ ṭoth chhus ásán; tas chhēḥ zorah wachhas tal raṭan, suī chhuh marān.
The young of a monkey, who is dear to her; she presses it hard against her breast, so that the young one dies.

A favourite child or servant, is often spoilt by an exaggerated affection and regard.

Natives say that monkeys love their young ones so much, that in the excitement of their affection they sometimes press them so hard against their breasts, that they get stifled and die.

Panzis dapyā punz zih mandul chhnī vazul.
Will a monkey tell a monkey that his buttocks are red?
The crock calling the kettle black.

Parān parān par gayih khāli, khar gayih kitābah bēri hēṭ.
He reads and reads until his strength is gone, and he has become like a donkey carrying a load of books.

"Much learning doth make thee mad."—Acts xxvi. 24.

Paraspurik wāzah pānai ranān taḥ pānai pananin athān thokah trāvān!
The cook from Paraspur cooks the food himself, and he himself spits into his own hands (as if disgusted with it)!

Disgusted with one's own work.

Many cooks reside in Paraspur, a village in the Lār tēhsīl. It is a custom with the majority of cooks to first sit down and eat their own dinner (by way of tasting perhaps?) before serving up the different dishes to the guests. Should they not like the food, they will spit into the palms of their hands and in other ways express their sorrow. Many show their grief under different circumstances in this vulgar manner.

Parini tsār.
Porous like a sieve.

More holy than righteouss.

Parnāntsānah rust kur chhai burzah rust lar.
A daughter without parnāntsān is like a house without proper roofing.
Parmânsun. At time of marriage Hindus give to their daughters a long piece of cloth called zûj, to wear upon the crown of their heads, and then extend to the small of the back. Some for certain reasons delay giving this till some years after; but this delay means increased trouble and expense.

Burzah is the liber of a species of birch, used in roofing houses, and also as paper for rolling up goods in. Native writing-paper, too, is made from it.

Pashah pêthah shin trâwun.
To throw snow off from the roof (generally done quickly and carelessly; hence any work done hastily and carelessly.)

Pashminasui chhêh narmi.
Only pashmina has softness.

Only good people are gentle.

Pashmina is a fine kind of woollen cloth manufactured in Kashmir. The finest goat's wool employed in its manufacture is brought from Turfan, in the Yarkand territory. This is called Turfãni phamb; all other qualities are called Kashmîri phamb; though these as well as the former are found only on the animals who live on the wind-swept steppes of Central Asia.

"Patah" guftam wêsi.
O friend, I said "Afterwards."

Opportunity mis-spent.
Wês a female friend, a flirt.

Patim gar chhêh bukuri dar.
The last hour is a hard time (i.e., the last hour of a woman's travail, or of life, or of any work, &c.)

Pûz panjaras andar band.
A hawk shut up in a cage.
A clever man without work.

Phûguni mujen swîdûi kyah?
What taste have radishes in the month of February?

What profit from an old wife or servant?
People gather the radishes in the autumn, and bury them under the ground for use in the winter. By the month of February they begin to rot and are unfit for food.

Phakir tsiyov ângan tah honih watshov dod.
A faqir came into the court-yard, and the dog was pained.

An old servant displeased with a new servant, to whom out of charity the master has given a little work.
Phal kulū cchuhu namit.
The fruit-tree is bending.
   The more knowledge there is in a man, the humbler he becomes.
   Persian—Nihād shāʿīr i pur meuwa sur bar zamān.

Phalis hyul tah helis khar diyanai Khudā.
May God bless your every seed to a sheep, and your every sheep to a kharwar.
A Kashmiri blessing.

Pharih han khōwān bad tah myou han khan lūt.
A small dried fish ate a big fish, and (the cat) gave a gentle mew.
A man with a big appetite, but little voice.

Pharih hanz buzūyih māj lukau dupus “Gōdai chhuh buzān.”
A fisherman, roasted his mother, and the people said within themselves. “He is roasting fish.”
   One-half the world does not know what a struggle the other half endures to live.
   “Roasting one’s mother” here means selling her jewels and clothes

Pharih-hānz chhū chhū gurī khasān?
Is the fisherman riding a horse?
   Every thing will not be as we wish.
   There are many kind of boatmen in Kashmir named according to their boats, or their special work. The Pharih-hānz are those who catch the little fish to be found in the Wular lake during the winter season, and cook and dry them for sale in the bāzār. Cf. note “Yus nakh wathsh nour,” ջc.

Pharih tṣūras chhuh dārih kund lōr.
A bone stuck in the head of the man who stole a dried fish.
   A thief carries marks of detection along with him.
   One day a great robbery was committed in the house of a certain person of the city, and report of the matter reached the ears of the ruler. The ruler was very much enraged, when he heard the account of such a dastard robbery. It appears that the robbers had first dined with their host and then robbed his house. Amongst other dishes provided for the dinner was a dish of broiled fish.
   The ruler declared that he would have the man discovered and punished. He sent for the deputy-inspector of police, and ordered him to show the thief or die. The deputy-inspector trembled when he heard this command, but he did not despair. He was a bold and clever man. “Give me one hundred soldiers,” he said, “and I will find the man.”
The request was granted.

One day the deputy-inspector gave a great feast, and invited all the people of the city to come and make merry. A very large crowd was assembled. At a given moment he ordered the soldiers to silence the people and to seize the man, who should rub his beard after he, the deputy-inspector, had spoken to the company. There was perfect silence when the host, standing in a convenient position, that he might be seen by all, shouted with a loud voice, “There is a bone in the beard of that man who stole the fish.” The thief happened to be present, and hearing these words, as if by instinct put up his hand to his beard and rubbed it. The movement was at once noticed by the appointed watchers, and the man was at once seized and taken before the deputy-inspector. The man’s guilt was proved beyond all dispute, and he was very severely punished. Krishna, the deputy-inspector, was promoted to much honour.

Phatak Matin batah.
Mad Fatah’s dinners.
This man was a great spendthrift. Quoted at an extravagant dinner, &c.

Phati Bat tah yaktanai.
Phati Bat and alone.
“Me and myself only.”

Phati Pharhung.
A caricatured Englishman.
A stupid Kashmiri.
Kashmiris at their private feasts are fond of painting pictures of English people on long slips of paper and pasting these upon a long thin basket. Sometimes they put on English clothes and mimic the Sahib’s incorrect pronunciation of Hindustani words and curt salaam, &c.

Phelus khéyih dyal.
The skin will eat the pimple.
An avaricious man.

Phirimatsik putsah préni kalas pêlh chhus zuwah adamanu.
A slut may have a clean châdar over her head, but her head is full of dirt.

Puts.—A long piece of cotton cloth thrown over the head and allowed to hang down the back. It is the ordinary veil worn by the Kashmiri females.

Phirit phóran.
Turning the garment.
Telling a lie; appearing different to what you really are.
Phul phut tah dawá kyah.
The joint is broken, what claim is there?
The dead wife’s neglected mother.

Pilis nah tah tsukí gás.
He couldn’t reach the fruit, and therefore he said it was bitter.
The fox and the grapes.

Pír nah bod, yakin bod.
The pír is not great, faith is great.
One day Akbar asked Birbal, which was the greater, the pír or faith. Birbal replied “Faith is the greater.” The emperor said, “You are wrong. The pír is the greater of the two.” Birbal was silent.

On leaving the emperor, Birbal went and buried an ass’s head in a certain place, and ordered that a mosque should be built over it.
Some years after this event, Akbar was exceedingly troubled by his enemies, and took counsel with his wazír as to what he should do. Birbal advised him to go and pray for forty days in a certain mosque, and promised, that if he would there offer up prayers with a pure heart, God would certainly hear him and give him the victory over his enemies. The emperor obeyed and vanquished his enemies.
One afternoon, when Birbal was alone with Akbar, he referred to their conversation some years ago, and asked the emperor whether he remembered it. The emperor replied “Yes”; and that he was of the same opinion still. Then Birbal asked Akbar to accompany him to the mosque, where he had spent forty days in prayer, and see for himself what there was under its foundations. The building was razed to the ground, the foundations were dug up, and there, to the great astonishment of the one and the great amusement of the other, was discovered the skeleton of the ass’s head. Akbar remarked: “You were right, Birbal. Faith is greater than the pír.”

Akbar supposed that the mosque had been erected over the bones of some Muhammadan saint, and with faith in this he prayed. Of. “Tale of Holy Donkeys,” “Leisure Hour,” January, 1875.

Pír, ustád.
To call a saint a teacher (is a great insult).

Pírah khutah chhuh be-pírui jún.
A man who follows no saint (i.e., who does not make any profession of religion) is better off than the man who has a saint, (but does not attend to his teaching).

“Pírah, wantam masallú,” dumpyas “Aki gom lasallú.”
“O pír, tell me an illustration.” He said to him, “From once saying there is comfort to me.”
A pír visited a certain village, and was asked by the people there to give them a religious word. He said to them “Do not steal”; whereupon they smote him so that he ran away. A long time after he again went to this village, and again the villagers asked him to say something. He replied “No, no; I am quite happy from having spoken once.”

Once is enough of this person or that thing.

Pírw mìrvòw dùnd, mìkh kyuh rìrvòw zih buh wanahah kànsik.
The pírs killed an ox, what have I lost that I should tell anyone.
No business of mine.

Pìsh kari gunòh wagawis chob, wuchtar lùkav tamàshá!
The flea sinned, but the matting got the beating. Behold, O people, the sight!

Pitari naí ìsìm tìh kí ni tìh wíran ná?
If there were no cousins, would not the dogs bark? Yes.
The best of men have their enemies.
Cousins are constantly grumbling and fighting over the family property; so constant and bitter are these quarrels, that the word pitar, a cousin, has come to mean an enemy.

Pituar ai ìzòn kàlah kin ìnàs zàngav suèl phùtarúwik rupeyik bánum.
If a cousin be cast head-first into the fire, he will break a rupee’s worth of pots with his legs (kicking about).
No love is lost between cousins.

Pituar ai ìzòn pòni tìh tsàfìh yèni.
If a cousin is asked to brush the warp with pòni, (even then he will harm you), he will cut the warp.
Pòni.—Natives rub the warp with a hand-brush soaked in rice water, to make the warp stronger.

Psìyik naí shròpìn tìh ìmìn gogalan ìs dáran.
Cannot digest rice-water, yet he opens his mouth for uncooked turnips.
A conceited, ignorant fool.

Poh ìwòvùtshoh tshoh dèwàn. Mùg chhùm mòt tìh kàrùm kyuh?
Phùgani phèrùhnùm shèyik-tràh phùh. Tsìthàr hahar kàrè kyuh?
Wahik khasav bāthòre watsh dúp watshare.
The month of December has come making gladness.
January is my father—what will be do to me? In February thirty-six times heat will return to me. What will my brother-in-law March do? Said the male calf to the female calf, “We will climb the hill in the month of April?”

December in “the Happy Valley” is a splendid month, if there is no snow. January is called a father, because it is such a hard, strict month. In February the weather begins to get warmer. March is called a brother-in-law, because with its cold winds and rains it is constantly bothering the people. April is a nice month for the cattle, as the snow begins to melt off from the hills and the green grass appears. Towards the end of this month the gruan-gūr, or cow-herd, collects large herds of cattle belonging to other people, and drives them away to the mountains to graze.

Pohali nyil.
The shepherd’s sign.
At the time of the crops people hand over their cattle to shepherds, who take them away in large numbers to the mountains for pasturage. Each beast has the special mark of its owner, (cf. note to Pohol chkhu, &c.), and should it happen that a wild beast devour it, the skin is, if possible, obtained and handed back to the owner as a proof that the animal has been slain. Cited when a man loses by lending a friend any thing, or by depositing anything in his care.
Nothing but the remnants of the deposit are handed back with great sorrow.

Pohol chkhu dāpīn lokan, “Ak khēv sahan byāk khēv shōlan.”
The shepherd says to the people (who gave him these sheep to tend upon the mountain), “One was devoured by a lion, and the other by a jackal.”

At the time of the crops people hand over cattle to a shepherd, who takes them far away to pasture upon the mountains. Sometimes a thousand or more animals are in the charge of one family, and each one of these are specially marked with a cut on the leg, or a slit in the ear or tail, &c., so that they may be at once be recognised by their different owners. The city people say that these hirelings generally happen to have two sons, the one called “Lion” and the other called “Jackal,” who have very large appetites, and eat the sheep; so that when the shepherd says that a lion and a jackal ate them, he is not altogether (according to the popular native idea) telling a lie.
Poshah-matin aish.
The pleasure of a flower-fancier.
An easy time of it.
Many natives visit the different gardens around Srinagar, especially on Fridays, and with lute or guitar play, sing, and loll away the livelong day.

Poshákaun chhah wunamut “Táh kartam shih karat.”
The garments said, “Take care of me and I will make you a king.”
Táh kartam is literally “Fold me up.”

Prenán jahánas tah wunán pános.
He finds fault with the world and forgets that he himself is in the wrong.

Preyáguch búní nah thadán nah lokán nah badán.
The chinár of Preyá neither becomes taller, nor shorter, nor bigger.
A poor sickly child, who does not grow or become fat.
This chinár tree is in the middle of a little island just big enough to pitch your tent on, in the midst of the Jhelam river by the village of Shádpúr. The Hindús have consecrated the place, and a Brahman is to be seen twice every day paddling himself along in a little boat to the spot, to worship and to make his offerings.

Pujis purnshuk adijih konah pachai az dupnak, “Panun ám nah kah.”
The people asked the butcher why his bones were not sold to-day. He replied, because none of my relations have been to me (to buy meat).

Puk ai ásih tah tokul jan.
If it is cooked, then a little even is good (i.e., worth having).
If he is clever, &c., then learn something from him; a little good, even, is not to be despised.

Punz ai püyih shethih gazah totih chhuh punzuí.
If a monkey fell sixty yards below, still he is a monkey.
Change of position does not change the man.

Purmhn chhuh gurmut.
A well-read man is like a nicely cut stone.

Púshuk tih nai tsuluk tih ní?
If you have not got the victory, why do you not escape?
If you cannot stand your ground, then give it up.
Put chhukah thani.
Butter from the last turn (or last beat) of the stick.

A man fishing all day catches his first and only fish just as he is going away. A man, who has been struggling to find out, or do something all day, discovers, or does it just as he is about to give it up in despair.

Put mandit; tuf khasit; vanánah prasit; ku! parit; hëndu-wënd tsuít; tah insán phujit.

Paṭṭu must be pressed in the washing-tub; a pony must be ridden on; a woman must be in travail; a son (must know the hardships of) learning; a water-melon must be cut (before its sale); and a man must be broken (i.e., humbled).

All things must be more or less tried by the rod of affliction, and are generally the better for having passed under it.

Hëndawënd tsuít.—The purchaser makes the baniyá cut the water-melon before he pays for it, as it may not be red and ripe. One cannot tell what it is from the outside.

Pūt, sopút, tah kopút
A son like his father; a son greater than his father; and a son less than his father.
The Kashmiris say that there are three kinds of sons.

Put put chhóh pādshëh has gaibat.
Slander behind the king.
Abuse always follows the high and great.

Putrah bucchih hin kochhih.
Hungering after a son she folds a dog to her bosom.

Putrah dídih muri mïngai.
She holds out her skirt begging for a son.
It is quite a commonplace event for a barren woman to go to a person with a large family and beg for a son.

“Putrah, khar tsul.” “Babah, pônah ratun tah khasit is.”
“O son, the ass has run away.” O father, catch him and ride him back.

A variant is:—

Babah. Khar tsul, khar tsul.
Gobrah. Khas walah, khas walah.

Father. “The ass has got away; the ass has got away.”
Son. “Go and ride him back; go and ride him back.”

A rude, disobedient child.
Puz wanun chhuh achh kaduni.
A man may as well take out his eyes as tell the truth.

Puz wananah pan ran naṭan; apru wananah lagan rus.
Tell the truth and you'll tremble like a leaf; tell a lie, and you'll get relief and pleasure.

Pyaw naḥ pyaw; zih Yaman khyaw.
In the act of falling the angel of death ate him.
A quick death.
Yama or Yam.—“To great King Yama homage pay,
Who was the first of men that died,
That crossed the mighty gulf and spied
For mortals out the heavenward way.”
Muir. O. S. T., v. 327.

Pyawal zāv.
An inventive tongue.
An imaginative, lying tongue.
Ráchhis dohah tâh tsúras garah.

All day the watchman has to watch, but just twenty minutes is enough for the thief to steal.

Cf. Sir Kenneth’s brief absence from the Mount of St. George, during which the standard of England was stolen.—“The Talisman.”

Ch. xiii.

Gar is really twenty-four minutes. A collection of terms used in Kashmir for indicating the different spaces and divisions of time may be interesting to some readers:

- Brunz. = a second, (lit., just a flip of the finger).
- Tsyuh = 12 or 13 brunz.
- Gar = 60 tsyuhs.
- Pahar = 7½ hrs.
- Doh = 4 pahars.
- Doh-rát = 8 pahars (i.e., our full day of 24 hours).
- Haftah = 7 full days.
- Pachh = 2 haftahs.
- Râh = 2 pachhs (i.e., our lunar month).
- Warih = 24 pachhs (i.e., our year of 12 lunar months).

Ad rát (or nisf shab) = Midnight.

Pâtim pahar = 3 o’clock A.M.

Kukar bâng = Cockerowing.

Gazal (Muhammedans)

Brahma Muhurta (Educated Hindus)

Nyuuk, nyuk, gâsh (Uneducated Kashmiris.)

Sunat (Muhammedans)

Prabhât (Educated Hindûs) = Just before daybreak.

Subh = Daybreak.

Ad koj

Koj = Sunrise.

Khandawâv Koj = about 2½ hrs. after sunrise.

Dû pahar = about 4½ hrs. after sunrise.

Mandañi (especially Hindûs). Sanskrit, Madhyan-dena = about 11 o’clock A.M.

Peshín (Peshí in the Panjáb) = Midday.

Sêh pahar = about 2 o’clock P.M.

Nimuz (Muhammedans)

Minuz (Hindûs) = about 3-30, o’clock P.M. (At this time during the long days the schoolmaster shuts his school for half-an-hour or so, that his pupils may have time to go and eat a little food. If you asked a lad on coming from the school at such a time where he was going, he would invariably reply. To Mimuz or Nimuz, i.e., to his afternoon meal.)

Digar (Dígar in the Panjáb) = about 4 o’clock p.m. (This is sometimes distinguished as bod digar and lukan digar, referring respectively to a little time before and after the period.)

Ad digar = Sunset.
Shám = Evening.
Khuphtan = Night. Bedtime, about 9-30 o’clock p.m.

Sometimes the Sanskrit word velá is added thus:—
“Ad rátuk velá” “Kukar bángih handih velá”; but this is more a Panjábí than a Kashmirí form of expression.—Vide Note 714, Vol. I., “Panjáb Notes and Queries”; also Note 1011, Vol. II.

Rangari wónuk khum akis khut tah bëyis hut.
The dyer’s vessel was a success to one and a failure to another.

The dyers have great earthen pots in which they prepare many gallons of dye at a time—sometimes they prepare as much as will last for six months. When the dye is ready for standing a cover is placed upon it and it is left perfectly still for twenty days. During these days should the weather be too hot or too cold the colour will not properly settle, and so much of the half-year’s work will be spoilt.

Rangari wurah.
A dyer’s story (therefore not to be believed).

Rangur. Dyers in the valley are generally Muhammedans. They have an ancient custom of agreeing beforehand amongst themselves that if the dye does not mix properly with the water, and after a time give forth a bad smell, (because it must corrupt before it is fit for use) they will go out and tell as many, and as great, lies as they can, until the dye-water does begin to stink. Some of the lying stories which they invent are very clever and interesting, and are believed in by not a few of the over-credulous people of Srinagar. I speak experimentally, having myself been the subject of one of these dyer’s stories.

Ras laginam tah das tsalinam.
May I get ease and be free from laziness.

A Kashmirí prayer frequently ejaculated at the commencement of any work.

23
Rasah rust batah gav thasah rust chhún.
Rice without soup is like a carpenter without sound.

Rástí bagair gatshih sürisuí hadd račhun.
Besides (having) righteousness we must put a limit upon everything, (i.e., have moderation).

Rat myúni kángar tah wuchh myúni tuk!
Take my kángar and see my paces!
A man with a proud walk.

Rat wandnai tah puj-wónuk.
I will offer you the blood of the butcher’s shop.
Kind at the expense of another.

Rát wítún Gangahbal tah pagah nah yórahbal.
At night he arrives (in his thoughts and plans) at Gangábal, but on the morrow he does not even get to the landing place.
Always planning and never doing.
Gangábal is a stream tributary to the Sindh river; a holy lake near the top of Mount Haránñuk.

Rátas waminás Lail; pagah dupnas “Suh kyáh wátihek Majnúnas”?
In the night the story of Lail was told to him, and on the morrow he said, “What relation will she be to Majnun?”
A dullard.
Lail or Lailá is the name of a lady frequently alluded to in the East. The loves of Lailá and Majnún are celebrated in a fine Persian poem by Nizámi.

Rátuk wódháh sor nai rúd “Wulai gásah grúkane.”
Last night’s promise was not kept, “Come, O grass-cutter.”
Promises are like pie-crust, made to be broken.

Rawah zat thowáh katih?
A ragged rawah, where shall I spread it?
A poor braggart.
Rawah is a covering made from the fur of some animal, generally black, and imported from the Panjáb.

Raz daz tah wuthíni chhós atí.
The rope is burnt (coal-black), but the twist is there (plain enough).
A man deposed or injured, but still harbouring bad thoughts.
Razi gæz tah soṭi mār.
A yard of rope and a stick—strike.
Strict and swift justice.

There is a tale concerning Avantivarman, alias Wainadat alias Rájá Vfn, one of the ancient kings of Kashmir, in which a piece of rope and a small stick are represented as fulfilling the duties of detective, police-officer, chaprasi, &c. If any man or beast or bird had done wrong, the stick and the rope would at once hasten to them, the stick would beat the offender, and the rope would bind him and bring him, her, or it, before the king for justice. Cf. "Indian Fairy Tales," the story of "The Rájá's Son and the Princess Labám," p. 156. "Hero the Rájá's son found four faqirs, whose teacher and master had died, and had left four things,—a bed, which carried whoever sat on it, whithersoever he wished to go; a bag, that gave its owner as much water as he wanted, no matter how far he might be from a tank; and a stick and a rope, to which its owner had only to say, if any one came to make war on him, 'Stick, bent as many men and soldiers as are here,' and the stick would beat them and the rope would tie them up." Cf. also "Folk-tales of Bengal," the story of "the boy whom seven mothers suckled," p. 121. "The boy took down the cage from the ceiling, as well as the club and rope. Having well secured the bird, he addressed the club and rope thus:—"O, stout club! O, strong rope! Take me at once to the other side." In the twinkling of an eye the boy was put on that side of the ocean. Similar quotations also might be made from "Wide-awake Stories," p. 294. "Old Deccan Days," pp. 174-175. "Fairy Tales from Brentano," pp. 146-154. Cf. also Wolf, Beiträge zur Deutschen Mythologie, I., p. 12. "A lad sets out on a journey, having in his possession three wonderful things,—a buck-goat that spits gold, a hen that lays golden eggs, and a table that covers itself, without anybody's help, with the choicest food. A rascally innkeeper steals these treasures from the lad, and puts worthless trash in their place; but a stick that jumps out of a bag in which it is usually concealed, goes to work of its own accord upon the innkeeper's back, and with such effect that the lad gets his own again. The stick then returns of itself to its owner's hand."

Mr. Walter K. Kelly, in his most interesting book, "Curiosities of Indo-European Tradition and Folk-lore," commenting upon this last quotation, writes:—"The table in this story is the all-nourishing cloud. The buck-goat is another emblem of the clouds, and the gold it spits is the golden light of the sun that streams through the fleecy coverings of the sky. The hen's golden egg is the sun itself. The demon of darkness has stolen these things; the cloud gives no rain, but hangs dusky in the sky, veiling the light of the sun. Then the lightning spear of the ancient storm-god Odin leaps out from the bag that concealed it, the robber falls, the rain patters down, the sun shines once more." "This spear of Odin," the learned writer goes on to say, "is an equivalent of the asvattha rod of the Atharva-veda incantation, and both are "wish-rods" especially adapted for bringing victory to their possessor. They have also another comic counterpart in a sort of wish-rod, which serves for administering a dubbing at a distance. With such a hazel implement, cut and prepared wish the proper formalities, one has only to lay an old garment on a molehill or on a threshold, name the person intended, and whack away. That person will feel every blow as sorely as though he were actually under the stick, and if the old garment is beaten into holes so will it be with the skin of the absent sufferer." "Popular tradition is tough!"

Reh razih.
A flame to a rope.
A red flag to a bull.

Rēlakālih gutshum potsh tah wandas gutshum lochh.
In summer I need a cotton phēran and in winter I need a woollen phēran.

Everything in season.
Phēran is the chief garment of the Kashmiri, both male and female, and in shape not unlike a big nightgown with sleeves "a mile long." Sometimes the colour of these garments is red and other times blue. When made from wool they are called lochh, and when made from cotton, potsh. "Probably" the phēran comes from the word pairáhan, the Persian for "garment."

Reyih chhuh shabnamai tūfán.
The dew is like a flood to the ant.
Panjábī.—Kīrī nun tūthā darād.

Rish gayov pardesh dōwah neriam Rishih nōv tātih κuθhios tamih nishih. Nā-hakkah, Rishē, gārī drik.
A Rishi went to another country, to try and get his name famous there as a Rishi, but he got less celebrated than before (in his own country). O Rishi, you left your home without a cause.

An omigre.
Rish (Rishi and Rikhi) is a Hindu sage or saint.

Rogan o sāfarān az Pāmpūr. Sōg az Lētapūr brinj az Nipūr; Barrah az Nandapūr. Puśtu o māhī az Sopūr; Moīg az Krālapūr. Ārad az Khāmpūr. Shīr az Shādipūr. Angūr az Rēpūr.
Pāmpūr (the place) for ghī and saffron. Letapūr for vegetables. Nipūr for rice. Nandapūr for lamb. Sopūr for Ropeyih hatas kāngar band.

A kāngar as a pledge for Rs. 100.
A kāngar is worth a mere trifle.

Rovmut gur chhuh shetah mohur.
A lost horse is valued at 60 sovereigns.

Ruchmakho luchh tah tsutmakho kachh.
I trained you (at very great expense), a lákh of rupees; but
I turned you off at a trifle.
Losing a good servant on account of some trifle.

Rúd pēthu chhēh rab wuthán.
Mud comes from a fall of rain.
Punishment follows sin.

Rúdá peyihe, kapsá bowihe,
Wurah mūjih karihah, korah potsah.
If it rains and cotton grows,
I will make for my stepmother a "bran new" phčran.
A conditional promise, as "When my ship comes home."
A certain man was in debt and went to a friend for the loan of some money wherewith to pay it. He urged his request in the following words:—"O, my friend, please lend me the money. For God's sake help me to satisfy this impatient creditor. Deliver me from this great trouble. After a little while I shall be able to repay you with interest. The spring has come and the grass will grow over my land, and the people will send their flocks and herds to graze thereon, and then the wool of the sheep will catch itself in the brambles and thorn bushes, and I will go and collect the wool, and will spin it; and when it is ready I will give it to the weaver, and he will make a blanket out of it, which I will sell, and buy a mare with the price thereof; and when the mare has foaled, I will sell the foal for more than one hundred rupees—if a man offers me only one hundred rupees I will not accept it; and then I shall be able, and shall be glad, to pay you." The friend laughed aloud on the conclusion of this harangue. "Why do you laugh?" said the debtor, "do you not think that it will be as I say?"

Rúhan pír chhik kḥush-hál.
The pírs are glad when people die (or over the dead).
Cited when any one speaks evil of the dead, or takes pleasure in another's misfortune. There are two ways of understanding the saying with respect to the piars,—either that they really are pleased because of the largesse and feast which generally accompany a funeral, or that they pray for the dead as though they loved them. The one way of interpreting it is as general as the other.

Rút manivzen nah zah kānkh gatshanās kūṭ pānai kānkh āhi pūṭ.

Do not pander to a sulky angry person; and in a little while his sides will become weary, and he will come and beg for forgiveness.

Rutnun sas.
Ratun’s dāl.

A stupid, extravagant servant.

Gagar Wol, a collector, had a very stupid servant called Ratun. One day when the master was visiting a certain village with his servant he told the chief farmer of the village to be so kind as to give some dāl, a kind of pulse, to his servant for his dinner. The farmer, anxious like all other people, to ingratiate himself in the favour of the collector, gave the servant one kharwār, or 192 pounds, of dāl.

Ratun went and cooked the whole of this,—a mighty feast, some thirty or more big earthen pots full of steaming dāl!

As soon as Gagar Wol returned to his quarters he was terribly surprised to find that his servant had been so stupid as to cook the whole kharwar of dāl.

Ryno, ryno! khatir chhui, bēnīk chhai rāntsas rani chhai kī. O husband, husband! Your idea is that a sister is a giantess and a wife is as jasmine.
S

Sabúr chhú sunah sund túr.
Patience is as a dish of gold.

Túr is the dish out of which the Pandítaníş eat; a big round deep brazen dish.

Súfah khutah sáf kyah? Dúkah.
Zúyulíh khutah zúyul kyah? Balái.
What is cleaner than the clean? The forehead.
What is finer than the fine? Misfortune.

The questions were Akbar’s and the answers Bír Bal’s. Undoubtedly there is reference in the first question and answer to the Hindu notion that every child’s destiny is inscribed upon the forehead at the time of its birth. Some say that Brahma writes this inscription, the Kashmirí Pandít says that Vishnu (or Hari) does. Cf. note to “Yath nárah butihswút.”

Whatever is written upon the forehead “by the finger of destiny” is clean—clear—fixed; and misfortune is a hard (fine) narrow way.

Sáfar chhúh káfír.
The way is like an infidel.
A hard, unpleasant journey.

Sahal chíaas pétah jahal.
Angry over a little matter.

Súhíb chhúh bakhshánhúr.
God is a giver.

Súhíb chhúh kaníh talikis kêmís tah krúlas rézik wátanáwán.
God provides food for the worm and insect under the stone.

Jehovah-jíreh.

Solomon was once sitting by the riverside when he saw an ant creeping along by the edge of the water with a grain of rice in its mouth. While the little creature was toiling along a crocodile came forth from the river and swallowed the ant, grain and all, and then took a dive into the water. In an hour’s time the crocodile re-appeared and vomited the ant; and the king noticed that there was not a grain of rice in the insect’s mouth. “I wonder what the reason of this is,” said he aloud to himself. The ant heard these words and replied, “God has planted a stone in this river, and in a hole in that stone lives a little blind worm. So God ordered me to get a grain of rice every day and take it to that worm; and gave me for a help this crocodile to carry me down to the hole of that worm, as I could not reach there by my own means.

Sáhibzádah-i-zamún híkah latén lamún.
The son of the Lord of the Age is pulling up vegetables.
A great man busying himself in little matters.

Sákhai diyih bár bár tâh bákhai diyih yak bár.
The generous man will give many times, but the miser will give once only.

Samandaras manz gírah gatshtí kuts mulán thapak karuní.
Floating in the sea to catch at the roots of the kuts plant.
Catching at a straw.

Kuts. Indigofera heterantha. The twigs are used in making baskets.

By the sea is here meant the Wular Lake, the largest lake in Káshmir. The natives say that Káshyapá, the drainer of the valley, brought a specimen of everything here, that could be found on the face of the earth: yea, he brought the sea also. The Holy Shástras, too, declare that everything is to be met with in Káshmir, lions and all manner of beasts, all manner of birds and fruits and flowers, &c., &c., and that men must believe this though they may never see, or hear of, them!

The Wular Lake is almost oval in shape, and is at its greatest 12 miles long from north to south, 10 miles wide from east to west, and 16 feet deep; (the average depth is just 12 feet). The boatmen always approach this magnificent piece of water with fear and trembling, and once started, hasten over it as though it were a grave ready every moment to swallow them up. They have many tales, ancient and modern, true and fictitious, which they will tell with great enthusiasm if the visitor desires.

Sandijih diván žáli tah hêndawend tsalan nírit.
Taking up some mustard-seed in the hand, and a water-melon escapes.
A great loss to a careful man.

Sang-i-Pháras.
The Philosopher’s stone.
The daughter of one of the principal citizens of Srinagar went to the river to drink. Instead of drinking with her hands, as is the custom, she bent down her face into the water and drank like a dog. While she was drinking a young snake, almost invisible, entered her mouth. (The people say that snakes lay eggs and that in each egg there are thousands of pieces of the finest cotton-like matter, which eventually develope into snakes.) For many years this girl nourished this snake in her stomach. She had no pain, she did not even feel any thing that ought not to be inside. In course of time she was married; and a sorry marriage for the husband it turned out to be:—for while they were both sleeping in their bed, at the dead of night, a snake came out from the mouth of the wife and bit her husband, so that he died in dreadful pain soon afterwards.

The poor woman's grief in the morning, when she discovered the cold corpse of her beloved husband, was beyond all description; she tore her hair and clothes, she beat her breasts, and shrieked aloud.
The people came and enquired what was the matter, and when they heard, they all charged her with having poisoned the man. This report was carried all over the city, even to the great Mughal governor, 'Ali Mardan Khan. When he heard of it, he sent for the girl, and kept her with him. He enquired of her the truth of the matter, and the girl replied in tears that she did not know anything concerning it, and that she was asleep at the time. The governor told her to go to her room, and when she had closed her eyes in sleep, he went and sat by her to watch. He waited and waited until at last he saw a snake appear from her mouth, and put out its fangs with a most menacing look. 'Ali Mardan Khan went away as quickly as possible and informed his attendants what he had seen, and ordered them to tell this girl to make some bread on the morrow. The big oven was to be heated, and when the girl had finished making the loaf, and was putting it into the oven somebody standing by was to take her up and fling her headlong into the oven. This was done, and when they opened the oven some hours afterwards to see what had become of the girl, they found only a stone about half-a-pound in weight, which was carried to the governor and kept very carefully by him. It appeared that this was the famous alchemist's stone, and that by its means 'Ali Mardan Khan was able to trans-mute copper and brass and all other metals into gold. His person, his servants, his horses, his rooms glittered with gold. ('Ali Mardan Khan was the most magnificent of the Mughal governors. The expenses of each of his trips into Kashmir are said to have exceeded a lakh of rupees.)

When 'Ali Mardan Khan was about to die he called his four sons unto him, and giving the precious stone to the eldest of them, he told him to throw it into the river (Indus).

The eldest son refused to obey this strange order; so it was handed to the second, and then to the third, but all most resolutely refused to throw away so precious a stone; at length the fourth and youngest son threw it with all his might into the water opposite Attock (Attock); and where the stone pitched a great blazing flame arose from the midst of the river, as of ignited gold.

'Ali Mardan Khan ordered the stone to be thrown into the river because he feared lest it should pass into the hands of another, and they become as wealthy as he.
The Kashmiris say that the stone is there in the river to the present day. Ranjit Singh tried hard to obtain it. He had the water stopped a hundred yards above and below the place where the stone had pitched, the place was drained, and a most rigid search made, but nothing was discovered. (This is only one out of many stories extant in the valley concerning the origin of the Philosopher’s stone.—Capt. Temple has a variant of the above story with some excellent notes concerning the Lamiá in ‘The Indian Antiquary,’ Vol XI., Part cxxxv., pp. 230.)

Sangal-ñipuch padmán.

Sangal-Díp’s beautiful woman.

Humph! you might be a grand woman!

It is related that one day Shiva and Párvati were sitting together, when the latter rose up suddenly and ran away. Shiva followed her as fast as he could, but was not able to catch her. At last thoroughly exhausted he lay down in a certain place, Sangal-Díp by name, and went to sleep; and it happened that there in that place a madan-pit became. Shiva woke up in a great rage, and turning to the pit he said, “If you should ever see a beautiful woman like a lotus you must follow her.” He then departed.

The inhabitants of Sangal-Díp are constantly going to other countries, and seizing their beautiful women, are taking them to their own country, where they teach them to ride the most beautiful and swift horses. When they are able to ride well, these beautiful women are taken close to the pit and obliged to say, “O Kámadeva, O Kámadeva, I am Padmán” (i.e., a beautiful woman and like a lotus. Cf. note “Khoran nah khrav.”) On hearing this Kámadeva comes forth and runs after her with all the swiftness with which he can run; and should it happen that he overtakes her, she will immediately be killed. After killing the woman Kámadeva returns to the pit, and it generally happens that madan (procreating principle) escapes from him into the pits, which precede his own special abode, and which have been dug for this purpose.

Díp. (Sanskrit.—Dvípa) Hindú philosophers say that the terrestrial globe contains seven díps or islands, encompassed by seven seas, the whole land and water measuring 7,957,752 yojanas. The Sangal Díp (Simhálá) is in the north direction. (Cf. Dvípa. Monier Williams, Dict.)

Kámadeva is generally regarded as the god of sexual love, like Eros of the Greeks and Cupid of the Latins. He is worshipped at the time of marriage; and happiness in the married state, and offspring are sought from him. (Cf. Kennedy, “Hindú Myth,” &c.)

Sant gai tim, yim mutrah suíł trámas baníwan sun.

They are faqírs, who by means of water transmute copper into gold.

Not every man is a monk who wears a cowl.

In the Chinar Bûgh, Srinagar, there is a temple in memory of a deceased faqír, who was able to perform this wonder. He, also, taught a Pandit, who is now a very old man living in Srinagar, too old to do anything—even to make gold!

Muthar = Sanskrit mātra, and Persian pesh-āb.

Santoshīḥ biyālīḥ bowīḥ ānanduk phal.

A harvest of peace is produced from a seed of contentment.

This proverb is credited to a holy and clever Pandit called Nand Rām, who lived at Bāwan, a sacred Hindū village in Kashmir. This man wrote many rather clever verses in praise of Krishna. He seems to have been terribly dunned by the officials of Bāwan, if one may judge from the following lines:

\[\begin{align*}
\text{Nand Rām aus zamindār,} \\
\text{Hūrit diyār tas sūras nāh lār} \\
\text{Wāngiūwārīkhsājīs nāh gāngal.} \\
\text{Santoshīḥ biyālīḥ bowīḥ ānanduk phal.} \\
\text{Nand Rām was a husbandman.}
\end{align*}\]

And he paid his debts; but there was always somebody after him (for money.)

He never knew what it was to live freely in his own house, but was continually obliged to lodge in the house of another.

( Never mind), from the seed of contentment a harvest of peace will be reaped.

The piece of poetry from which the above proverb is taken is the following:

\[\begin{align*}
\text{Dharmah būmikāyīh wāvizīh karmuk phal.} \\
\text{Santoshīḥ biyālīḥ bowīḥ ānanduk phal.} \\
\text{Dvīh prānah dāndah-jūri dēn tah rāt wāi;} \\
\text{Kumbkah kūrah zorah tīmanuī lāl;} \\
\text{Hīlakah kar bīhit yūt nāh rozhīh ak rēl.} \\
\text{Santoshīḥ biyālīḥ bowīḥ ānanduk phal.} \\
\text{Lolachīh yaṭāhpurīh datāh phuṭrāv;} \\
\text{Wairuk sēēh yūt nāh rozēs tal.} \\
\text{Santoshīḥ biyālīḥ bowīḥ ānanduk phal.}
\end{align*}\]

You should sow the seeds of destiny in the soil of Dharma (i.e., virtue, religion, duty, law, moral and religious truth according to the Vedas and the law).

From the seed of contentment a harvest of peace will be reaped.

Plough with the two oxen of the two breaths day and night,

Strike them hard with the whip of extreme meditation;

Endeavour so that not a spot of ground will remain unploughed.

From the seed of contentment a harvest of peace is reaped.

Break the clods with the staff of love,

That the damp of envy may not remain beneath:

From the seed of contentment a harvest of peace is reaped.

Sar cēyīḥ sārdār, tawah pataḥ bālah-yār, tawah pataḥ sub-ahdār.

First the master of the feast will drink, after that the dear friend, and then the officer of rank.
Affection goes before rank.
Cooks on tasting the dishes previous to sending them to the master are accustomed to quote these words.

Sará dúntum, sará dúntum, sarav khutah buḍ tel phul wótis nah aud.
I saw a tank, I saw a tank,—it was larger than other tanks, but it would not contain a half of the sesame flower. (Sesac-mum orientale.)
A big, fat man, but no brains.
This is also a riddle, and the answer is, a nipple, an udder.

Sarasah sunzah sat zewah.
A snake has seven tongues.
A man who speaks whichever way fancy or company-wind blows.
Hindústání.—Sámp ke sáṭ zubán.
Some devás or gods ascended to heaven to get some amrit (water of life), and when they descended to earth again they put it into an earthenware vessel, which they placed on the top of a tree. The Rákshasas, huge giants, or rather ogres, wished to possess themselves of this amrit. So one took upon himself the form of a crow, and flew, and perched upon the top of that tree and jerked off that earthenware vessel. On seeing this Vásak Nág (Vásuki or Básak Nág), a king of the snakes, with all his hosts came and drank up the amrit, and while they were drinking it, the rákshasa from the top of the tree cursed them. “Have I not taken all this trouble to obtain this water of life, and now you have consumed it. Henceforth let there be to you seven tongues.”

Saras sarposh.
A basket-cover for a pond.
Much need but little cash.

Sári pāthi sālāb.
One’s head even deluged.
Head and ears in trouble.

Sarráf gansarán déyúr taḥ atráf ráwarán doḥ.
The banker counts the money and the spendthrift wastes the day.

Saruf chhuh pakán hul hul, wáj taḥ wátít syud.
The snake goes crookedly, yet it arrives straight within its hole.
A man who is of a different disposition out-of-doors and among strangers to what he is in his own house.
Sas chhuh nah zah sikhas khasán.
Dál never rises to the spit.
A low man will never be promoted.
Sas (or dál), a kind of kidney bean (Phaseolus Mar or Rraiatatus).

Sas myut baṭas, muth myut katus, nindar mit drālid katas.
Dál is sweet to the Pandit, muth is sweet to the sheep, and sleep is sweet to the son of misfortune.
Dál is the Paspalum frumentaceum.
Muth is a species of leguminous plant.

Sāsas sun pitáras bhāganiḥ til chirāgas!
A thousand rūpís worth of gold in the pitār, and a mite’s worth of oil in the lamp!
A man with little money, but who uses it to a good purpose is of more worth to the world than the wealthy but miserly man; also the man with little knowledge, who uses it, is of more profit to the world, than the extraordinarily clever man, who reserves his knowledge for himself.

Sat buthi āhis chandas andar.
Seven faces are in his pocket.
Mr. Smooth-Tongue; every thing to every man.

Satuti sanz hūdar yat.
The hoopoo’s big basketful of mushrooms.
Slow but sure. Many a mickle makes a muckle.
Yat is a big long basket which the Kashmiri coolie fastens on his back, and trots away as happily as possible over hill and dale with a maund or so of goods in it. The story is that a hoopoo once gathered as many mushrooms as would fill a yat, and as he would have to gather them singly, the amassing of such a large number must have cost him much time and labour. Hence the saying.
It is also said that this hoopoo when he reached home after his labours one day asked his wife to cook some of the mushrooms. Of course the mushrooms were considerably diminished in size and weight from the cooking, but the hoopoo suspected that his wife had either eaten, or concealed, some of them; and so in the heat of passion he then and there killed her and threw the corpse out of the nest.

Sēh kas be-pír andar mulk-i-Kashmír.
Wali Had o Harí Bahādur o Sukhā Pír.
Three persons are without religion in the country of Kashmír—
Wali Haḍ, Harí Bahādur, and Sukhā Pír.
These three persons are now living in Kashmír, and are a great trouble to the quieter class of people. Wali Haḍ is a Muhammedan, the other two are Pandits. Haḍ means hard, resolute, and this name has been added to Wali, because if this man is refused any thing he will sit by the house for days and make great lamentation, until he obtains his request. The title of Bahádur was given to Harí under amusing circumstances (according to the people's story). They say that His late Highness the Mahárájáh Guláb Singh was once very ill, and the Bráhmans being consulted, they advised that a man should be found who would leap a few times upon the king's stomach and make him well. Great search was made, but nobody was found to come forward and do this strange act. At last Harí presented himself and jumped several times upon His Highness, who was immediately relieved of his pain. The title of Bahádur was accordingly given to the fakír by the common folk, and a large present of money by the Mahárájáh. Sukhá Pir is a very big, stout and powerful man, and blessed with a monstrous appetite. Strange stories are told of the enormous quantity of food which this man now and then disposes of. Sometimes those who can afford it invite this man to their houses, and have him fed before them as a kind of tamáshá.

Sékhí sháthas híi no wávízh ; wátas dízíh náh tsumrívi rínsí ; gyánich kath kásh mudás wánízh — zan rávarut kum-yájén til.
Sow not jasmine upon the sand; fire not a leathern marble against the rock; speak not words of divine wisdom to a fool—because, if you do, it will be like wasting oil over bran-cakes.

Another version is:—

Sékhí sháthas phál no wávízh ; rávarizíh náh kum-yájén til ; Mudás gányánach kath no wánízh, kharás gor dinah rówi doh.
Sow not seeds on the river-bed (or the sand); waste not oil over bran-cakes;
Tell not matters of religion to the ignorant; and if you give sugar to an ass, you will lose the day (i.e., you will lose your labour).

Sékhí tíl ták wéthraníh súban.
Oil to the sand and soap to the wéthran.

Labour lost.
Wéthran is a sack made of grass and generally used by the poor Kashmíri cultivator.

Sétsaníh páwih atsun hásti báráníh nérun.
Entering by the eye of a needle and coming out by the elephant's stable-door.
"Humble enough at first, but now so proud!"
A "risen" man.
Sēzīh ungaįh chkuh nakh gyav khasān.
Ghī is not to be taken up with a straight finger.
Blows bring sonso.

Shābash buṭah malikah!
Well-done, simple fellow!
Praise a stupid person and you can get anything from him.
Buṭah lit. Ladākī, who in former times suffered much in bargaining with the Kashmirī on account of his ignorance of the language and dulness of intellect.

"Shādí moj! warud kyuth?" "Bechanah khutah setkah rut?"
"O mother Shādí! how do you like your second husband?"
"It is much better than begging."
Once marry for love, twice marry for money.

Shāb buṭh Wushkarīh, yas yih khush kurīh suh tih karīh.
The king settled in Wushkur, and whatsoever a man pleased that he did.
The king must reside in the midst of his people.
When the cat is away the mice do play.
Wushkur is a village in the Kamrāz.

Shaitānāh sundi kan zari.
Satan’s deaf ears.
Kashmirīs are very fond of sounding their own praises. Before, however, giving utterance to a word they sometimes pray that Satan’s ekars may be closed, in order that he may not hear them, and, becoming offended, curse them.

Shakar ai chhui mits gatshanait;
Mits ai chhāi shakar gatshanait.
If it is sugar then may it become earth to you;
If it is earth then may it become sugar to you.
Cited against the man who lies just to escape giving, or on some other trifling account.
Hindūstānī.—Allah kare shakar howe.
Allah kare mits howe.

A fakīr was wandering by the riverside one afternoon, when he saw a barge approaching. He enquired, as he was wont to do, what was in the barge. The man replied “Only earth.” The fakīr suspecting that the man had led unto him, prayed that God would grant this man’s answer to be correct. God heard the prayer, and the whole cargo of sugar was changed into earth. Soon after this another barge came along. “What cargo have you?” said the fakir. "Earth," answered the man. This reply was true, and the fakir prayed again that if it were true, that God would turn it all into sugar. This prayer also was granted. (Cf. "Indian Fairy Tales," pp. 96, 97, 272, 273.)

Shakar mūkrūz.
Scissors of sugar (but none the less sharp and cutting for all that).

Shāl gav kulih zih ālam gav kulih.
A jackal got into the river, and it was as though the whole world had got in.
Panjābī.—Ap moe jag parlo.

Shāl gub tah hākah-tsar barābar.
A jackal, ewe, and string of vegetables are equal.
Justice.

This saying dates back to the days of Noshīrwān, a king of Persia in whose reign Muḥammad was born (A. D. 578). Noshīrwān is the Persian for just, and the king called by this name is said to have been so just that perfect peace reigned in the land both among men and beasts. Noshīrwān kept a jackal, a ewe, and a string of vegetables in one and the same place; but the jackal did not harm the ewe, and the ewe did not touch the vegetables;—to such an extent did peace reign!

The jackal, ewe, and string of vegetables may also be taken figu-rationally as representing different grades of people, every one of whom the just king esteemed equally worthy of attention and protection.

Shāl tsalit bāthēn chob.
The jackal escapes and the man smites the ground.

Crying over spilt milk.

Shūlah sunz ūng.
The howling of a jackal.

Lupus pilum mutat, non mentem.

A jackal in the course of its nightly peregrinations visited the house of a certain dyer and tumbled into the blue dye-pot, and its fur became as blue as blue can be. In this ridiculous state it went away, but was afraid to return to its companions. Eventually it took up its abode on the top of a very high rock. In the course of time the news spread that a new beast was to be found in a certain place every night at such a time. The bear, the tiger, the lion, all were informed of this new animal, and a big council was held in which it was decided to invite the stranger and to make him their king and head. The blue jackal came and was duly crowned by the lion; but at evening-time when all the other jackals began as usual to scream and to howl, this blue jackal, also, instinctively screamed and howled. Now the mystery was discovered. This king was only a painted jackal! When the lion and bear and tiger heard this they went at once and killed the blue jackal. (This story slightly changed is in the Pañca-tantra.)

_Shálíh tářak háwuni._

To show stars to a (sharp) woman, (in order to try and frighten her).

She knows well enough what you are up to, you will have to try some other plan.

_Shálín byol chhuč hihúí._

Shol seed is like shol.

Like father like son.

_Shol_ is millet-seed (Pennisetum italicum).

_Shámah gatáh tah rot arafah._

The evening darkness is the vigil of the night’s festival.

Quoted when any one pushes on work into the late hours of the night in order that little or none may be left to be done on the morrow.

_Shámah tsutur tah mandíni bōhwál._

Sharp (enough) at evening, but lazy and sleepy at noon.

Quoted against wives and unemployed sons, &c.

_Shámásui tal chhēč gatáh._

There is a darkness under the candle.

A good king, but bad ministers; a good master, but bad servants.

Hindi.—Chirágh ke tale anáherá.

_Sharákuts hanz deg chhēč khemuts honev._

The dogs ate up the partnership saucepan.

Two partners quarrel and go to law, and lose everything.

Persian.—Du morg jang kunand fa’ida-i-tírgar.

_Sharahas sharmúi kyah !_

What, is there shame in “The Law!”

Right as the Bible.

_Shayih ástan tah lúkanú toshtan._

Live thou and do good to others.

This is a line from one of the verses composed by the clever wife of the celebrated Munshi Bahwání Dás, who lived in the time of Akbar. He was a Kashmirí, a great poet, and some of his works remain in the Persian language; but there is no trace of his house or family.

25
For some reason Bahwânî Dás separated from his first wife and married another. This second wife became very devoted to him, and one day in a fit of jealousy she composed the following lines:—

Tanahdai rēsie sunah chhām asān.
Yanah yāri travānam karnā kath.
Sheyah āstān tah lukanūt toshūn.
Tōtēh chhām dīlasūt sat.
Chhāmāh līdān akih lātiḥ yiyih nā!
Wandahsūṭ hātikūṭ rāt.
When my husband does not speak to me;
Then, O friend, the other wife laughs at me.
O let him live and do good to others!
And there will be comfort to my mind.
If he would but come to me once.
I would offer unto him the sacrifice of my throat's blood!
Wēs is a woman's female friend. (Hindūstānī—saheli.)
Sun., a rival wife. (Polygamy is not very common among Kashmīrī Hindūs).

Shekh tah trēh tah nav tah kāh.
Six and three and nine and eleven.

"Black crows have been thrown up, Three, Two and One;
And here I find all comes at last to none"!

"The Three Black Crows."—Byrom.

Shekkah bāhī khāl sahīkh, pagāh naḥīn.
The Shekh's custom is "Yes" to-day, and "No" to-morrow.

A fickle person.

Shekh Imām-ud-dīn was the last of the ten Sikh governors, who tyrannised over the valley for about twenty-seven years (1819 to 1846 A. D.) Report represents him to have been a very fickle monarch, and tells the following anecdote concerning him:—

One day the Shekh appointed a Pandit to some office and soon after his appointment the Pandit appeared in the palace-yard riding upon a horse with his face towards the beast's tail. The Shekh happened to be there with his retinue, and seeing this ludicrous character laughed loudly. Great was his surprise to find that the man was the very Pandit, to whom he had just given an appointment. "Why are you making such a fool of yourself?" said he. "I am riding thus," replied the Pandit, "in order that I may see quickly who is to be appointed in my place!"

Afterwards Shekh Imām-ud-dīn did not change his servants so frequently.

Shekkah royih Shaitân.
A Shekh in appearance, but a devil in truth.

Appearances are not always to be trusted.
Shenkaruni makuz, nah phalán tah nah galán.
Shenkar’s axe, neither wears away, nor melts.
Cited concerning a hale and hearty, old wicked person.
Shenkar (Sanskrit, Shan-kara) was a very famous Hindu zakir of the grand style.—His dress was of pashmina, (a very fine silky cloth), and he always rode upon a handsome horse. He lived at Chhatshah-Bal, where there is a small temple erected to his memory. He died about two years ago, at the age of sixty.
Shenkar used every day to climb the Takht-i-Sulaimán (a big hill overlooking Srinagar), to perform his devotions in the ancient temple there. Another name for this hill is Shenkarátsári, an ancient Hindu philosopher, after whom this Shenkar was called. (Cf Sankarácárya. Monier William’s Dicty.)
Shenkar’s popularity was chiefly derived from his celebrated charmed axe. It was so, that whenever he heard that any one was in trouble or sickness, he would visit them, and after saying a few words, would wave the axe above and around the distressed person’s head and body, and should he be indisposed, or the weather be inclement, he used to send the axe with especial directions how to manage it. Report says that large numbers were thus healed and comforted. The axe was a very strong and handsome one.
Shenkar’s family are still living in Srinagar, and are very much respected. Rám Chand seems to be the principal member of this family now alive. He is a very clever munshi, and in receipt of about Rs 200 per mensem. Every year, on the anniversary of Shenkar’s death, his two hundred special followers, all of whom belong to the dar class, visit Rám Chand and make special presents to him in recognition of their intense respect for his father and their saint.

Sheoth gav zih breth gav.
Sixty years become, stupid become.
Once a man, twice a child.

Sheethah wuhur hív tah shíthah wuhur káwah-pút.
Sixty years a crow and eight years a young crow (i.e., in the matter of wisdom and experience).
Foolish father, wise son.
The Kashmiris tell a story of an old female crow, who was once giving advice to her young ones. She warned them especially to beware of man. He did not care for their forwardness, nor was he charmed by their “caw-caw”; but on the contrary, he would certainly kill them, if he had the chance. “Now, listen,” said the old crow. “When you see a man bending his body down to the ground, and putting forth a hand, take heed; because the man is about to pick up a stone wherewith to strike and maim you.” “Very well, very well,” said the young crows, and there was a general “caw-caw” of approval. But one of the young ones, who was sharper than the rest, did not quite agree. “Suppose,” enquired he, “that the man has already a stone under his arm, what shall we do in that case?"

Sheyav pírav khutah chhuh be-pírú ján.
Better to follow no saint than (to try) to follow six saints.
A man cannot serve many masters.

Sheyih manih nah shábásh, wupasas nah laz.
No praise if one cooks six maunds of food, and no shame if there is nothing cooked
A too lenient, indifferent, father or master. If the child, or the servant does well, he has no praise for him; and if the child or the servant neglects or spoils his work, he has not a word of blame for him.

Shiktastáh náv Shád!
Broken-hearted yet called Gladness!

Shín díshit yih gagur karih tí chhuk rupeyih díshit karán.
What the rat will do when it sees the snow, that you are doing when you see rúpis.
The Kashmiri says that rats can tell from the quantity and character of the snow upon the mountains whether the winter will be a very severe one or not. Should it angur badly, then each rat will gather for himself as much as six sars of rice-grain.

Shínah pêto! báyih yito!
Fall, O snow! Come, O brother!
Yearning for the absent one's return.
A bird called Shínah-pípín was going away much to the sorrow of his brother-Shínah-pípín, who asked him with tears in his eyes, when he intended to come back again. "When the snow falls I shall be here again," he replied. Time passed, the snow fell heavily, but no Shínah-pípín came back.

Shínah shart.
A snow concern (or arrangement).
No practical jokes, please. This is not Shínah shart (or "April fool's day.")
The Kashmiris are very glad to see the snow; and they have a custom which allows them to play jokes upon one another with impunity on that day, when the snow first falls. Sometimes they will take a piece of the new snow and wrapping it up in paper give it to a friend as if tobacco, or snuff, &c.
Should this friend take and open it, then he is very much laughed at, and has to pay a forfeit. Amongst the educated it is customary to write the following Persian couplet upon paper, and give it to their friend as if it were an important letter or parwâna, &c.

Barf i nau afâd sad mubârak bâd,
An chi shart âst râd bâyâd dâd?
The new snow has fallen, a hundred congratulations to you.
What is the agreement—(but a trifle!)—so you must pay up quickly.

Should the friend read only one word of this, he is caught and has to pay a trifling forfeit.

A Pandit has just remarked that the animals, too, are rejoiced to see the snow, but especially the dogs. On being asked "Why?" he said, "Because all the dogs look upon the snow falling as their maternal uncle coming from Heaven to visit them." On further enquiry as to where he heard this, he replied that, "All children in Kashmir were so taught. He did not know any reason for thus thinking."

Shîr-i-mádar chhui.
A mother's milk to you.
A proper arrangement, &c.

Shirahpûrîh pîrah yenîwol āv.
The wedding-company of saints from Shírapur has come.
The arrival of any great man.
Shírapûr is a little village about two miles from Islámábâd, and abounds in Muhammedan saints, who marry their daughters in grand style. Horses and music, and sometimes as many as a hundred singers, attend the wedding-company.

Shistarâh suîti chhuh shistar phâṭân.
Iron is cut by iron.
Set a thief to catch a thief.
Persian.—Ki áhan ba áhan towân kard narm.

Shiyas shiyá tah Miyas Miyá.
Shiás with Shías and Mîyas with Mîyas.
Caste with caste; like with like.
Shiyá—Miyá, (Shíâ and Miyá) the one is a Muhammedan and the other a Hindú sect.

Shodah sans kalah hîr, yután dazuk,
Tután karuk nah pánahwâni hat.
Until the head of the Shodah is burnt,
They will not speak to one another.
Five friends chanced to meet, and all having leisure they decided to go to the bázár and purchase a hîr, and have a great feast in the house of one of the party, each of whom subscribed four ánás. The hir was bought, but while they were returning to the house it was remembered that there was not any butter. On this one of the five proposed, by way of having some fun, that the first of them, who should break the silence by speaking, should go for the butter. Now it was no light matter to have to retrace one’s steps back to the butter-shop, as the way was long and the day was very hot. So they all five kept strict silence. Pots were cleaned, the fire was prepared and the hir laid thereon; now and then somebody coughed and another groaned, and one even was so filled with a sense of the ridiculous as to laugh aloud, but never a tongue uttered a word, although the fire was fast going out, and the hir was getting burnt, owing to there being no fat or butter wherewith to grease the pot.

Thus matters proceeded until at last a policeman passed by, and attracted by the smell of cooking, he looked in at the window and saw these five men perfectly silent and sitting around a burnt hir. Not knowing the arrangement he supposed that either these people were mad, or else they must be thieves; and so he enquired how they came there? and how did they obtain the hir? Not a word was uttered in reply. “Why are you squatting around the burnt hir in that stupid fashion?” shouted the policeman. Still no reply. Then the policeman full of rage that these wretched men should have thus mocked at his authority took them all off straight to the Police Inspector’s office. On arrival the Inspector asked them the reason of their strange behaviour, but he also got no reply. This rather tried the patience and temper of this man of authority, who was generally feared and flattered and bribed. He ordered one of the five Shodahs to be immediately flogged. The poor Shodah bore it bravely and never a sound he uttered; but when the lashes fell thick and fast, and whipped the already whipped and wounded places, so that the blood appeared, he could endure no longer, and so shouted, “Oh, oh, why do you beat me? Enough, enough. Oh, is it not enough that the hir has been spoilt?” His four associates now cried out, “Go to the bazar and fetch the butter. Go.”

The Police Inspector was still more surprised and annoyed when he heard of this further contempt of the court, and ordered a thorough investigation of the whole matter. Everything was now, of course, fully and clearly explained, and great was the amusement of everybody, not excepting the Police Inspector. Cf. “Story of the Twenty-five Idiots” in “The Orientalist,” Vol. I., p. 136.

Hir is the head of any animal used for food.

Shokh tah punahsund.
Happiness and more (children) to you.

A Kashmírí blessing.

When the piece of flaming birch-wood is being passed around the head of the child and company present, the midwife repeats the above words. Cf. custom "sutuk" in note to "Lánțînâh gārih utuk;" There is a division of opinion regarding the meaning of these words, even among the highest class of Bráhmans. The balance of favour seems to be for the above rendering, deriving Shokh from th. Persian and pavoehund from the Sanskrit चौँ: "again," and sund from सूढ़, "may these be."

Shrákîh tak mázas chhuâ wád?
What answer will the meat give to the knife?
The tyrant will not receive any reply.

Shukr, zát-i-pákâh, nah áyam yâd nah lugum phákâh.
Thanks, O holy one, neither was my stomach filled, nor had I to fast.
"Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me."—Prov. xxx. 8.

Shungit báng dâpûnî.
To cry the báng when asleep.
A lazy, dilatory, fellow.
Báng is the Muhammadan call to prayers.

Shupi káníh wachhâs zarí nál.
A golden nál over a fan-like bony breast.
A gaudily-dressed ugly person.
Shup is a flat basket used for winnowing grain.
Nál is the border of the garment called the kurtah, round the neck and down the breast.

Shur gav brór; wulâh wulâh kurus tah yâyîh.
A child is a cat, tell it to come and it will come.
A child cries and runs for food.

Shur nyuv pázan tah shistar khyaw gagaran.
The hawk took the child and the rat ate the iron.
Tit for tat.
Persian.—Ki mosh áhan khorad kodak burad báz.
A man about to start on a journey entrusted several mounds of iron to the care of a merchant-friend. After several years he returned and sent to this friend for the iron. The merchant, in whose charge it was, being a rogue had sold the iron; and now sent to say how sorry he was that the iron had been eaten by rats. This reply somewhat astonished the other merchant, he could not understand how the iron could possibly have been broken and masticated by rats. However, he did not argue the matter in words, but went straight off to the place where the lying-merchant’s child was playing, and decoyed the little fellow away to a very secret place. The merchant on discovering the loss of his child, became almost frantic with grief.
He went tearing his hair and shrieking everywhere, “My child, where is my child?” The other merchant seeing him in such distress enquired what was the matter, and was told that the little boy has either strayed or been stolen. “Alas,” said he, “I observed a great hawk hovering over the head of your boy. The bird must have flown away with him.” “You mock me in my sorrow,” said the bereaved merchant. “How could a hawk carry off my boy?” “As easily as rats could devour iron,” said the other merchant.

The result was the exchange of the lost boy for the lost iron.

This proverb and story is evidently translated from a Persian work, “Chihil qissa,” (i.e., Forty stories,) but it is very well known among the common folk of Kashmir.

Shuri chhur kuthis.—Shur máronah kih nah kuth tsaton?
The infant wetted the lap. What shall be done? Shall the infant be killed? or shall the knee be cut off?

Parents in doubt as to whether they shall, or shall not, help a profligate son out of his difficulties.

Shúshas tih pushí.
Not enough even for a lung.
A small income.

Sikha ni nu tah bándah begári.
Like a Sikh obliging one to buy what they have to sell, and compelling the musician to play without hire.

Oppression.
A Muhammedan saying. The Muhammedans toll dreadful tales of the oppression which they suffered during the rule of the Sikhs in Kashmir.

Síkha tih bájá tah khabá tih bájá.
If the spit is right then the meat is right.

Sikandar-Náma.—Miyán-ji chíná nu kun bráe sawáb.
Ki ham síkha bar já buwad ham khabá.

Sínas támat shínas gá; suád kyáh zániou toe kariou.
We got breast deep in the snow; whatever inducement was there to get married on such a day as this (lit., what taste did you feel that you made a feast).

A very clever Hindú Persian scholar was once invited to a wedding feast in a certain village during winter-time. It happened that much snow fell just about the time of the wedding, and those guests who lived at a distance experienced much difficulty in attending. On arrival this Hindú was heard thus to remonstrate with the parents of the wedding-party.

Notice the play upon the names of the four Persian letters sín, shún, sád, and toe.

Sína, (Persian) breast.
Shún, (Kashmirí) snow.
Swád, (Kashmirí) taste, flavour, &c.
Toe, (Persian) feast, festival, &c.

Sir gav sirðan; ad sîr gav guzrán; páv chhēh páwán.
One ser is enough; half a ser a man can live upon; but a quarter of a ser prostrates a man.

Sirah sán pirah maharázah áv.
The wedding-company of saints came along secretly.
A great man travelling in a humble way. The very respectable people have their marriage processions at night. Only the poor and uneducated classes have large demonstration-processions by day.

Sini mukimah sutsal tah rani mukimah khandahwáv.
If there is not a plate of meat and rice there is a mallow, and if a husband is wanting, one can get a shawl-weaver.
Anything is better than nothing.
Shawl-weavers (Muhammedans) are to be found in abundance all over the valley. They are a sickly, immoral, ill-paid race.

Siryas hyuh nah prakásh kune;
Gangih hyuh nah tirt kañh;
Báyis hyuh nah bándav kune;
Ranik hyuh nah sukh kañh;

Achhin hyuh nah prakásh kune;
Kuññen hyuh nah tirt kañh;
Chandas hyuh nah bándav kun
Khanih hyuh nah sukh kañh;

Mayas hyuh nah prakásh kune;
Layik hyuh nah tirt kañh;
Dayas hyuh nah bándav kune;
Bayas hyuh nah sukh kañh;
Sōd Bāyú was one day sitting down with his famous female disciple, Lal Dēd, when the following questions cropped-up:

"Which was the greatest of all lights?" "Which was the most famous of all pilgrimages?" "Which was the best of all relations?" "Which was the best of all manner of ease?" Lal was the first to reply:

"There is no light like that of the sun;
"There is no pilgrimage like Gangā;
"There is no relation like a brother;
"There is no ease like that of a wife."

But Sōd did not quite agree. "No," said he—

"There is no light like that of the eyes;
"There is no pilgrimage like that of the knees;
"There is no relation like one’s pocket;
"There is no ease like that of the mendicant’s cloak."

Then Lal Dēd, determining not to be outwitted by her master, again replied:

"There is no light like that of the knowledge of God;
"There is no pilgrimage like that of an ardent love;
"There is no relation to be compared with the Deity;
"There is no ease like that got from the fear of God."

I have seen something like a part of the above lines in Rev. C. Swynnerton’s “Adventures of Bājā Rasālū,” but not having the book at hand I cannot say in what connection they occur there.

Gangā or Gangabal is one of the great Hindū places of pilgrimage. Hither go all those Pandits, who have had relations die during the year, carrying some small bones, which they had picked from the ashes at the time of the burning of the dead bodies. These bones are thrown into the sacred waters of Gangabal with money and sweetmeats. The pilgrimage takes place about the 8th day of the Hindū month Bādarpēt (August 20th cir.) Cf. “Vigné’s Travels in Kashmēr,” &c., Vol. II., pp. 151, 152.

So zan bozih ishārah sučti.
Ko zan bozih damālih sučti.

A hint and a good man hears.

Threatening and fuss before a bad man hears.

Gulīstān.—Anchi dānā kunad kunad nādān.
Lek ba’d az kabul i ruswāč.

Sonawārī sāban.
The soap of Sonawār (i.e., the washing of the people of Sonawār).
Something wrong in the arrangement.
Sonawār is a little village close to the Takht-i-Sulaimán, Srā Nagar. The inhabitants have got a name for wearing either a clean pagrī and dirty garment, or else a clean garment and dirty pagrī.

Soint chhuh tshali tah harud chhuh bali.
Spring is a matter of inclination, but the Autumn is whether he will or not.

H. H. the Mahārājāh gives a certain amount of seed to each zamīndār about seed-time, the sowing of this seed depends very much upon the will of the zamīndār. But when the seed has been sown, the harvest ripens and the crops are ready to be gathered, then, volens volens, the zamīndār must cut it and give the usual State allowance.

Sopūr-i-māzarat.
An invitation from a Sopūr man.

Nearly all the Sopūr people are most inhospitable. Ananta-nāg (i.e., Islāmābād) and Pāmpūr folk have got a name in the valley for hospitality.

Sorah rag melih tah worah rag melih nah.
There may be a vein of affection in a pig, but not in a step-child.

About fourteen years ago Hindūs were permitted to keep swine. Since then the city has been entirely cleared of them by the order of the present Mahārājāh. His Highness’ late father, the Mahārājāh Gulāb Singh, is said to have introduced swine into the valley.

Sorah sanzih wudih morah sund tāj.
A peacock’s crest upon a pig’s crown.

A place for every man and every man in his place.

Sorui chhuh dūr tah marun chhuh nazdīk.
All things are far-off, but death is nigh.

In the midst of life we are in death.

Sorui chhuh muli, kath chhēh muti.
All things are at a price, but conversation is gratis.

Srandaḥ srandaḥ tsuwān har; yutān nah ak chhuh marūn, tutān chhēh nah path rosān.
A buffalo quarrels with another buffalo; until one of them dies the fight is not over.
When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war.
Srugu, sit, tah panáhdır.
Cheap, nice, and broad.
    Hot, sweet, and strong.

Sruguay chhul drug tah drugui chhul sruin.
Cheap is dear and dear is cheap.
    It is better to pay a little more and have a really good article than to buy an extraordinarily cheap (?) article, and presently discover that it is not worth having.

Subhuch chilam chhai til charágas;
Subhuch chilam chhai bugas khi;
Subhuch chilam chhai n także phüh Mágas;
Subhuch chilam chhai drágas zi.
The morning pipe is like oil to the lamp;
The morning pipe is as jessamine in the garden;
The morning pipe is as the heat of a fire in January;
The morning pipe is as employment in the time of famine.
    Chilam is that part of the hukka which holds the tobacco and the charcoal-ball.

Subhuk batah ai nákúrah pyos doh neris pandi;
Pherun ai nákúrah gos wahi neris pandi;
Zaninah ai nákúrah pyes urr neris pandi.
If the breakfast is bad then all the day will go wrong;
If the dress is bad then all the year will go wrong;
If the wife is bad then all the life-time will go wrong.

Suchhuk garwol tah múh-i-ramazánik nemízi.
A householder (only) in time of abundance, and prayers only during the month of Ramazán.
    An unreliable character.

Ramazán is the name of the ninth Muhammedan month, during which every orthodox follower of that religion abstains from eating, drinking, &c., between the morning dawn and the appearance of the stars at night. On the 27th day of this month the Qurán began to descend from heaven, and every prayer offered up on that night (called lailatu'-l-qadr) will be answered. Also prayers offered up on the 19th, 21st and 23rd days of Ramazán are thought to avail much.

Sudámun kum bus.
Sudam's handful of chaff.
    A rúpi to a poor man is as much as one thousand rúpis to a rich man.
Sūdām was a great friend of Krishna. He at one time was in such great distress, that only a handful of chaff was left to him, which he purposed to eat and then die. However he thought the better of this and went to the Rājā instead with the handful of chaff. Rājā Krishna was so touched with the man's poverty and simplicity, that he himself ate the chaff and gave the Brāhman Sudām whatsoever his heart wished for.

Suḥ tīh dōḥā Nasaro.
That day also passed, O Nasar.

Come good, come evil, there is an end.
A quotation from a list of conversation between Shekh Nūr-ud-dīn and his favourite disciple Nasar. Conversation between these two saints often took the form of poetry according as they were inspired. Here is the piece of poetry:—

Maidān wācas ṭakuj nani; suh tīh dōhā Nasaro.
Tum wuqarāh tāh sānī pani; suh tīh dōhā Nasaro,
Nisāl rani tāh wūranī khani; suh tīh dōhā Nasaro.
Wurah batah tāh gājāh gani; suh tīh dōhā Nasaro.

When the pack was bare upon the bleak plains; that day also passed, O Nasar.
When we had wet rice and dry vegetables only to eat; that day too, has gone, O Nasar.
When the wife was near one and warm clothing covered the bed; that day, too, went by, O Nasar.
When boiled rice and sliced fish were provided for us; that day also passed, O Nasar.

There is something similar to this in Persian, but who is the author of it, or where it is to be found, is not known:—

Munam ki kābāb mekhorad:
Megzrād.
War bāda i nāb mekhorad;
Megzrād.
Daryosah ba kashkol i gaddāl wān rā,
Tar kardah ba āb mekhorad;
Megzrād.
The wealthy man eats roasted flesh:
Passing away.
Should he drink pure wine;
Passing away.
The beggar eats the alms-bread,
After having soaked it in water;
Passing away.

These lines were probably known in the days of Akbar, for when that monarch asked his favourite minister Bir-Bal to do something for him, which would be a source of happiness to him in time of adversity as well in the time of prosperity, Bir-Bal replied by sending to the emperor a few days afterwards a beautiful ringstone upon which he had caused to be engraved in Persian character the word “Meguzrad”; he also sent a nice letter with it advising the king to look upon the ring whenever he was tempted to be over-elated by prosperity, or over-dressed by misfortune.

Another Persian saying from another unknown source is frequently quoted by the Persian-speaking Kashmírí:—

Shab e samur guzashto;
Shab e tanur guzasht.
That night, when we had fur to cover us, has gone;
That night, when we had the fire to warm us, has gone.

Sukhas des.
A stick to peace (or striking his peace).

A man, who really has nothing to complain of—he has health and wealth and friends, but he says that he is never well, not rich, and that every body is against him.

Sumis sum númat tah be-sum kiyámát.
Like with like is blessing, but unlike is confusion.

Birds of a feather flock together;
Birds of a different feather tear one another.

Shírfín-o-Khusrau.—Kunad ham-jins bí ham-jins parwáz
Kabútar bá kabútar bás bá bás.

Sun chhuh páñái kahwachíh pēth múlum sapunán khút chhúá yá khur.
Gold is known upon the stone, whether it is alloyed or pure.

A man is known by his work and walk and conversation.
Kahvar is a touchstone. (Persian.—Míhakk-i-zarrín.)
Gulístán.—Míhakk dánad zar chíst.
Gadá dánad mumsik kíst.

Sunah sunz shrák, nah wár thawanas tah nah wár tráwanas.
A golden knife is neither fit to keep, nor to throw away.

Sunas gayam sartal kanas chhas nah batak ladin.
To me gold has become as brass. I do not load my ear with food (i.e., and I am not such a fool as not to know it). Cf.
“Kanas chhas,” &c.

My position is altered and I know it.

Sunas múl kanas tal.
The worth of the gold is in the ear.
Possession is everything.
Sundari tsah pari mai trav hukai; tsâh kalî sorî chikah châv.
O pretty woman, don’t step so haughtily, you will lose your youthful pride in time.
A silly, conceited, young woman.
This is evidently a line from one of the Kashmiri songs, but it cannot be traced as yet.

Sunur nai sunah tsîr barîh tah kâts gatshâs.
If the goldsmith did not steal the gold he would get kâts (i.e., a subtle disease, hectic fever).
The suspicion with which the goldsmith is looked upon is not peculiar to the people of Kashmir.
Cf. Kalfia o Damna; the story of the Brâhman Thephasavâmi in Herr Adolf Bastian’s German collection of Siamese tales; “The Orientalist,” Ceylon, Vol. I., p. 180; the Rev. C. Swynnerton’s appendix of folk-tales of the Panjáb to his book on Râjâ Rasâlî; and the Tamil story told in p. 184, Vol. I. of “The Orientalist.” But in “The Book of Were-wolves,” by S. Baring-Gould, it is stated on the authority of a gentleman who resided in Abyssinia for ten years, and published an account of his experiences afterwards, “that in Abyssinia the gold and silversmiths are highly regarded, but the iron-workers are looked upon with contempt as an inferior grade of beings. Their kinsmen even ascribe to them the power of transforming themselves into hyænas, or other savage beasts. All convulsions and hysterical disorders are attributed to the effect of their evil eye.”

Sûr malit tsûrah jamâat.
Rubbing ashes over his body (like a saint) and yet belonging to a company of thieves.

Sûrah banîk wuth nah kîv.
The crow did not rise from the dust-heap (although stones were thrown at it).
A man taken into court, but bribes were paid and so the matter was kept secret.

Sûrah phalîk baldî dûr.
From a speck of dust misfortune flies.
A word, and the thing is done.

Suranai gatshîh wâyîni, gali gatshanas nah khasuni.
The lute should be played, but the checks need not be blown out.
When a man does a good work there is no necessity to send someone with a trumpet to advertise it.
Sutí dugah bah trak.
Slowly, slowly, twelve traks (i.e., 114 pounds) will be pounded.
...Rome was not built in a day.

"Sutsal kami rani?"    "Ami chānīh prānīh."
"Mihrū ckhēh gānutā."   "Myānīh khalanī suētī."
"Who cooked the mallow?"    "That old woman of yours."
"Ah! it is very nice."    "Yes—I stirred it."
Anxious to avoid the blame, but to get the praise.

Sutsalih manzah gushtābah nerun.
Soup comes forth from the mallow.
"Despise not the day of small things."
Gushtābah is a rich soup composed of mince-meat, &c.

Sutsan dapān panahdūwih "Sārī ckhīh gānutī aki nāvīh."
The needle says to the piece of thread "We are all in the same boat" (i.e., where you go I go, for we are fastened together).
All the people appear to know this saying, but no one could tell me its origin. It is very strange to meet with such a peculiar expression in this country, and to find that it has the same meaning which it has in England, viz., Both treated alike; both placed in the same conditions. The reference in England is, as is well-known, to the boat launched when a ship is a-wreck.

Suwun tah gōwun tagih prat kānsīh, magar suwun ckhūh sowunūh tah gōwun, ckhūh gōwanūh.
Everybody can sew and sing, but let him sing who can sing (properly), and him sew who can sew (nicely).

Suyīh suēt mandul chhalun.
To wash the back with a nettle.
The harm of keeping bad company.

Syud sūdah ckhūh shāhzādah.
A plain, simple man is a prince.
Tábah Tásal nah mandachhán nah chhuh mandachhanah diwán.

Tábah Tásal is not ashamed nor does he put any one to shame.

A shameless person.

Tábah Tásal was a Pandit, who, contrary to all rule and custom, hired himself out for weddings and other entertainments. He was a good singer and jester, and used to accompany his songs with a-clapping of hands. He struck them together in such a peculiar way that it is said the sound could be heard one mile off (?) He would visit all sects and sexes, and would sit by the hour in all society, never feeling any qualms of conscience, or noticing any wickedness in others.

Tábah was surnamed Tásal from the word tás, which means clapping of hands.

Tal talí talív khanán púdsháh garas lút karón.

Apparently digging a very deep well; but, really, robbing the king's house.

A traitor.

A Gosáín once visited a king and said that he had a matter for him. "Would his Majesty listen to it, and give his servant one hundred rúpis for it?" The king consented; and this proverb was told him, which he was to repeat aloud every night three times in succession before going to sleep. Now it happened that this king, like most other kings, had his enemies—and enemies, too, in his own household. One of his ministers hated him intensely, and was ready to do and bear anything, so that he might bring about the king's death. Amongst other plans he had a subterranean passage made from his house to the king's, and one night, when the work was almost completed and but a foot more remained to be dug, he himself went along this passage, which communicated directly with the king's bed-chamber, with the intention, if possible, of removing the little earth that remained, and getting close enough to murder the king in his bed. On such a dreadful errand, and in such a dark dangerous place, we cannot imagine this wicked minister's feelings when he heard the king with a loud and distinct voice say, three times in succession, the words which the Gosáín had taught him. "I am discovered," said he, and hastened back.

This saying has also been turned into a riddle, of which the answer is a rat.

27
Talah, dadi talah pati pētah daz tāl ; Yū Bār Sāhibo rūdā wāl.
Below the sole of the foot is burnt, above the crown of the head is burnt; O Great God, let it rain.
A favourite prayer for rain.
Yū Bār Sāhibo.—Great God. (Bār, participle of bārīdān.)

Talah, talah palah bah shet.
Down, down, twelve hundred rocks down.
A Stoic—hard, deep, and mysterious.

Tālāwas dah lurīh tah jangah wizeh nah ak tih.
(Usually) ten sticks in the roof, but not even one there in time of fighting.
Abundance of servants, rūpis, &c., but not one at hand when especially wanted.

Tāmīr chhuh kār-i-amīr.
Building is the work of nobles.
The wealthy build houses and poor men buy them.

Tanīras nakhah kundal.
A little earthen pot beside the oven.
A little man in the company of the great.
Kundal is the inner earthenware part of the kāngīf.

Tas chhuh nah gāīul wazīr.
He has not got a wise minister (i.e., a good wife to advise and help him).

A certain king was one day sitting with his wife in the verandah of the palace, when a poor miserable-looking and almost nude peasant passed by, carrying a big load of wood for sale in the city.
"My dear," said the king to his wife, "how sad it is to see a man in that wretched condition, and in this cold weather too. What a sorrowful existence he must eke out from the pittance which he receives from his wood every day!" "He has not got a wise minister," replied the queen. The king did not understand this remark; he thought that, perhaps, it was meant as a sort of side-hint for himself; hence it would have been a reflection upon his own chosen ministers, and so upon the arrangement of his country. He brooded over these words, until he became in a furious rage, and going to his wife ordered her to prepare to leave the palace at once and be that poor wood-seller's servant. The queen obeyed, though with a sorrowful heart. However, she did not despair, but determined that through her wise counsel and management this poor man should prosper and become great, and then she had a conviction that by some means or other she would again be united to the king her husband, and that both would derive profit from, and be happier for, this temporary separation.
On arriving at the wood-seller's hut she made her salams and explained the reason of her visit. "I have come to serve you," she said, "but let me sometimes advise you, and you will be the better for my counsel." The wood-cutter was so surprised at the humble demeanour of the queen, that he fell upon his knees and stammered out something to this effect: "That although the king had given her to him to be his servant, yet he felt himself to be her slave, and that whatever she commanded, that he would try to perform."

The days passed pleasantly enough; now and again, not suddenly but as if quite naturally, little changes were made in the house; this room was regularly cleaned and things began to be arranged in their right places; and one day when the wood-seller's wife was sitting idle, she advised her in a kindly manner to spin; another time she prevailed upon the man to eat his dinner in the city instead of coming home to eat it, because oftentimes, when by evening he had not sold all his load of wood, he had been tempted to take little or nothing for it, in order that he might be rid of his load and get home to his longed-for dinner; and again on another occasion she was able to say something about saving a quarter of his earnings. In these and other different ways the presence of the queen-servant worked quite a revolution in the house. The man became rich and was much respected, and the woman his wife was his true help-meet.

Many years had elapsed since the queen had been separated from the king, yet she had not forgotten him or decreased in affection for him. She was always planning, in order to bring about her return to her husband. One day she heard that he, attended by several of the courtiers, would go to shoot in a certain jungle; so she went and told the wood-cutter her master (now a man of property), to take a small vessel of water and some bread with him, and follow the king's company into the jungle, and when the chase was over, at which time the king would very likely be hot and thirsty, he was to go forward humbly and present his bread and little vessel of water for the king's acceptance. No doubt the king would receive of the offering, and would make some present in return. Should he ask what he would have, he was to say—"I have wealth in abundance. I do not wish for any more money. I only desire that the king will grant me an interview in the palace." The man agreed to carry out the queen's wishes. He went to the jungle and finding opportunity he respectfully presented the little water and bread, which he then happened to have, to the hungry and thirsty king. The king gladly received the gift, and asked what he could do for the man. "Ask what you will," he said, "and I will grant it you." The man answered, "I want not anything from your Majesty, but that you will grant me a few private interviews within the palace." The king was surprised at this strange request, but nevertheless promised that it should be so.

Great was the rejoicing when the queen heard of this, the beginning of her triumph, as she thought.
Frequently did this man visit the king privately, and the king appeared to welcome his visits. When the nobles and courtiers saw this they were very jealous, and afraid lest this “risen” wood-cutter should impeach them; and so they got to know this man more intimately and began to give him handsome gifts by way of a bribe to check his tongue concerning themselves.

The wood-cutter had now become the king’s great companion, and having amassed still more wealth, the queen thought that it would not be inconsistent, if he made a great feast and invited the king and many of the nobles to grace it by their presence. The king readily accepted the invitation. The dinner was served on a most magnificent scale, and everybody seemed pleased. Before the company retired the queen went up unperceived to the king, and told him that his host was the poor wood-cutter of former years, and that she was his “wise minister.”

A reconciliation was then and there effected between the king and his wife. They retired to the palace together, and ever afterwards lived together most happily.

Tasbíh chání chham gunasá hisho, nuríd dishit karán kham.
Shékh chinih khéyitham hisham hisho, tsuh ai pír lah ruhzan kam.

Your rosary is like a poisonous snake to me; when you see a disciple you twirl it.

You ate six full dishes of rice, O if you are a saint, who is a robber?

Shekh Nūr-ud-dín, a very famous saint in Kasmír, during the end of the eighth century was accustomed to wander about teaching and preaching as he went. At night he would frequently sleep in a mosque. One evening he arrived at the mosque of another very holy man, concerning whom it was said that the angels often came to converse with him during the hours of darkness. This report obtained credence everywhere, and to such an extent in the village itself that the people subscribed together and brought him every day six full dishes of food to feed the angels with. The truth, however, was that he himself ate the food.

Now when this saint saw that Nūr-ud-dín intended to lodge there that night, he was afraid that something of his wicked ways would be discovered; and so Nūr-ud-dín was advised to depart because of a great monster which sometimes came and troubled the place. Nūr-ud-dín, however, declined to go, saying “that he was not afraid if God watched over him.” The evening wore away until at last Nūr-ud-dín laid down to sleep. The other pír was by, and when he thought that his unwelcome visitor was fast asleep he began to take out the six dishes of food, which had been brought to him that day, and to eat them. He ate them all, and then lay down as if one dead.
At early morning he arose, took out his rosary, and began to mumble. But Nūr-ud-dīn had seen all that had transpired during the night, and telling the man so, said also to him the words of this saying and left.

Talīsū ākās wāsiḥ muslah.
The skin will come off from the warm sheep.

Now is the time.

Butchers flay the sheep quickly after killing it; because if the flesh were left to get cold, the skin would not then come off without great difficulty.

Taṟt weyμmut.
Like roasted-corn sown.

Good words and deeds are wasted upon some people.

Tāz-Bat-i-kūn.
Tāz-Bat's arrow.

A wind-fall.

Once upon a time a king placed a ring upon a wall and sent forth a proclamation that whosoever could shoot an arrow from a certain distance, straight through the ring, should receive two thousand rūpās as a reward. The best and bravest archers in the kingdom tried, but none succeeded. At length a man called Tāz-Bat, a poor ignorant fellow, was one afternoon passing by that way and firing his arrows in all directions in a most reckless fashion, he came to the place where the ring was hanging, and more from a playful feeling than from any thought of accomplishing the difficult feat, he let go an arrow, which to his great astonishment passed clean through the ring.

Tāz-Bat was at once taken to the king, who praised him and gave him the promised reward. Cf. "Gariḥ yēliḥ," &c.

Bat is commonly met with both in Hindū and Muhammedan names. (Tāz-Bat in the saying was a Muhammedan.) Very probably it is derived from Batāh, which means a Hindū. Whenever a Muhammedan has this name it would seem to prove that his ancestors where Hindūs, who were converted per vim to the faith of Muhammed during the supremacy of the Mughals in "the Happy Valley."

Telāh andrai chhuk tīl nerīn.
From the sesame-plant oil is expressed.

Fruit according to the tree, and wages from labour, &c.
Tēlih hā-mālih āsan biyāmalik keran yēlih tswiṭi papan tseran sućt.

When apples ripen the same time as apricots ripen, then, O father, will come the day of resurrection (i.e., the resurrection will happen at a most unlikely time, when men look not for it).

Tēlih tosh, yēlih nosh garah wātli.

When your daughter-in-law reaches home then be glad (and not before, as you may rejoice to no purpose).

Don’t count your chickens before they’re hatched.

Tēlikih, Zai Đārah bēyīh yihtah doh tárah.

O Zai Đārah of former times, come again and stay a few days.

Mourning over the weaknesses of old age.

Zai Đārah was a very strong man, who lived to a very great age. He used to say in his declining years, “O Zai Đārah of former times,” &c.

Tūre nah situr tah merā nah katab-wani.

You have not got your cotton and I have not the price of my spinning; (we are quits).

Quoted to those who are lax in paying for the making up of any article, e.g., a man gives some cloth to a tailor to make up into a coat, and promises that he will pay him eight ānas for making. In a day or two the man goes and asks the tailor for his coat, but declines to pay the promised money just then. As a general rule the tailor, who has been forced to do so from a past bitter experience, replies, “No, no, you don’t get your cloth, and I don’t get the price of my labour; we are quits.”

Teshal gaikhai peshemān, myāniv achhiv deshemān.

O proud woman, you will regret it, my eyes see it.

Cited when from pride any gift or work is refused.

Peshemān (for Pashemān) is always thus pronounced by the female, and very uneducated male, population of Kashmir.

Tēṭiś lāras zan tsutanās kalah.

He was beheaded like the bitter end of a cucumber.

A speedy punishment.

The Pāthān rulers were famed for their quick justice (very often injustice). No sooner was the order given “Behead the man,” or “Take out his eyes,” or “Cut off his nose,” than the executioner left and did the cruel deed.

Tham hale tah ham nah hale.

The pillar may move but I shall not move.

A fixed, determinate character.
Tharih posh chikh nah warih gaâshan.
All the buds upon a bush do not blossom.
    Every child in a family does not thrive.
Thukah rëchhov mukaddam.
A stammering sputtering son as the headman of an office or of a village.
    A man not fitted for his position.
Timah gorih gâyih dud kumit.
The milkmaids have sold their milk and gone.
    After noon it is almost impossible to get milk in Kashmir, as it is generally all sold by that time.
Persian.—In kada bêshkast o án sakî na mând.
Titshûi tsuwai har yut matinai khar; tah luk wuchhânai lamâshih.
I will have such a row with you, that it will be as if the asses had gone mad; and the people will come out to see the sight.
    If I do quarrel with you, I will quarrel.
Tôt marit tah khot tainár.
The dear one dies and the gallows are ready.
    Better to die, for the world is as a gallows set up, constantly troubling and destroying.
    Vigne and others of his day speak of having seen bodies "swinging" from the bridges, &c., as they passed up the river through Srinagar. Now-a-days, however, capital punishment is not permitted in the valley as it would be contrary to the Hindû law.
    (It is very seldom that one hears of a murder in Kashmir.)
Trah zih sah; tsataji zih pataji; sheh zih breth.
A man of thirty years of age is like a lion; a man forty years old is like a torn, worn, mat; and a man sixty years of age is a fool.
Shirin o Khusrav:—
    Nashîte 'unwî bîshad tâ ba êî sêl
    Chîhîl âmâd fardo rezud par o bîl
    Pas az panjîh na bîshad tandurustî
    Basar kundi pazîrad pîl susî
    Chu shast âmâd nishast âmâd ba dewûr
    Chu haftîd âmâd aftîd âlat az kîr
    Ba hashtîd o navud chun dar rastîd
    Basî sakhtî ki az gîtî kashûlî
    War: amîj par ba sad marvîl rasîntî
    Buwad marge ba sêrat zhindagînî.
Balthasar Gracian, in his "Oraculo Manual," has a similar saying: "Reason makes its appearance after seven years, and every seven years the disposition alters. At twenty years of age one is a peacock; at thirty years of age, a lion; at forty years of age, a camel; at fifty years of age, a snake; at sixty years of age, a dog; at seventy years of age, an ape; and at eighty years of age, nothing."

"Three things make a prodigy, and are the highest gift of Heaven's liberality—a fruitful intellect, a profound judgment, and a pleasant and elevated taste. At twenty years of age the will rules; at thirty years of age the intellect rules; and at forty years of age the judgment rules."

Trakas wukhul parsang.
A mortar as an equipoise for one trak (4½ers).
An incorrect weight.

Trámaควwn bánan ckhuk tsuk ámut.
The copper vessels have got their bottoms burnt.
Only the wealthier classes use copper vessels; hence the meaning is, that trouble visits the great also sometimes.

Trán chizan chkēh nakh yets kál tén káimí rozán, 'ilm be-bahs, mül be-tjijat, tak mulk be-siyāsat.
Three things have no long continuance; knowledge without argument (exercise); wealth without commerce; and a country without law and management.
Cf. Gulistán Ch. viii.—Se chiz ast ki bilá se chiz nāmē mānād, 'ilm be bahs, mül be tijārat mulk be siyāsat.

Tráwamuts thuk ningalani.
To swallow one's spittle.
Taking back a divorced wife, or dismissed servant.

Trēk hat nakh bahai puitchi.
Three paisás not twelve mites.
Six, not half-a-dozen.
Three paisás are equal to twelve mites, but there was once a very stupid fellow who would not see this. Hence the above saying is sometimes quoted on receiving any stupid answer.

Trūkis kathā mudas lorîh halā.
To the sharp a single word; to the dull a hundred stripes.

Trūkis gārá fushis.
A spirited person angry for an hour.
You say “sister,” I will say “brother.” Each one’s matter is in its own place.

We are both guilty. The only thing for us both to do, is not to go and peach one on the other, but to smother our feelings and keep quiet about it.

Tsah tah buh tah Lútah kák.
You and I and Mr. Plunder.

A secret between two people; let both of them take care not to inform against each other!

Kák is a term implying intense respect for the person thus addressed, and is common both to the Muhammedans and Hindús. A son will thus address his father “Hutah, sah, Kák.” The younger members of the family will thus address their eldest brother, “Walah, sah, Ánuud Kák.” And any very respected person outside the family may thus sometimes be addressed, “Bozín, sah, Naváyan Kák.” Notice that only the father is called simply Kák.

Kák is also the name of a Hindú sect in Kashmir.

Tsulanas tak.
Running instead of fleeing.

Trying to overcome a difficulty in a “half-and-half” sort of way.

Tsulawunën boîth tah láravunën path.
In front of the runners-away, but the last of the pursuers.

A coward.

Tsam tah nam wuthit rukhsat.
After wearing one’s skin and nails away in hard work to be dismissed (without pay)!

A tyrannical master.

Tsar chhêh aki phalih bâpat hairân.
A sparrow is in distress about one grain.

A poor man’s need, just a mite will relieve.

Tsarën zuwan tukhi kyah?
Tsaris gamas gamâ kyah?
What is a little more irritation to a woman whose head is full of lice?

What is grief to a person already overwhelmed with it?

This proverb is sometimes also thus interpreted:—

When there are many lice where is the sting? When there is much grief where is the grief? (e. g., A famine, a war, or any other general calamity.)

Sikandar-Náma.—Ki marge ba ambhâh râ jashan khurâb.
Tsarih chhuh kandi-tharih pêshûi râhat.
Their is rest for the sparrow upon the thorn-bush.
Each man finds rest in his own proper state and station.

Tsarih hund wânthuí kyah chhuh?
What is inside the paunch of a sparrow?
No help from a helpless man, and no mercy from a merciless fellow.

Tsarih khashanah chhuh rat yiwin.
Blood comes from much scratching.
From much teasing, a quarrel; from much work, exhaustion; from much reading, madness, &c.

Tsaris gûtas chhuh tsur khur.
The wiser the man, the greater the blame (if he errs).

Tsâtit hêndawand tsâtit sodû.
Cutting a water-melon, and tasting the things (before purchase).
Advice on going to the bâzâr.

Tsaichamatsîh wngajih nunah phêl.
A pinch of salt to a cut finger.
A sharp word, a mean trick.

Tsei hisihi gabihi chhiû nyûr khasûn!
What a ewe like you climbing up to the meadow!
An expression of contempt for another person’s powers.

Tsentah Dwahniw watiwih.
Tsentah Dev’s congratulations.
Tsentah Dev was a very poor man with a very large family.
Children were born so quickly that it seemed as if the people were always coming to congratulate him on the introduction of another member into his already numerous family. He got very angry and unhappy about affairs; but still his family so increased that now his numerous household and constant congratulations have passed into a proverb.

Tshalas tal chhui hust tih band.
The elephant also is caught in the trap.
A great many things that are left undone as being impossible might easily be accomplished if people would only think a little.
Tshënimuts yëni hish.
Like broken warp.
A weak, useless fellow.

Tshotné chhuh muh.
A little is good (i.e., a little dinner, pride, money &c.)

*Tshuchê tshuchê känine, zynuñhù wapharum hùk ;
YNúhkù ausum karanah lon tithù puyù grùk.*
I spread out my fine vegetables under the roof;
And as was my lot so the buyer fell to me.
A bad day's business.

Tshun paijìmah khas lairh pësh, tshun kûìsh tak bar thas, thas.
Put on trowsers, climb the house, put on the kûìsh and tap on the ground as you go.
A boasting top.
Kûìsh is a kind of shoe worn by women in Kashmir, having high iron heels, and the uppers lessening towards the heels.

Tshupih chhüTyut phëidah yut sinis pûkah suùt.
As much profit from silence as there is profit to the dinner from cooking.

Tshupah chhái wupah-kär.
Silence is profitable.

Tshupah chëch rupah sunz.
Silence is silvern.

*Tshupùi gupan gudamí khùv ;
Dándai zënhì, yas pìhuñ isùv.*
The silent heifer eats the tether;
That ox will know who has to bear the yoke.
Experience teaches.

Tshur athah chhuh nah atsèn àsas tih.
An empty hand does not even enter the mouth.
Be liberal and generous wherever you go, and into whosoever's house you enter; if there is nothing in your hand you do not think of putting it to your mouth as though to eat, &c.

Tshurui phar tak gontshun war.
Empty boasting and twirling of moustaches.
You may take his price from the worth of his clothes.
Three Kashmiris on account of their poverty went to Dëhli, to see what they could do for themselves there. They do not, however, seem to have bettered themselves very much, for after some years when they had paid all their bills, and the expenses of a return journey to their own country, they found that they all three together were only worth one gold ring, a gold tooth, and a gold-worked turban tail.

One day in the course of their perambulations they stopped outside a butcher's shop in the village of Drugjau with the intention of buying something. The man with the ring pointed with his jewelled finger to a piece of goat's flesh, and asked the price, "Yë/a bekah kë/hë këwë?" "What is the price of this goat's flesh?" The man with the gold tooth, lifting his upper lip in speaking, said, "Das takke, das talke." Two anës, two anës. The man with the grand turban, shaking his head, said, "Pëwe, pëwe" i. e., "You’ll get it, you’ll get it." All this time the butcher was silent; but now seeing that they had finished, he quoted the above proverb, "Empty boasting and twirling the moustaches."

The language of these three men is supposed to be Bad Panjâbi.

Tshu't ai këmëh kami lubah?
If I eat the remnants of the dinner, with what desire shall I eat it?

Supposing I do this thing, what profit will it be to me?

Tsìthùr ai dushîh waharas poshîh, waqrût ai dushîh tah waharas poshîh nah.
Should it rain in March-April, then there will be quite enough for a year, but if during August it rains, then it will not be enough for a watch (i.e., a space of three hours).

Tsrârah Brëswär.
Tsrâr Thursday.

Any great gathering is so called. Tsrâr is a village about one march from Srinagar. It is the burial-place of Shekh Nûr-ud-dîn, and hundreds flock there on Thursday afternoons, so as to be present at the Friday's prayers and sermon.

Tsuchîh warîh andurah neryâ anz?
Will a goose come out from the bread?

Not enough for you and me and everybody else.

Tsunîh machîh kuluft tah kunih machîh bînah kuft.
A lock for the charcoal-pot and a store-room for the pot.

Unnecessary carefulness.

Tsûnt chhuq tsûntis wuchhit rang ratîn.
An apple gets colour from seeing an apple.

Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend.—Prov. xxvii. 17.
Tsûr chhuh be-nûr.
The thieves are without light (i.e., they love darkness because their deeds are evil, they are without understanding in their heart, or light of expression in their eyes).

Tsûr chhêh phak.
Theft is like a bad smell (certain to be detected).

Tsûr gayik ngangah hangah-tah-mangah.
The theft became known by chance (i.e., somehow or other it was made manifest).

Tsûr gav zih.khur gav.
Too much is despised.

Tsûr mah kar tah tsrûlis mah khots.
Don’t steal and don’t fear the mahalladár.

“Balers are not a terror to good works.”

Tsroki is the ancient name of mahalladár, the watchman or spy appointed over every village in the valley.

Tsûr tswanzûh khûrd u raft o man shudam ambûrdîr.
Fifty-four thieves ate and went, and I became the man in charge.

A man is appointed over a work rather “against the grain,” and loses by it.

A saying of Shiva Kák’s concerning whom a story is given. Cf. “Kisâ lâríâyt,” &c.

Tsûrah kâpras dûnguv gaz.
A walking-stick is the yard-measure for stolen cloth (i.e., a thief cannot expect to get the full price for his stolen goods; sometimes he loses a part of it; sometimes he has to bribe to keep the matter quiet; and generally he has to dispose of the things quickly from danger of discovery, taking whatever receivers may offer him).

Tsûrah kûkur.
A stolen cock.
A forbidden work.

Tsûran niyih zanânah, thagan khyav mukhtahár.
The thieves took away the wife, and sharpers ate the necklace.

Thag, a class of thieves and sharpers who prowl about the city by day and by night, and are especially on the qui vive on Fridays, the day when crowds of country people come into Srâñagar for trading, and worship in the different mosques.
Tsúras nai múr úsíh, san kethah púth shrapós.
If the thief is not sharp, how will he digest his theft.

Tsúras phút khor tah piras múrok murid.
The thief broke his foot and the pir’s disciple was killed (for it).

The innocent punished and the guilty acquitted.

Once upon a time when unjust rule, tyranny, and all manner of wickedness reigned in the valley, a thief clambered up the high wall of a house with the intention of stealing whatever he could lay his hands upon. Now it chanced that the wall, being old, and perhaps loosened a little, also, by heavy and continuous rain, had become very weak, and so tumbled down breaking the thief’s foot in its fall. The thief was very much annoyed at this interruption of his purpose, and at once limped along to the house of the Deputy-Inspector of Police, and took out a summons against the owner of the tumbled-down wall. The man accordingly appeared in court and pleaded his entire ignorance of the fragile nature of the wall, saying, that he had not built it, and that the bricklayer should be summoned. Accordingly the bricklayer was brought into the court and ordered to show reason why he had built the wall in such a way as that it had fallen down with a very slight knock. He, too, pleaded “Not guilty,” saying that there were many coolies there at the time, and that they prepared and gave him the plastering. If any one, surely these coolies ought to be summoned. Accordingly the coolies, who had prepared the mud for plastering, were sent for; and duly presented themselves at court. They also said that they had not done any wrong, but that perhaps the fault lay with the water-carrier, who might have poured too much water over the earth, so that the plastering became thin. Undoubtedly the water-carrier was the man to be punished. And so the water-carrier was summoned. Poor man! The downcast, hopeless, expression of his countenance as he entered the court betokened his case. “Why did you pour such a profusion of water,” said the Deputy-Inspector, “as that the mud for the plastering of the wall was thin and feeble?” “I acknowledge my fault,” said the water-carrier, “and am very sorry. The reason of it all was, that when I was pouring the water out of the skin upon the earth, it happened that a pretty woman passed by and I took a look at her, and was so enraptured with the sight, that I forgot for the moment what I was doing. I do trust that you will have mercy upon me and forgive me, because it was not my fault, that that beautiful woman just then went by.” The beautiful woman was then sought out and brought into the court,—and truly she was very beautiful, but her good looks failed to impress the hard hearted Deputy-Inspector, who charged her with passing by that way at the time of the erection of the wall, and finding that she had nothing to say in defence, ordered her to be hanged with the greatest possible speed. Dumbfounded with fear and astonishment the woman suffered herself to be led along to the place of execution without saying a word. Thither the Deputy-Inspector and many others (for the matter was quickly blazed abroad over the city) were already assembled. On seeing the man who had issued the dread and unjust order for her death the woman begged to be allowed to ask one favour before she deed was done. “Look,” said she, “at that large heavy beam (the gallows), and look at me so thin and feeble. The two are not compatible. Better that you seek for one fatter and stronger than I am; and let me go free.” The Deputy-Inspector touched with the humour of the request, and not really caring so long as somebody was executed by way of a tamáshá, granted it. Search was at once made for a strong, corpulent, person.

*
*
*
*
*

In those days there was a very famous pír in Kashmir, who used to reside in the jungle with no other companion than a faithful, loving, disciple. Now this disciple frequently had occasion to visit the city for the purpose of purchasing little articles, which he himself and his master required. One day this disciple returned to his jungle-home with the alarming news that there was bebuj in the city, i.e., bad government had commenced, and that every one and everything were in a state of rampant confusion. On hearing this the pír advised his disciple not to go again to the city until order and rule were re-established there; otherwise he would certainly get into trouble. The disciple, however, made light of this counsel; and on the very next opportunity went to the city. Sorry time for him! He found the place and the bazar in the greatest state of anarchy, and had not proceeded far along the noisy, crowded, bazar, when he, being a fine, strong, stout, young fellow, was accosted by the Deputy-Inspector’s messengers and informed of his fate. A short time after this he was a corpse; a victim to his own rash curiosity.

Very, very sad was the pír when he heard of his disciple’s death. “A thief broke his foot and my faithful follower got killed for it,” he cried. “Henceforth alone and friendless I shall have to wander in the woods and desert places.” First, however, he determined to go to the Deputy-Inspector and avenge his disciple’s unjust death. Immediately on reaching the city he commenced to distribute alms and pretended to be most happy. On the way he met the Deputy-Inspector and told him who he was. The Deputy-Inspector was astonished to find him so glad and joyful, and asked the reason of it. “My disciple,” replied the pír, “has reached heaven more quickly through this cruel execution; why should I not be happy and glad?” Hearing this the miserable Deputy-Inspector said within himself, “I, also, will be executed, that I, too, may arrive at bliss quickly. This certainly is the better way.” And so he executed himself, and there was an end of the matter.
Tsuras tah tsrulis bajwat.
A partnership between the thief and the watchman.
“Can two walk together except they be agreed.” —Amos iii. 3.
Tsigol. For their origin, vide note “Kashmiri kahai garah.”

Tsut gayih kolih tah rikh-ipadar
The bread has tumbled into the river and “for the father’s sake.”
A man does not give anything to God willingly, but if he loses any money, &c.; he professes not to mind—“May God bless it to my deceased father,” says he.

Tsutal shahras rikh pal pav.
In the sodomitish city three pals to a pav.
A badly-managed city.
Pav, a weight of half-a-pound, in which are five pals.

Tsyap laj tah tiras, pontak gayih tah gristis.
The sheep got a wound and the farmer got a piece of wool.
To harm another person by stealing which is of the greatest importance to him, but of not the slightest use to the thief.

Tuhus dug dinu tah pini nuadun.
To pound chaff and churn water.
To plough the seashore.
The Kashmirí has a very ingenious way of making butter. When the milk is ready for churning, it is placed into a big vessel, in the cover of which there is a hole. In this hole a stick is placed. The part of the stick which is inside the vessel is thick, and the part outside the cover is thin; to this thin part a piece of string is attached, and the ends of it the man or the woman holds in their hands, and putting one foot upon the cover to steady it, twirls about the stick with the string, first pulling one end and then the other until the butter is prepared.
I believe a slightly different custom prevails in India.

Tul khini honin suct.
To eat mulberries with dogs.
To degrade oneself.

Tul palav woth tsalav.
Gird up the clothes, rise, and away.
A wandering life.
Tumalal siræ yëlīk šikmas andar batah sharpi kat wēp' nū?
When the ser of rice is digested in the stomach does the matter remain?
Scandal at the dinner is blazed abroad as soon as the meal is over.

Turah ba kadr-i-‘ilm.
The length of the tail of a man's turban according to his knowledge.
A very wise and learned man called Shekh Challī visited Kashmir, greatly desiring to know to what extent the people had been educated, and whether they were a clever and thriving class. The Kashmiris got wind of this visit and gathered a council to consider how they might entrap this inquisitive foreigner in his speech. The result of their deliberations was, that they sent a most uneducated man named Malah Dupiyāz to meet the learned Shekh at Bāramula, a town at the north-west end of the valley.
Malah Dupiyāz went in very grand style; he was beautifully attired and looked of a most serious and meditative disposition, whilst to complete the deception, a man walked behind him with a plate upon which was rolled in a coil the end of his turban.
The Shekh was much surprised at meeting so learned a Kashmirī as this man appeared to be. In the course of conversation he asked him why he wore such a long tail to his turban. The Kashmirī replied, as he had parrot-like learnt, "Turah ba kadr-i-‘ilm."
Then the following dialogue in Persian and another unknown tongue passed between them:

Sawāl-i-Shekh. Kabk chīst?
Sawāl-i-Malah. Mabk chīst?
Jawāb-i-Shekh. Kabk dar kohsār sang-reczah mekhord.
Jawāb-i-Malah. Mabk dar mohsār mongreczah memorad.

Question, Shekh. What is the meaning of "kabk"?
Question, Malah. What is the meaning of "mabk"?
Answer, Shekh. "Kabk" is the name of an animal which eats gravel upon the hillside.
Answer, Malah. (Cannot be translated, as it is a language made up for the occasion, in order to non-plus the Shekh.)
Mabk also was a word coined for the moment and means nothing. In this way Malah Dupiyāz thoroughly frightened away the Shekh, so that he did not venture any further into the country.
Kashmirīs are very fond of carrying on these conversations in imaginary tongues. No entertainment is complete without them.
U

Unglas pěih bungalow.
A bungalow upon an inch of ground.
A good bargain; a cheap concern.

Un dánd rówarih súdas díndas wat.
One blind ox will lead a thousand oxen astray.
One fool makes many.
Gulistán, Ch. II.—Na měbînt ki gáwe dar ‘alafzár
Biýálâyad hama gáwán i dih rá.

Un kyah záníh prun batah?
Will a blind man know white rice?
A fool knows nothing.
There are fourteen varieties of rice grown in the valley.

Un kbutsih nah aniğatih,
Kani phaṭih nah vědrih zah,
Hínis adîj roîih nah haṭih.
Níki karît râwîh nah zah.
A blind man will not fear the darkness;
A stone will never be broken by the ice;
A bone will not stick in a dog’s throat;
A good deed will never be lost.

Ur mah gatž tah yuri wulah.
Don’t go there but come here.
Do not interfere in a quarrel or any wickedness.

———
Wabāhās Kalimah nah dar kunih tah nah dāwār.
The Kalima in time of plague is neither a door anywhere nor a wall (i.e., is no protection; you should have repeated it before).
Pray betimes.
Kalimah is the Muhammedan confession of faith. Lā ilāha illa Allah, wa Muhammad Rasūlllāh. There is no Deity but God, and Muhammad is the Apostle of God.

Wagwāī dandarih pēthul gos pēnjih chhamb.
The edge of the mat became as a precipice to him.
A man who becomes a bad character from a very little matter; or who dies from a very little sickness; or who is in despair because of a very little discouragement.

Wahathor kūlah gupan tah pagah sor.
1) Wahathor, last night a cow, and to-morrow a pig.
A fickle disposition.
Wahathor, a village in the Yēch pargana.
Shekh Nūr-ud-dīn once cursed this village, because one day he went there expecting to be hospitably treated as in former times, and the people would not at all entertain him.
Wūjih sān athah pēth thawnn.
To put the jewelled hand upon another’s shoulder.
Words from the wealthy man fail to comfort the poor man. Why does he not back them up with a present of money?

Waktas nah wētsān mōchhīh tah waktas nah wētsān kuchhīh.
Sometimes it is contained within the hand and at other times it cannot be held within the bosom.
The fickle world.
Persian—Kī āyīn e jahān gāhe chōnīn gāhe chōnīn būshad.

Waktuk kōr gav tālchuk pādshāh.
Work done at the proper time is like a king’s throne.

Wanah wālit wūthi, wahkas rachhit, wūlanīh wizih, dāb.
After having tended a tree for a year to cut it down and take it to the river; and at the time of taking it down to throw it with force upon the ground.
After showing a man much kindness, and considerably helping him, to turn the back upon him.
Wanah wálit Wéthih tshunizih Sirun wazum dizih nah zah; mandini gar kähni gatshzih Mungah-Hum súlas gatshzih nah zah.

Better to bring it from the jungle and throw it into the river than to lend anything to the people of Sirun, (for they never pay back); and better to eat the flesh of the sacrifice than to accept the invitation of the people of Mungah-Hum, (for they are very bad hosts).

Sirun is a village in the Dachhanpor pargana. Vessels of stones are hewn there. Sometimes this place is called Siram Khirâ Hum.

Mungah Hum, a village in the Chhirât pargana.

Wáníni aut tah ranín nah kënêh.
For a long time saying only, but not cooking anything.
Actions speak louder than words.

Wananwálih tsêk nai chhai ah tah bozanwálih tsêk tih chhai ná?
O talker, if you have not got understanding, you have, O hearer, haven’t you?
Never listen to idle tales and scandal.

Wandas chhuh jandun phák.
In the winter-time there is warmth from an old patched-up garment.
Sikandar Náma—Maiyaskan kawal garchi ‘ár áyidat, ki hangámi sarná ba kár áyidat.

“O Wánguyj, here the house is on fire.” “Give me my little piece of matting.”
Every man for himself, and especially in time of trouble.
Bústán, Oh. I—Shêbe dúd i khalk átashe bar farokht Shênúdam ki Baghdád níme bisokht.
Yêke shukr guft ándar án khák o dúd.
Ki dukín i márá gazande navád.

Wání chhoh bawâni.
The sound is as a goddess (= to our “Amen”).

Wíni chav sharêh tah suh gav sharmandah;
Tilawáni chav kúnz tah tas lug mad.
A shopkeeper took a little wine and was ashamed of himself;
The oil-expressor drank some rice-water, and he became intoxicated with pride.
A respectable man is ashamed of a very small fault, while the man of low degree is made proud by a very small matter.

Woni, shopkeeper, one who sells sugar, rice, oil, &c. He thinks himself immeasurably above the tiltawoni in position, and would not intermarry with his people on any account.

Woni, wani kani jati.
Speaking, speaking behind the ear.

Forgetfulness. Inattention.

Woni, wani tsandun.
Jungles upon jungles of sandalwood.

A life of supreme ease; peace and plenty everywhere.
Tsandun. Natives say that there is a jungle of a kind of sandalwood in Wama Divi in the Kutchahr pargana. Large quantities are imported from the Panjab.

Wunichên yáren Khudiyyah sund sug.
The water of God for the pines of the wood.

God will provide.
The pine is very common on the Himálayas. The most widespread species is the Pinus longifolia.

Wánis chhik grákh wödi.
The customer is known to the shopkeeper.

Wántis dunis khëzihi kinh tah tshotsis kyah khëzihi?
A man can get something out of a wonï walnut, but what can he eat from a tshoti?

As good as nothing.
There are four kinds of walnuts:—(i) Wont, a walnut with a hard shell, from which the kernel is separated with great difficulty. (ii) Burazul, a walnut with a thin shell, and the kernel is easily separated. (iii) Khókbúr or Tsho'tsah-kon, which is without a kernel. (iv) Tšú-shákál, Trêh-sévkál or Sás'kál is a walnut having eight divisions, and very rare. Whenever one is obtained it is readily purchased by the Hindús, who never eat it, but keep it as a dainty morsel for the gods.

Wáneo dëgalis nai chhú tah zëvih tih chhú na?
O shopkeeper, if you have nothing in your pots, you have a tongue, haven’t you?

If one’s dinner is meagre, his speech need not be so.

Warah-mulik Tulah-mul.
From Báramula to Tulamul (about twenty-four miles distance).

A good walk or ride.

Warah-mul is the correct name for the town commonly called Báramula, where visitors change horses and coolies for the boats on their way into "the Happy Valley." The lower class Kashmiris, and perhaps residents of Panjabi extraction, have changed the w (wâv) into b (be), as also in the case of other words, e.g., Wernâg is changed by them into Bornaâg, Achhiwal into Achhîâl, and Wijbhiârâ into Bijbhîârâ, &c.

Mul or Mulah is a common ending to Kashmiri names of places. Besides Warah-mul and Tulah-mul, there are Drugahmul, Kuchihmul and others. Mul means root, foundation, creation, &c. Hence the creation of Warah or Warâh, the root of the mulberry tree, and so on. Warah-mul, the creation of Wârah or Warâh or Warâha, the hog or third incarnation of Vishnu. So called, because in ancient times the place is said to have been terribly troubled by a Rakshasa called Hiranâk, who had fortified himself against all attacks of man or beast by asking the deity to protect him against these. He had, however, forgotten to include the name of the boar amongst the others which he had enumerated as wishing to be protected against; and so when the people of Warah-mul cried unto their gods in great distress their petition was heard, and Vishnu, assuming the form of a boar, came down and slew the Rakshasa. Cf. Sanskrit Hiranyâksha, Monier Williams' Dicty.

Tulah-mul, the root of the mulberry-tree. It is supposed to have been a lake at first, and having connection with the great Anchar Lake, about four miles distant from Srinagar. Three hundred and sixty Nâgs (or snake gods) are said to have resided there, and in their midst the goddess Râgni; but no one ever saw them, except a Pandit, Krishna Kâr by name. He was one of the goddess' devotees, and he worshipped her so regularly and earnestly that the goddess deigned to manifest herself to him. She appeared unto him in a dream, and told him to go to the Anchar Lake, because there she would show herself to him. The Pandit enquired how she should find her Nâg, whereupon she told him to go there in a boat, and on his arrival she would under the form of a serpent lead him to the place. All happened as the goddess had said. The Pandit was guided to a spot where a mulberry tree had grown; and the place was quite dry. There and then Krishna Kâr worshipped Râgni, and afterwards left and told all the people of the wondrous vision and gracious words which he had seen and heard. Cf. Sanskrit Râjni, Monier Williams' Dicty.

Warah Mulik wôdī
The wind of Báramula.

Jânbaé Sâhib, a Muhammedan religious mendicant, lived at Báramula in olden days, when the place was noted for its great heat. At one time for a whole week the sun shone upon the town with such increasing vigour that the people were being struck down with fever in large numbers. Then it was that Jânbaé prayed, and the air was at once changed, and a good wind sprung up, which has continued to blow around Báramula ever since. Jânbaé Sâhib's tomb is to be seen in the town, and is much venerated and visited.
Warhajih mundare par nai āsie,
Noshi nai āsie hash tah zīm,
Mukaddamas patah nai phukaddam āsie,
Gāmas túlihe shīmas tām.
If there were not an axe for the crooked log,
If there were not a mother-in-law and sister-in-law for the daughter-in-law,
If there were not a phukaddam after the mukaddam,
Then he (or she or it) would trouble the village until the evening,
No rule—no peace, and no country.
Mukaddam, the headman of a village, called lambuḍār in the Panjāb.
Phukaddam, an officer under the authority of the mukaddam.

Warī chhuk treh hat tah sheth doh.
A year is 360 days.
Lay by for the morrow.

Wārinī nishih shur thawun khatīt.
To hide the child from the midwife.
Perfectly useless to try to keep the secret.
Wom :—Dūt se pe ṫahīn chhuptā.

Wārinī prasun hēchhinūnīn.
Teaching the midwife how to deliver a child.
Teaching one’s grandmother how to suck eggs.
Teaching a shopkeeper his tables, &c.

Wast chhīh dūbi sandih ṭulah talah sīf gatshīn.
The clothes become clean beneath the washerman’s stick.
"There is a great want in those people who have not suffered."
McCheyne.

Watah wēlai tah jorah judāi.
May you miss the way and be separated from one another.
A Kashmiri curse.

Wātal Batwārah.
A sweeper’s Saturday (i.e., no time—I shall never get it).
There are several classes of wātal or mihtar log. Some who make winnowing fans and are called shupi-wātal, some who do regular mihtar’s work and are generally called duwanwol: and others who make boots and shoes and are called simply wātal. Like people of other crafts the bootmaker invariably wants something in advance, and promises the boots on the following Saturday, which promise is renewed for two or three Saturdays, until the order is fulfilled. Hence the proverb.
Wital Braswárah.
The sweepers' Thursday.
Vide supra.

Witalan tír.
The sweater's sheep.
Money or property in the hands of a man of low degree.

Watan hund múz látan tah látan hund múz watan.
The flesh of the road to the sole of the foot and the flesh of the soles of the feet to the road.
A man who earns his living with great difficulty.
Some work so hard, and walk so far, that the skin comes off from their hands and feet, and the dust of the ground comes in its stead, and cannot be washed off again.

Watih wati chhuh úb pakán.
The water flows its straight regular course.
No humbug about that man or that arrangement.

Watshen wahrahwud.
A birthday to calves! (there is no need to commemorate their natal day).
Cited when an unworthy man has been honoured, &c.

Watshis gyad tah dándas lov;
Insíf rov tah wanav kas?
Kahan garan kuni tov,
Hímmat rín tah wanav kas?
Six wisps of grass to the calf and only one to the ox;
Justice lost and to whom shall we speak?
Only one frying-pan between eleven houses.
Courage gone and to whom shall we speak?
The reign of injustice.
Cf. note to "Kashirih kahai garah."

Wav, bá, wav, zih lon, bá, lon.
Sow, brother sow, that you may reap, brother, reap.

Wáv kas zih yês patah áv?
Who has such trouble that he should lag behind?

Wáv wuchhit gatsih náv tráwuni.
Look at the wind before you loose the boat.
Consider before you act.
Was nūwah sail.
To take out the boat when a strong wind is blowing.
An unsuitable time for any work.

Weltingh pēth wukhul.
A mortar upon the clothes-line.
Impossible.
Natives tie lines of string right across their rooms and hang clothes, vegetables, &c., upon it.

Wēshámîtrun surug.
Wēshámîtar's heaven.
To die on the completion of any great object.
Wēshâmîtar was a rikhis, or arch-saint, among the Hindūs. He made a heaven for himself, and when he had finished it and had just set foot on the doorstep to enter therein, he died.

Wēth poshīh nāh athah chhalanas.
The river-water will not be enough for washing his hands.
A wasteful, extravagant, man.
Wēth is the Jhelum river in its course through Kashmir.

Wēth tsheniū zih panun tsheniū?
Will the dividing of the river be as if any of your own relations were going to be hurt?
Your own is your own, another's is another's.

Wēthi kati chhak grazil zih āgūrah?
O Wēth, whence are you roaring? From the spring.
The spring of a woman's happiness is her husband's love, the spring of a man's prosperity is a friend's help, the spring of a nation's distress is the ruler's mismanagement.

Wēthīh nūbad phul.
Some sugar-candy for the river.
A little gift lost in the vastness of the receiver's need.

Wētsār-Nēgai marutsah nūbad.
(Eating) the sugar and pepper at Wētsār-Nāg.
To break one's journey for rest and food, or to eat at home the food which was prepared for the journey.

Gangabal is a stream tributary to the Sindh river. Hither go those Pandits bearing the ashes of dead relations who died during the previous year, which they throw into the sacred stream with great reverence. Cf. note "Siryas hyūh nāh," Jv. When going to this place, while ascending the Barut mountain they sometimes fall sick either from the effects of the rarified atmosphere, or else from overtiredness; and so the pilgrims are advised to take some sugar and pepper with them and eat these as medicines, if they should feel ill. These sugar and pepper are not on any account to be eaten at Wetsar-Nág. On one occasion a little boy about six years old, not having been well instructed in the manners of the pilgrimage, began to eat some of his sugar-candy at Wetsár Nág, a march or so too early.

\textit{Woni budi\hskip0.1667emh\hskip0.1667em tah parnánah thurih.}
The shopkeeper will grow old and throw about the scales.
\textit{A useless, old servant.}

\textit{Woni chhúi poni kisurih tali.}
\textit{Húrih hastis hewán muli.}
The shopkeeper is like water below rice-chaff.
He buys an elephant for a cowrie;—(sharp, cunning fellow!)

\textit{Woni gav sui yus pánis bozih his\hskip0.1667emh\hskip0.1667em b.}
He is a shopkeeper, who understands (even) the worth (of a drop) of water, (so that he does not waste a trifle of anything).

\textit{Woni gav sui yus macheh tsalih.}
A shopkeeper is he who will lick up a fly (i.e., will not waste a scrap).

A shopkeeper married his daughter in very grand style. During the ceremony he placed some very valuable pearls upon her veil. Everywhere his name became distinguished because of this splendid wedding.

Some days after the wedding was concluded two merchants came to him bringing some honey for sale. He bought it, and while he was storing it away in his shop he noticed a fly in one of the pots, which he extricated, licked the honey off from it, and then threw away. His daughter chanced to see him do this dirty trick and despised him for it. “Father,” said she, “how could you be so vulgar after having spent so much money over my wedding and appeared so grand!” The girl was so upset by this act of her father’s that she got ill, and only became well again when it was proved to her that this extreme care, which her father manifested, had alone enabled him to spend such an enormous sum of money over the wedding.

\textit{Wush hit un tah bûzit zur.}
Seeing, yet blind, and hearing, yet deaf.
See all and hear all, but say nothing.
Wuchhto kyah pyav husnas wdv; rântasih kuruk Shâh Mâl náv. Look, what a misfortune has happened to beauty; people have given the ugly woman the name of Shâh Mâl. Shâh Mâl is the name of a great and beautiful woman.

Wudah-Pûrık be-garaz. The independent, lazy people of Wudapûr. Wudapûr is a village in the Utar pargâna. The people are as they are proverbially represented. No person, if they can help it, will take a servant from the village.

Wufawane rathanih. Catching (birds or) things as they fly. “Credulous fools.”—Shaks.

“Wûñţá khasun kuthú zih wasun?” “Har-dú lánat.” “O camel, how do you going up and coming down hills?” “Oh, both are a curse.”

There is a touch of the curse about everything down here.

Wûñţh budyov tah muthar karun hêchhun nah. The camel has become aged and has not learned how to help himself. Old age is second childhood. Persian.—Shutur pír shud shâshîdan na amokht.

Wûntah natsun tah khâr áhang chhêch mashhûr. A camel’s dancing and an ass’s braying are well-known. A work out of time and out of place.

A camel and an ass were grazing in the same meadow together, when suddenly the ass brayed very loud. “Be quiet,” said the camel, “you will disturb the whole neighbourhood and the people will come out, and catch us and bind us, and we shall henceforth have to carry burdens. Be not so foolish. I pray you.” But the ass did not desist; on the contrary he brayed the louder, and the consequence was that some men hearing the noise came forth and caught both the animals. The camel was filled with rage, but kept his counsel, determining to revenge himself upon the ass at the earliest opportunity.

One day both the camel and the ass were walking together carrying loads, when they arrived at a bridge, upon which the camel began to dance with all his power. “Steady, steady,” cried the ass, “you will break the bridge and we both shall be precipitated into the deep river.” But the camel did not hear; on the contrary he seemed to dance more clumsily and with greater vigour, until presently the beams of the bridge snapped into two pieces and they both fell into the water and were killed. Cf. Journal, Asiatic Society, Bengal, Vol. LII., Part I, p. 90, the Rev. C. Swynnerton’s tale of “The Four Associates.”
Wunuk tóm thuktam suzahúrh sun chhum;
Ajih hárîh kunahwúj dróyi no.
Wunuk tóm thuktam múlin kronú;
Az nai dún tshutsah-konuí droí.
Up to this day you boast about the gold in your purse;
But never so much as an earring of half-a-cowrie’s worth has appeared.
Up to this day you boast about your father’s house and people;
But to the present day not an empty walnut even has come out of it.
Empty boasting.

Wupar mahalluk gav kukar tsúr.
A man from another district is a thiever of fowls.

Srinagar is divided into several mahallas. People of one mahalla dislike very much to have anything to do with the people of another mahalla. The people of the one will not receive the people of the other; the children of the one will beat and abuse the children from the other; and the very dogs also will not recognise one another in a friendly way. It is a constant occurrence to lose fowls, &c., as a natural consequence of this estrangement.

Wupasladás chhuh kún patai.
A dog following after a fasting man.
One trouble after another.

Wurah-gabar chhíh sorah khuyul.
Wurah-múlis torih dáb zangih.
Wurah-múlis khorah rúti.
Step-sons are like a herd of swine.
A stroke with the chisel upon the feet of the step-father.
A chain for the feet of the step-father.

Wurun wuchhit gatsíhik khor wahrans.
A man should stretch out his feet after looking at the bed-clothes.

Marathi.—Hátrun páhun páya pasaráve.

“Wusíni bēni, yuharin wulah,” “túrúni bēni uharih gatsíh.”
“O warm (i.e., rich) sister, come here. O cold sister, go there.”
Cupboard love.

In Kashmir a wealthy man is called a warm man, ak garm mahynuv; a rich tomb (place of pilgrimage,) is called ak garm sírát.
Wusheeras khal kish; turneras mal mish.
To a warm (i.e., a wealthy) man, his heart’s desire; but to a cold man (i.e., poverty), filth and repulsion.
Khal kish, lit., slaughter of beasts.
Mish is a general word said with a drawl for urging cattle along, &c.

"Wutu nush khet khas." "Ayus kyah karanih?"
"Rise, O daughter-in-law, and get up to your room."
"What else have I come for?"
One’s duty.
People are married very early in the country of Kashmir, if their parents can afford it. The custom of Hindus at the first marriage is to make the bride and bridegroom sleep together in the husband’s house for one day only. After which they are separated until the bride attains the age of puberty. Among Muhammadans the couple sleep together for a whole week, and then are separated. In the saying above the bride is supposed to have reached her mother-in-law’s dwelling, and immediately on arrival she is told to go to her room.
“For this very purpose I have come,” says the girl.

"Wutu nikah kám kar." "Nikah chhus tah hôkah nah."
"Wutu nikah batah khô."
"Get up, youngster, and work."
"I am weak and cannot."
"Get up, youngster, and eat something."
"Where is my big pot?"

Wuthiv kothëv bihiv kothev khyëv shikôr mâz.
Wuthiv nai bihiv nai tah khyëv parun mâz.
Get up knees and sit down knees and eat the flesh of the prey;
If you wont get up and sit down then eat your own flesh.
Work is health and life.

Wuthë wulah, madano.
Come, O friend, and be tempted; (not I, I know better).

Wutini bañiyih tut.
Another gets his punishment.
The wrong man.

Wuvur matyâ zih wunah tsûr karih bëyiñ?
Is the weaver so mad that he will again steal wool?
A burnt child dreads the fire.
Panjâbi.—Ay dû jaliâ titâne te dardâ hai.
Wuvuri wundi dyaran dah sás.
A weaver’s wealth is ten ánás.
A stupid man with a little money who wishes to be thought a great personage.

There was a poor wretched weaver who had only ten ánás, which he hid in the dust under his feet. He put five ánás under one foot and five ánás under the other foot, and while he was weaving he used to work his feet up and down (as if at a treadmill) and say “Is phallih pánch, us phallih pánch,” which translated is “Five in this place and five in that place.” News of this got wind, and one day the poor weaver lost all his ten ánás. He then continued to say, “Is phallih toh, us phallih toh,” of which the interpretation is, “On this side chaff and on that side chaff.”—It appears that the thief had put some chaff in the place of the money stolen.

Wuzalih kanih tsup kađun.
To bite on the red side (of an apple, &c.)
A gaint sharo in the partnership.

“Wuzamuń, nats nats tai ai panziai.”
“O monkey, dance upon loan.”

A debtor’s reply to a hard creditor.

Some of the natives earn their living by training monkeys to dance and do other tricks. They take them about, as they do in England, to the people’s houses, and some of the people give them money, while others promise to give on the morrow.

“Wuzamyo kutú guk?” “Horër räwaranih.”
“O debt, whither gone?” “To increase the debt.”

Keep out of the clutches of the money-lender.
Yá púr nah tah dúr.
Either altogether, or else be at a distance.
   The whole hog or none.

Yá tai kaj nah tah laj “Huri” wanane.
At first she was dumb, but afterwards she began to say “Huri.”
   Time will make mention.
   Huri is a sound for driving away cows.

Yá tsalun nah tah tsålun.
Either flee or else suffer.

Yá zurav nah tah burav.
Either suffer or else go. (Vide supra.)
   “Go, you rascal, or I will smite you.”

Yàd chhaní táh chhit nani.
The stomach empty but the dress displayed to view.
   Stinting the stomach to support the back.

Yàd chhhú nah wuchhán kành tah táníh chhuh wuchhán parat kành.
No one sees the stomach but everybody sees the body.
   An argument for dress.

Yàd dag chhëh bod dag.
The stomach pain is a great pain.
   “In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.”

Yàd tsharuí tah gonthsan diwàn táv.
An empty stomach, yet twirling his moustache.
   The would-be gentleman.

Yadal chhui be-imán.
A fat man has no religion.
   “Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked.”

Yàjìh ai phuchhik tah kúchhik chhós atì.
If the biscuit is broken, the pieces are here.
   Here are the items of the account, we will add up the total again.
Yak tan tah dū kas.
One body and two persons.
A married couple.

Yakar chhánuni kukar pachih-baran.
Yakar, the carpenter’s fowl-house.
An unfinished work.
Fowl-houses, garden-walls, &c., in Kashmir are frequently made of a loose rough kind of wooden railing called pachih-baran.
Yakar, a carpenter, is said to have built a fowl-house for some person, which tumbled down directly one of the fowls flew upon it.

Yakur mūrit athan phak.
Lay hold of (lit., kill) the yakur plant and your hand will smell.
You cannot touch pitch without being defiled.

Yamah, yitam tah nitam.
O angel of death, come and take me.
Quoted in a most piteous tone when any person begs to be let off any difficult or unpleasant work.

Yarpūrīh bīl bakar tah apārīh bīl lakar.
On this side of the hill (he promised to give me) a goat, but when he had reached) the other side (by my help, he gave me) the stick, i.e., he best me.

Yūr kyak layih zih tsarīh bachih.
What is the worth of a friend that you will not give him the young sparrow.
A request refused.

Yūr gai batah-mar.
Friends are rice-stores.
“Make to yourselves friends.”
A king had three sons, to each of whom when they were grown up he gave a lakh of rūpīs to profit with as they each thought right.
One of them tried trade and became exceedingly rich, another went and founded many caravanserais for pilgrims and travellers; and the third travelled everywhere lavishing gifts upon the people and entertaining them in large numbers, and in grand style. In course of time they all met together again and recounted their several experiences. When the king had heard these he praised the first two sons; but was angry with, and despised, the youngest.

* * * * *
The king's country was in a state of great confusion; an enemy with a very strong force behind him had appeared against it. What was the king to do? He was weak and friendless. He called his wise ministers, but they could not help him out of his difficulties. At length he sought the advice of his sons. The first son advised yielding in the most honourable way possible; the second son said that he could not help his father; but the third—who had been sent for, it was true, but without any expectation of real help or wise counsel from him—he said, "O king, my father, command me to go against this enemy and I will overcome him." The king consented. "Go and do better with your men when you get them, than you did with your money when you had it." The youngest son went forth with a glad and hopeful heart calling together his friends on the way. The people remembered his generosity and amiability and answered readily to his call, until at last he had with him a very large force of most enthusiastic followers, by whose help he thoroughly routed the enemy, so that they returned no more to trouble the land.

The king had a different opinion of his youngest son after this. Instead of despising him he esteemed him the most worthy of all his sons, and appointed him to the greatest honour.

Yár zágin tshalas támúki chilim chat tah tsalas.
The friend lies in wait to deceive; after smoking the pipe he will run away.
A heartless servant or friend, &c.

Yáras moj muyíh tah lukaḥ sósiḥ, yár múd tah kunih nah kahiḥ.
If a friend's mother dies a thousand people remain (because the friend is alive), but if the friend is dead, then there is nobody left.
"All the wealth of the world could not buy you a friend, nor pay you for the loss of one."

Yas gov hund dud tah gurus khéziḥ tasund pëtshur tih gatšiḥ tšulun.
One must take the cow's kick as well as her milk and butter.
We cannot afford to quarrel with a good servant or good horse, &c.

Yas korih nethar soh kúr lubaran!
A daughter about to be married gathering dung!
A person who is everywhere and doing everything except in the right place and doing the right thing.

Yas lug "karah karah" suh karih;
Yas lug "marah marah" suh marih.
He who says "I will do, I will do," he will do;
He who cries "I shall die, I shall die," he will die.
Where there's a will there's a way.
Yas mahnyvis bôyih sund bad yiyih tas gatshîh panun kâmuni.
He who wishes evil to another man, will suffer his own loss.
Harm hatch, harm catch.

Yas nah watsh nar tas gâni garasui andar phar.
He whose arm is not raised (in labour), to him a dried fish has become in the house.
Industry begets wealth.
Phar.—During the winter months the fishermen go out with their boats in companies of ten or twelve after these little fish, which they catch in a cast-net. Half-a-dozen boats will spread themselves across the river sideways and beat the water with their paddles, to frighten the fish into the half-a-dozen nets, which have been thrown for them by the other boats a little way ahead. In this way sometimes a mile of the river is scoured in an evening, and mounds upon mounds of fish are frequently caught by one company. When it begins to get dark the fishermen fasten their boats to the bank and collect all their fish together into one place. Then they spread a layer of leaves or grass, and over this a layer of fish and a sprinkling of salt, then another layer of leaves or grass and so on, until a great mound is raised. Everything ready they now light big fires on all four sides of this mound to dry the fish, and sit by and watch, until the fires go out. On the following morning the fish are taken out and strung upon sticks ready for sale. Only the poorer classes purchase them, as they are not very savoury or wholesome.

Yas wandas hammâm tah rôtaakhâlih gû, sui hâ-mâlih dunyahahs év.
That man has come into the world, O father, who has got a warm bath for the winter and a cow for the summer.
Blessed is the man who has everything in its season.
A saying of Shekh Nûr-ud-din.

Yas wat rîwih tas hûwan dah;
Yas kath rîwih tas hûwih nah kaîh.
Him, who loses his way ten men will direct;
But he who loses a word,—who will direct him?
“Each sacred accent bears eternal weight,
And each irrevocable word is fate.”— Pope.

Yas watsh nar tami khîyih lukah hanz lar.
He who raised his arm (i.e., in labour) ate the house of the people.
Industry begets wealth.
Yas yus gatshih suk tas gatshih mukarù tì.
Let that man who wants anything give a gold-mohur (as a bribe) for it.
Money commands even the gods.

Yat bawah-saras ḋyai kahti!
Kaṅh nai ḍyuthxm kaṅsíh süwí.
How many people came to this lake-like world!
But I have not seen anyone (going away) with anyone (i.e., we die separately and alone).
This world is called lake, or sea like, because it is so difficult to cross over it with safety—Vide note “Samaduras manz;” &c.

Yat nam atsíh, tat shistar kyah ñgun.
Where a finger-nail will enter (will do it), there is no necessity for iron.
When one can accomplish the matter easily, what is the good of creating a noise. When it can be done very economically, what profit is there in spending much money over it, &c.

Yath gámas nak gatshun ásíh, tamih gümuk núwí hyun kyah chhu!
Is it necessary to ask the man of that village whether you have to go, or not?
Useless speech.

Yath núrah butisui mai di nûrue.
Dur nai latiye rozh samsúr.
Wuchhtai Pándawan hund dih duruye;
Tim králah garanui chhapane tsúi!
Timanui kyah aus lymphmut Hariye.
Dur nai latiye rozh samsúr.
Don’t hide your light face in your sleeve, dear.
The world will not always remain.
See how firm were the bodies of the Pándus;
Yet they had to hide themselves in a potter’s house!
According as Hari had written in their lot.
My dear, the world will not always remain.
“Nothing in this world can last.”

The above is the poetry of a very holy fakír woman (neither Muhammedan nor Hindú) named Habbah Khotan, who used to live at a village called Pándachhuk, where there is a wooden mosque, which she erected from the savings of her spinning-wheel earnings. The people say that she was accustomed to cross the river upon a lion, which beast God gave her as a special present.

Pándus. Yudhishthira, and four other princes, sons of Pándu, a sovereign of ancient Delhí. For a full account of these demigods and of their great enemies the Kurus, cf. any classical Dictionary of India. Here I will only explain the above lines. Yudhishthira, the eldest son, was installed as heir-apparent, and soon became renowned for his "justice, calm passionless composure; chivalrous honour and cold heroism." The people wished Yudhishthira to be crowned king at once, but the Kurus tried hard to prevent it. First of all the Pándus and their mother were sent to a house built of combustible materials, with the intention of burning the whole family in it. The Pándus, however, were informed of this, trick and escaped to a potter’s house in another city, &c., &c.

Hari or Hari is a name of Vishnu. Kashmiri Hindús believe that he inscribes upon the foreheads of human beings their several destinies. The following is a quotation from the Hitopadesa (with Johnson’s translation):

ए विद्वानि विद्वानियोगाद्र अस्ति तेना राहणासि ।
लिङ्गितमायि लज्जेते प्रजायोऽस्मि क: समथे: ॥

"Since even the moon sporting in the sky, destroying sin, possessing ten hundred beams, marching in the midst of the stars; from the influence of destiny is swallowed by the dragon:—who then is able to avoid what is written on his forehead by the finger of destiny."

Yath tīlawān zakhīh, yih phyūr tih.
Let this drop also fall upon the oilman’s dirty clothes, (what difference will it make?)

A little more trouble to a man already overwhelmed with it. Some oilmen have been known to wear the same long smocklike garment for the space of three years without once having it washed or changed all that time. The quantity of grease which collects within a few months, even, is almost incredible.

Yath tumbis tih hūdádai.
This piece of wool also for dried fish.

"On the verge of bankruptcy—what can matter a shilling or so more."

Persian.—Ín lakad ham ba gor i Hátam i Tai.
Yatsan gagarñyan rúd nah, tsaróż kathan súd nah. There is not rain from much thundering, and there is not profit from much speaking.

"Yatsarih, raneyih khečsarih mētah." "Wulu kontarah."
"Boh dai lugus wálah-bari." Tsekh dai muteui "tah ati khol."
"O zealous woman, you have cooked a handful of curry."
"Come, O cock sparrow."
"I am fastened, O woman, in a net." "It is left over for you; eat it there."
Misfortune.

Yelanjel tah mawásan khalat. A prison for the royal and obedient, and a robe of honour • for the rebellious.
Khalat (Khil'at in Arabic) is generally a robe of honour with which princes confer dignity on subjects, and visitors of distinction. Sometimes a sword or a dagger, or a rare jewel, or some other valuable, is given together with a turban and shawl.

Yělih ausum lukachár tělih ausum nah mukajár. When I was a child then I had not any leisure.
Time hangs heavily upon an old man.

Yělih dal darwázah wut gatšim, tělih chhuh nah bōnsih hund božín. When the flood-gates of the lake open, then they do not listen to any one.
The word of the ruler—no alternative.
Dal darwázah, lit., the door of the lake. The Dal is a large lake close to the city of Srīnagar. When the river is low the gates, called "Dal darwázah," remain open; but when the river rises to a certain height, they close of themselves, thus preventing inundation of the land around the lake.

Yělih diwán Khudá tělih katás mún zan; Yělih niwán Khudá tělih katás mún zan.
When God gives then it is as salt for the sheep;
When God takes then it is as wool from the sheep.
(i. e., when God gives, he gives to profit—the gift is as salt, which preserves and fattens the beast; and when God takes, he takes but His own—what He himself has given, i. e., as wool from the sheep, which fattened from the salt, which God gave it).
Yèlih píran hisèb mangan, kùtah píran nát atsih zangan.
When the pírs' accounts will be taken, counterfeit pírs will tremble.
A wicked steward, a dishonest servant.
Gulistán of Sá'dí, Chap. I.—Harki khyánat warzad dastash ñar hisèb bilarsad.

Yèlih sun têlih nah kan, yèlih kan têlih nah sun.
When there is gold (for the earring), then there is not an ear;
and when there is the ear, then there is not the gold.
A wife and expense, or no wife and save; a son and expense, &c.

Yèlih tsah úsah pàdshàh têlih úsah buh wazir.
When you become king then I will be minister.
"I'll be up with you."

Yèlih yih shùbih têlih tih kar.
When it is proper then do it.
A time for everything.

Yèmi daulat jamá kar, yù niyas tsúr yúrávis zamínih tál, nah khwun pínas nah nyun athih nah ditun bùgis.
He who gathered together riches, either a thief will take them from him, or they will be lost under the ground; the gatherer neither partakes of them himself, nor does he take them with him, nor does he give them to another.

Yèmi dits noshíh suí dapán "Garah bigaryow."
He who commits incest with his daughter-in-law says: "The house has become bad."
Every bad man suspects every other person of being bad likewise.

Yèmi dits wani tas suí wani, yèmi tsàt wani tas suí wani.
He who plants a grove of trees, may God do so to him; and he who cuts the grove may God do so to him.
"Whose end shall be according to their works."

Yèmi herih khatoss tamí herih ai wasahah, yèmi ñapah ai lasahah tah bòjih wasahah nah zah.
I came up by this ladder and if I get down again by it and am free of this misfortune I will never steal from the pot again.
Poor people's children are constantly pilfering from the pot.
One day a little child was seen in the very act, and was caught at the top of the ladder, which generally runs up outside a Kashmiri hut, and by which she sought to escape, perhaps, over the roof. While her mother was beating her on the top round of the ladder, she shrieked out these words, which have passed into a proverb, and are now constantly cited by other and bigger children, when they are discovered doing anything forbidden.

Yēmi hov tami nyov ; yēmi khut tami rut.
He who made the thing manifest caused it to be taken away, and he who concealed the matter, held it.
Keep your own counsel.

Yēmi hyut suh hut.
He who took grief (into his heart) rotted away.

Yēmi khani qang tas gayih tuti andar pannu zang.
He who dug a pit for others has got his own legs into it.
Persian.—Chāh kān rā chāh dar yesh kardah ī khesh āyad yesh.

Yēmi kur ër suh gav khwār.
He who does shame comes to shame.

Yēmi kur gungul tami kur krāv.
Lukah hanzih lūganaiyih pēth mo bar chāv.
He who began the harvest reaped the end of it.
Do not be covetous over other people’s fields.

*Yēmi kur lawah hat suh tīh tutūi ;
Yēmi zol lawah hat suh tīh tutūi.*
He who made a hundred bundles of grass, to him so much; He who burnt a hundred bundles of grass, to him so much.
A master who does not praise the good servant and reprove the bad, but serves all the servants alike.
People gather the long lank water grass which grows by the riverside in the Autumn, tie it up into bundles, and sell them during the Winter at the rate of sixty bundles for an áná.

Yēmi lukah hanzan michan tah fiqran pēth nazar thaw suh gav kārīn.
He who keeps his eyes upon the pieces of rice and bread of other people is in a wretched state.
A loafing, wandering, fellow.
Yēmi Sāhiban ās dītus suh diyas nā khos tih khyun kyun?
Whom God has given a mouth, to him will not He, the same
God, give a little pot for his dinner?
Bustān of Sā'dī—Yake tīrāl dandān barāwurda bud,
Pīdar sar ba fikrash faro burtah bud.

Mukhor goam barā e man ai be khivad—
Harānkas ki dandān dihad nān dihad.

Yēmi shīli chhih wuchhmati yiti kahtyāh rūd!
This jackal has seen plenty of rain like this!
An old experienced man.

Yēmi wuchh naris tah dalis suh gav khwār;
Yēmi tshun akis khoras pulahur, beyis paizār.
Suh chhih bar khurdār.

He who paid attention to the sleeve and border (of his garments) was ruined;
He who wore a grass shoe on one foot and a leather shoe on the other, he was prosperous.
The man who wishes to succeed must not mind a little dirt sometimes.

Yēmis “Nannawārih” nāv drāv tas tśalih nah zah.
If a man has got nicknami’d “Bare-footed,” the name will never leave him.

In olden times there lived in Kashmir a very great man named Khwājāh Karīm Din. He once visited the ‘Īd gāh in time of snow.
On arriving at the common he noticed the nice level ground and said to his attendant “Take off my shoes. I wish to run on the grass for a few minutes with naked feet.” His servant obeyed, and Karīm Din ran about for a long time to his heart’s content.
From that hour the people called him Karīm Nānawor. Of course he was very angry at this, and tried every means in his power to check it; but all to no purpose. To the very hour of his death, and since, whenever his name has been mentioned, people have spoken of him as Karīm Nānawor (i.e., bare-footed Karīm).

Yēmukui dūr tah tamukui pun.
Whence the timber, thence the wedge.
Set a thief to catch a thief.

Yēnan wēnah tah wanah hi; suh kami chhwai hōpati.
Wēnah upon the river-bank and jasmine in the wood; and who plucked the jasmine? The bear.
Good things in the hands of the bad.
Wēnah is a non-edible plant with a smell like mint.
Yēni nah kunih, wonun nah kunih tah kats gas yerav?
Warp not to be found anywhere, woof (also) not (to be found) anywhere, and how many yards shall we sort?
An order but not all the requisites for fulfilling it.

Yēti bēhē Nāgī Arzun tati bēhā Bāgī Parzun?
Will Bāg Parzun (a poor, ignorant, fellow) sit in the same place with Nāg Arzun (the great)?
People should know their rank.

Yēti pahalis khyul tati sahas guph.
Where the shepherd’s flock there the leopard’s lair.
Where riches there thief, where glass there stone, where a man of high position there envious, covetous persons.

Yētih ai úsik mengun suh tih hēyih tšēngun.
If there were a little boy here he also would be amused.
Cited to a forward, impertinent, little fellow.
Mengun, lit., sheep and goats’ ordure, which being small, a little boy has been likened to it and called after it.

Yētih áb tatih áp.
Where there is water, there is a god.
Hindustání.—Jahán áp wahán áp.
Rivers and springs as sources of fertility and purification, were at an early date invested with a sacred character by the Hindús, who are thoroughly in their glory, living in this land of Kashmir, a land of rivers and fountains and lakes, &c. The Muhammedans are constantly twitting their Hindú neighbours concerning the number of their water-gods.

Yētih kon tatih nah hújat myon.
Where there is a one-eyed man there is no necessity for my presence.
The natives declare that the Devil said this.
Hindustání—Kánā terhá bad-fialá.
Persian.—Yak chashm gul, digar na bükull.
Panjábí—Kánā kāchhā hoch-gardanā : yeh tínōn kamsá t!
Jablag bas apná chale, to kót na puchhe bát.

Yētih nah balawir tatiú wugarah tīr?
Where that great man is not able, there will that poor, weak fellow be able, to do anything?
Wugarah tīr, lit., a handful of cooked-rice, but here means a poor, weak man.
Yētih Rājā Bhoj tatih Gangā Tilī.
Where Rājā Bhoj there Gangā Tilī.
Money is oftentimes the only patent of nobility besides lofty pretensions. Rājā Bhoj was the celebrated sovereign of Ujjain, the great patron of learned men, and to whose era the nine gems or poets are often ascribed; the "Singhāsan battāti" describes his virtues. But Gangā Tilī was an oil-merchant whose only claim to sit in the great Rājā's presence was his great wealth and a little kind-ness once shown by him to Rājā Bhoj's predecessor, Rājā Vikramāditya.

Yētih tūp tatih shukul.
Where sunshine there shade.
"There is compensation in this world even."

Yēts gav zih mēts gav.
More than enough is as dirt (no use to a man).

Yētsan zonānān poni kāmuni, tah tsarōn mardan batal kāmuni.
Many women, little water; and many men, little rice.
It is the custom both among the Muhammedans and the Hindus for the women to fetch the water from the river. If there should be more than one woman in the household, there will probably be frequent quarrelling as to who shall perform this duty, and sometimes both having refused to go for the water, the members of the household will "run short" of this necessary commodity. On the other hand, if there should happen to be more than one husband or man in the house, there will probably be constant wrangling amongst them as to who shall pay the baniya's bill.

"Yī bandah yatshūn tū nā sor. Hū wulo bīlu-yāro lo."
"What the servant wishes cannot be had. Come, O my young friend."
A man proposes but God disposes.

Yī wuth hātīh tī khūt mātīh.
What has gone down the throat has ascended as a charge to keep.
A promise is a charge to keep.

Yī chhukh bīch yut rachhihaṇ, tut diyih ṭuph.
This is a scorpion, as many as cherish it, so many will it sting.
An ungrateful, malicious person.

He is a left-handed, contrary fellow. Say to him, "Go to the river," and he will go to the drain.
Yih chhuh huni—wushkah takh mànsìi gùh hyuh, nah lagàn lòwanas takh nah sùlanas.
He is like dog-barley and buffalo-dung, which are of no use for plastering or burning.
A worthless fellow.

Yih gámas tih màmunis wutshis.
What (happens) to the village also (happens) to the uncle’s calf.
Famine, &c., bad for all; every one suffers more or less.

Yih gav likhit tih gav hu<khit>.
What is written is dried up (no smudging it out).

““What is written.”” One’s fate.
• “Dried up.” An allusion to the native custom of smudging out an error. A Pandit has been sitting by me for the last eighteen months, writing for an hour or so nearly every day. He always used to rub his forefinger over any mistake he had made; and it was with the greatest difficulty that I got him to use a penknife. Of course, if the writing had dried there was no daubing the error out, it either remained, or else another sheet of paper was used.

Yih hakìmas dizih tih konah dizih bëmùras?
Why cannot that be given to the ordinary sick person, which is given to the doctor?
Native doctors are sometimes very strict over their patients concerning their diet. A youth is now squatting on the floor by my side, who has just recovered from a long and sharp attack of fever. “For a whole fortnight,” he says, “the doctor would not allow me to have any thing but rice water and a little hund (Cichorium intybus). But these doctors are not always so particular as to their own diet when they themselves are ill.”

Yih hànzani purnih pëth wuchhïh tih wuchhïh sàwëni tsarnih kini.
Whatever the boat-woman sees in the open that the sàwëni sees through a crack or little hole.
Sàwëni is a pada-nishïn woman, i.e., one who remains behind the curtain and is not seen of men.

Yih kûkanih tih bûyinïh tih.
What is the eldest son’s that also is the youngest son’s.
Show no favouritism in the family.
Yik keezih bukris tih keezih nah pyàwali gov.
What a man eats from rudeness and gruffness that he would not eat from a cow with young.

Muhammedans do not drink the milk of a recently-delivered cow until the fourth day after the birth. Hindús wait till the eleventh day, when the Bráhman comes and the owner of the cow worships and makes presents. If the calf should be born on a Friday, then both Muhammedans and Hindús have special arrangements according to their different religions.

Yik mallah wanih tih gatshih karun;
Yik mallah karih tih gatshih nah karun.
What the Mullá says you must do;
What the Mullá does you must not do.
"Do what I say but not as I do," says the parson.

Yik nah bánaš larih tih láriá pánas?
What will not stick to the pot, will not stick to the body.
Thin rice or weak soup, &c.

Yik pron guyun karih tih karih nah nov gásah?
What old manure-grass can do that new grass can not do.
Wisdom and experience are on the side of age.

"Yik rasas sú căt wasih tih gav halál" píran aki chhúh wunamut.
"What came out with the soup is lawful," a pír said.

Pharisaism.

A certain stranger's goat wandered inside the door of a pír's house. When the pír saw it he said to his wife: "Look here, there's that goat trespassed into our place again. What shall I do? Bring the 'Book of the Law' and I will see what is right to be done." After some little searching he discovered that it was necessary to stand at his door and cry for three times, "Who has lost a goat?"

Accordingly the pír went to the door and cried with a very little voice. "Has any one lost any thing?" This he did three times, and then went back into his house and told his wife to kill the goat at once, as he had shouted three times. He also told her to cook the meat in a separate vessel and separate place, in order that the ordinary cooking vessels and places might not be, perchance, defiled.

When the meat was cooked and ready for serving-up, he ordered his wife to tip the pot a little and let out some of the cooked soup, but to be very careful lest her hand should touch it; for, said he, "there is no sin in drinking the broth, but we must not eat, or even touch, the flesh." However, while the woman was tilting the pot, her hand shook and some meat escaped with the broth. "Never mind, never mind," said the pír, with ill-disguised pleasure, "what has come out with the soup is also legal."
Yih shahruch sawēni khēyiḥ tih khēyiḥ gūmuch gān.
The rich city woman and the village cow fare the same.
The rustic fills his stomach but the city-man feeds his back. Sāwēni is a parda-nishin woman, as all the wives of the wealthier classes are in Kasīmir.

Yih tsēg chhul wundas tih chhuk mih chandas.
What is in your heart is in my pocket.
"I have your secret. Beware!"

Yih zēwiḥ zēwiḥ karizih tih konah karizih zangi zangi?
What you can do with your tongue you can do with your legs (can’t you? then do not be afraid, but go and do it).

Yihumdai rat yimanui mat.
Rub their blood upon their bodies.
A man gives a present; but it costs the receiver as much as he gets.

Yim gai sukhas dus dini.
These things are disturbers of peace.
Riches and honor to an unthankful, unsatisfied man.

Yimah hā-māliḥ chhui wuzmalah tah traṭai gaṭahkūr tah gaqrūyih path kun.
O father, there are lightnings and thick thunderbolts; and mists and thunder are behind.
No end of trouble ahead.

Yimān gabar timan nah bataḥ, yimān bataḥ timan nah gabar.
No food to those who have children, no children to those who have food.

Yimawui mūri imām tah timawui kur samah.
They who killed the imām lament his death.
To do a man an injury and afterwards be sorry for it. Samah—a song of lamentation. An allusion to the mourning of the Shi‘as for the two sons of ‘Ali, Hasan and Hosain. Imām is a Mohammedan priest.

Yindar chhas hātān; tsandar dīshit bataḥ tok; nindar chham nah yīwūn; sindar gayam pīnas.
I spin the wheel and when the moon shines forth I eat my dinner; sleep does not come to me, and my flesh is dried up within me.
A favourite song in time of trouble.
Munshi Bawani Das excommunicated his first wife a mensa et thoro on account of some fault of hers. She used to sit at her wheel every day in an adjoining house singing this song, and one day her husband on hearing it sent for her and took her into his house again.

Yirawani nāv; chirawani dālī.
A boat afloat (before the wind); a wrung garment.
A Kashmiri curse "May you be like," &c.

Yilui tsāngi titā gāsh.
As many lamps so much light.
The more, the merrier.
Tsong—is a little earthen lamp called dipā in Hindūstān.

Yiwawani daulat pōwawūn shīn;
Tsulawani daulat, galawūn shīn.
Wealth comes like the falling snow (i.e., slowly).
Wealth goes like the melting snow (i.e., quickly).
Persian.—Kurāza, kurāza biyāyad mukhust
Rubāyad azo chānki gardad durust.

Yizmanbāi dārih kini wuchhtai,
Pānah ehkō buchh tai kas kyah dik?
O mother of the wedding-party, look out of the window.
You yourself appear hungry, to whom will you give?
A meagre, wedding-feast, or dinner.

Yupis skup dakhah.
Like trying to keep back the water-floods with a fan.
Large expenses and small income.
Skup is a small fan used for cleaning grain.

Yūri kun rēh tūri kun tēkar.
Where the flame there the pot.
Money commands everything.
This is only the last line of a verse of poetry concerning the rich man:
Asanwālis chhēh āsanach tēh;
Wath pēth mynilus kentsūh khēh;
Tsāngiy tshuminas yatī tēh;
Yūri kun tēkar tūri kun rēh.
A wealthy man has the pride of wealth;
If any one meets him on the way it is eat something (O friend).
Then the mat is spread and he is asked to "sit down."
Where the pot is there the flame will be also.
Yus akhúh khöyih tah chéyih tah kánuih diyuh, suh chhúh ján tasandih, khutah, yus auih tah janá karih.

He who eats and drinks and gives to another is better than he who brings and puts together.

Yus dandav nishih gav suh gav bandaw nishuh.
What went from the teeth went also from the body.
The value of good teeth.

Yus gav Lás suh zah nah áv,
Áv aí tas nah zah wáv.
He who went to Lhassa (Tibet) never returned.
If he did come back then he was a rich man for ever.

Yus gelih paras, tas gatshih garas.
He who slanders a stranger, will be slandered in his own house.

Yus khöyih harah han tah tarah han, tas chhúi suët suët zarah han;
Yus khöyih hókah han tah wugarah han suh chhúi dugarah han hyuh.
He who eats cream and spices and other rich things, will always have sickness.

He who eats unstrained rice and vegetables is like a Dugra.

Dugra—"A mixed race, (descended from a Rájpút father and low-caste mother) of reputation in the Panjáb. The reigning family of Kashmir is of this tribe Its members speak of themselves as Rájpúts. The Dugra are land-holders and cultivators."—"Sherrin's Hindú Tribes and Castes."

Yus mazah phalis suí mazah gurnas.
What flavour there is to the grape there will be to the whole cluster.

A sample.

Yus nah dónas pöwih suh konah röwih pönas?
He who cannot (afford even) to light a fire, why will he not adorn himself?
"He has got all he is worth upon his back."

Yus nah gabah phaših suh dapiá "Babah."
Will that boy say "Father" who did not burst the womb (i.e., who was not born to me)?
An adopted child.
Yus pherih suh kerih.
Yus ajih suh gajih.
He who turns (from his promise let him fall) into a well.
He who (fulfils only) half his promise (let him fall) into a furnace.
Striking hands with his creditor the debtor will quote these words.

Yus phul suh phul gunchai.
What bloomed, bloomed when it was in the bud.
The child is father of the man.

Yus yas xanik suj tas manik.
He will obey him whom he knows.
"One of themselves" would have more influence.

Yus yuth karih suh tyuth surih.
Yus yuth xawih suh tyuth lonih.
As he does, so will he receive;
As he sows, so will he reap.
Hindustánī—Jaisū doge waisū pādoge.

Yúsuf Jáh! wutsh rat.
O, Yúsuf Já! take hold of the calf.
A dependent character.
A sharp fellow would fix the calf under one arm and milk the cow, but Yúsuf wanted another man to hold it. Cows in India always have their calves by them when they are being milked.
Yúsuf Já is a Muhammedan Hindustánī name. Yúsuf is from the Arabic for Joseph, and Já is by way of respect and means lord!
master! sir!

Yusú khéyih ser sui sapunih ser.
He who eats a ser (i.e., lbs. 2 English) will be satisfied.
Ser is the Kashmíri and Hindustánī word for a weight=2 lbs
English; it is also the Persian word for satisfied.

Yusú ruchhum tasi nish rachhtam Khudáyo.
O God, preserve me from him whom I cherished.
An ungrateful protege, offspring, &c.

Yusú ruchhum qìman athan, sui yuván netarrah kathan.
He whom I brought-up with these hands is coming to me with words of marriage.
Money and position frequently shake hands.
Yut guris yiyih ratahah wag tyut pakabharubar.
The horse will go according as he is held by the bridle.

Yut kur tami mih tyut karas buh tih.
As he did to me so will I do to him.
Lex talionis.

Yut wirih tak dik tyút chhus yow on.
As much as you cut the willow so much will it grow strong.

Yut wustād titi tsāt āsan.
As (is) the teacher so will the scholars be.

Yutōyi nah hakim ak zah mór karih tutān sapanih nah hakim.
Until the physician has killed one or two he is not a physician.

Yutān nah ranj tuli h tutān labih nah ganj.
Until a man takes trouble he does not get treasure.
Persian.—Tā ranj na kasht ganj na yābī.
No pains, no gains.

Yutān puz pazih tutān ālam dazih.
Until the truth appears the world will burn (with auger).
Let them light it out.

Yutān tshūt pilan karih tutān zyūth yad barih.
While the short man is reaching up to a place, the tall man fills his stomach.
To which the short man replied:

Yutān zyūth jāi tshāndih tutān tshūt nindar karih.
While the tall man is seeking for a place wherein to repose, the short man sleeps.

Yutā zojah tyutā suwah.
As I earn so will I sow.
Dress according to position.
Z

Zubán chhōh shumsher.
The tongue is a sword.
Tongue is a sharp sword.”—Psalm lvii. 4.

Zachan pachah phur.
To turn and mend old clothes.
Making an old coat look new.

Zūgun tāh zuwun, tshāndun tāh melun.
Expect and live, seek and find.

Zah thazah tāh gūdah dazah.
Two persons high (-minded) and the fishes burnt.
Somebody in the house must bend, or the work will not be done.

Zainah Kadalah pēthah thuk gayih ho!
The spittle has gone from Zaina Kadal!

A man came from India to see Kashmir and enquire about the inhabitants. In the course of his ramblings he went and stood on the fourth bridge and spat into the river; and then looked at the spot where his spittle had fallen, and said, “Where has it gone? Where has it gone?” The passers-by asked the meaning of this. He did not reply, but continued saying, “Where has it gone?” More people crowded around, until at last a vast assembly had gathered, and there was great danger lest the bridge should break. Then he told them that his spittle had gone, and the crowd scattered; and the man from India went back to his own countrymen and told them what stupid people those Kashmiris were.

Zaina Kadal, the fourth of the seven bridges spanning that part of the river Jhelum, which flows through Srinagar, and forming the principal means of inter-communication between the two sides of the city, is the principal thoroughfare in Srinagar. It is said that whatever news there may be it will certainly be known some time or other during the day on Zaina Kadal. There is a story illustrative of this:—

Āzād Khán (1763 A. D.) was a most tyrannical ruler. Even in his own palace he was a very hard master. One of his wives was about to be delivered of a child; just before her confinement he went to her lying-in room and said, “If it is a boy that be born, I will give you many presents; but if it should be a girl, I will slay both you and the child." A girl was born, and as soon as the king heard of it he slew his wife and threw the infant into the fire-place. Uneasy as to what report might be spread concerning this dastard act, he sent his servant to Zaina Kadal to see whether the people had got wind of it, and if possible the report was to be traced and the originators seized. The servant went and in a little while four or five persons were seized, and the report traced back to one man. This man was carried before the king, who asked him how he had obtained the news. The man replied, "I saw in a dream Shah Hamadán (cf. note to 'Ayas wate,' &c.), or one like unto him, coming to me and saying that such was the case in the king's house. Accordingly I told the people, whom I met, of my strange vision, and on Zaina Kadal there was quite a little company of strangers to whom I related my strange experience." "True," said the king, "Zaina Kadal's news is correct concerning the ruler also." Then going at once to the bridge he had all the houses, which Zainúl-Abadin had erected on either side of it, destroyed, lest they should prove dangerous treasuries of scandal.

Even now authorities are afraid of the bridge, and the police have special orders to prevent any gatherings there (?)

Zulih surinam tah kánih súrinam.
It goes off from my fingers, but rolls on in to the hall.

The father loses but the son gains; it remains in the family. Sung by the women dozens of times in succession very often, as they sit at the spinning-wheel.

Zán aí dúsí gúm tatih þíbah ládih púm.
If the sister-in-law should be in a village, thence even she will send reproaches.

Few enemies go so far as that they out-distance their enmity.
Zán is the wife's husband's sister. She is generally a great stumbling-block to the wife's happiness.

Zamatur aí hangas manz ruchhziün tatih mandahekhhánz rúngaz manz.
If a son-in-law be brought up in the best way, and with the greatest attention possible, still he will put you to shame in the assembly (i.e., he will not respect or love you).

Hangas manz, lit. in, the centre of the head or turban, the place of security and honour.

Zamatur gav pématur.
A son-in-law is a giver of reproach and curses.

Zamín ekhài dúsí dúsí sun.
Land is like beaten gold.
Zán chhēh jahán.
Acquaintance is the world.

Zán nah tah pachhán nah, tah “Khálah jí salím!”
Nor known, nor recognised, and “Good morning, uncle.”
Said of a stranger claiming friendship or relationship.
Marwari.—Jón na pakhán, “Khálá bár salám!”

Zánai nah kaun nah króm nah nám.
I will not know your sect or class or name.
Refusal to inter-marry.

Zanánah chhēh prasanih wizih taubah karán, prasit chhēh bēyih wótán tutuí.
A woman in the hour of travail repents, but when she is delivered of the child she again arrives at the same state (of lying, &c.)

Zanánah gayí khoran hund pulahor ak trov tah byōk tshun.
A wife is like the grass shoe on one’s feet—one is left and another is put on (i.e., a wife easily got rid of, if she should prove disagreeable).

Zanánih akis parutshuk rōtsar chhuyih. Dungan “Kénh nah. Shuris ám kut.”
It was asked of a woman “Are you well?” She replied, “No, not at all. The child can just walk.”
A mother’s anxieties are increased by her child being able to toddle about and get into mischief.

Zanánih hund asun chhúi mardás manzimyor.
A woman’s laugh is a go-between herself and the man.
Manzimyor. Match-makers, called Chutucks or Cháhkís down in Bengal. As a rule these people are utterly without principle, vide “Hindús as they are,” by Bose, Ch. v.

Zanánih hund yáwun gandun tah chháwun; Wethik hund yáwun wubalíwun; wírih hund yáwun tak dáwun; mardah sund yáwun dan.
A woman’s beauty is her dress and jewels; the river derives beauty from its waves; the willow gets beauty from lopping; and a man’s beauty is his wealth.
Weth, the river Jhelum in its course through Kashmir. Hindú priests call it Vedastá.
Wir, the white willow. If a big tree, the top branches are lopped every year; if a small tree then it is lopped after three years. During the winter the leaves of this tree are stored up as fodder for oxen and sheep and goats.

Zangah riði un tah zèwih rādi nyuw
The runner brought it, but the gambler took it away.
The talker often gets the praise due to the worker.

Zangih yiwán tsund tah nar dūrān, narih yiwán tsund tah zang dūrān.
If the hand gets hurt we put out a leg, and if the leg gets hurt we put forth a hand.
An alternative is generally at hand in time of trouble.

Zūnit tah mōnit karun.
He knew (his work), attended to it, and did it.
A good, honest workman.

Zari būz baẖih wahari zīk Badshāh mud.
The deaf man heard twelve years afterwards that Badshāh was dead.
A man with no news.
Badshāh, great king, a name given to Zainu’ll-Ābadīn, the eighth and greatest of the Muhammedan rulers of Kashmir.

Zari sunz surunvi.
The sound of a flute to a deaf man.
An incomprehensible tale or remark.

Zāris wunuk, "Moj, ħā, muī." Dupunak, "Yapāri anton."
Some person said to the gambler, "Oh! your mother has died." He replied, "Bring her by this way."
The gambler was so engrossed in the game that he could not leave it, even to bury his mother’s body.

Zat jilawiḥ wazah guris tah mēhmānah shuris Rahmānah nov.
A piece of ragged cloth as a bridle is dignity to a horse, and Rahmāna is a name for a poor boy.
The would-be gentleman.

* Mēhmān, first meaning is a guest, hence the poor orphan, who is always somebody’s guest, has come to be so called, and thus the word frequently means any poor person.
Rahmán is one of the greatest names that can be given to a Muhammadan. It means compassionate, and is the first in the list of the ninety-nine names of God.

Zênun gatsihîh bharah sandi pâth tah khyun gatsihîh narâh sandi pâth.
One must work like an ass, but eat his dinner like a man.

Zethën narên mod.
Honour is given to long sleeves.

"And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing."

One day Shekh Nûr-ud-dîn went to a wedding feast with nothing but his ragged faqir dress on, and the consequence was that the people would not receive him. He returned quickly to his abode, and changed his ragged garment for some new and costly clothes, and went again to the feast. This time he was received with great honour. He first quoted the above proverb at the dinner.

Zëv chhôm karân lukh lukh; luk chhim tshanân thuk thuk.
My tongues does talk, talk; the people do spit, spit upon me.
A man of many words is despised.

Zëwui chhêh márân tah zëwui chhêh tânân.
The tongue kills and the tongue saves.

Zëi chheh hîi.
Pay for work done is like jasmine.
Sweet are the fruits of labour.

Zindah nah sûr nah sás tah marît atlâs.
Alive—neither dust nor ashes, but dead—satin.
Undutiful offspring.
Hindustani.—Jîte na pûchhe mue dhâr dhâr pîte.

Zorâh, zorâh nashih zû, tah wàrah, wàrah nashih koh.
From "zorâh zorâh" life wears out, but from "wàrah wàrah" the mountain wears away.

Zorâh zorâh, "Go on, work man," said to a man working in a casual, listless fashion.

Wàrah, wàrah. "Carefully, not so fast," said to a man working in a quick, reckless way.

Zû gav tsângi rêh, tilah hân gatshias ûsuni.
Life is like the flame of a lamp; it needs a little oil now and again.
Urur tah jahon ur.
The spirit healthy and the world healthy.
    Health is everything.

Zu zewih tah ryuiz layih tah adah paurik shih'r.
Zu will be born and will shoot and will receive his prey.
    Building castles in the air.

Zuli gayi zih kulih gayi.
He became drowsy and it fell into the river.

Carolusness is ruination.
    A faqir was sitting by the fire-place cooking his dinner as the boat was being towed along. Owing to the great heat he became very drowsy, and so bending his head, he began to sleep. Suddenly the boat struck the bank and the plate of rice and meat tumbled off the fire into the river.

Zuwal bogun zahal du; yih kusah myani ugah-bai?
Lousey mistress, ragged nurse; which is my mistress?
    General reply of a female servant; when blamed by her mistress because of her dirty appearance.

Zuwalik hund gat shih khyun tah zewalih hund nai.
It is better to eat with a dirty-headed woman than with a garrulous woman.